Aug 29, 1890, 5 - H L Davis, familiarly known to old-timers as '12-foot Davis', arrived in Victoria. Has been continuously engaged in mining since 1859 and has during that time prospected on every ck in Cariboo, at Big Bend, Cassiar and lately in Peace Rv country. Name given him from the fact that during the early Cariboo days, when a # of claims were yielding enormous returns, he discovered that 2 of the best of them lying side by side had between them 12' more than the law allowed. He secured the 12', and took out over $1,000 for every ft.

Died Oct 16, 1890 at Victoria, BC, Thomas Gorrie, 73, came to Victoria in 1858. N/o Edinburgh, Sct. Was stricken with gold fever, and in 1849 went to Australia; but, believing that there were bigger 'strikes' to be made in CA, packed up and went to that country. He went in on his 'grub stake,' and in other ways; but being disinclined to undergo the uncertainties and privations of a miner's lot, he started a fancy and toy store in San Francisco, which he abandoned to come to Victoria, where he went into the same line of trade. His was the 1st toy shop north of San Francisco, he having occupied the same premises on Fort street ever since his establishment. Like many of his fellow Scots, he was great in picnics and festivities, in which he took a genuine delight. Gorrie was the only remaining charter member of Caledonian Society.

Dec 16, 1890, 2 - Johnson st ravines - To the Editor: Mr Mayor Grant and a few of his aldermanic luminaries, at the last regular meeting of the city council, indulged without any reasonable cause in low and coarse language against myself, holding me up to the public as a person not fit to live in the pure atmosphere of those worthy men. If I had, however, been merely personally abused, I might have consented myself by informing those gentlemen that their vile tongues were no scandal where they were known; but, as their disgraceful attack on me was intended to hide from the public their own abuse of a public trust, I feel that it is my duty to show, through your favor, what an unworthy body of men now fill the civic chairs. It is the statutory duty of the corporation to abate all nuisances within the city. Now the Johnson street ravine has been a horrid nuisance for many years - a horrid nuisance even under the very noses of Mayor Grant and his council, and suffered to be so without their voluntarily trying to exercise their prerogative to abate it.

It is well known that I have been an owner of city lots 544 and 533 since 1862, and that lot 533 has been traversed for some years by filthy water flowing from an area of about 130 acres. Desiring to make improvements on that lot, I, in 1885, with others, pointed out to the corporation the filthy condition of the Johnson street ravine, and requested them to stop filthy water from flowing into and through it. In 1887 I again requested the corporation to abate that nuisance. But the mayor and council did not abate it. On the contrary, they allowed the ravine to become, if anything, a still greater nuisance. In April, 1888, finding that the corporation would not abate the nuisance, I applied, through my counsel, Mr Drake, for an injunction to restrain the corporation from permitting filthy water from flowing across my property, which was granted.

That the public may understand the nature of this horrid nuisance of which I then complained, I make the following extracts from the affidavits of two well known medical men, who were entirely disinterested:

Dr E B C Hanington, sworn, April 24, 1888, said:

"I found the said ravine to be uncovered from Bunster's brewery (near the corner of Johnson and Douglas streets) to the harbor, except where it passes under Douglas, Broad, Government and Store streets through culverts. There are a great many privies, urinals and sinks that empty into the said ravine, besides stables. There is also a system of city sewers and drains that empty into the said ravine, and I have been informed that the stench pipes from the Clarence and St Nichola hotel conduct the contents of the slops, water closets and urinals into the said ravine. The said ravine appears to have been flumed at one time, and the casing has become rotten, and in many places the boards have fallen into the ravine, and the bed of the said ravine is otherwise obstructed by numerous stones, sticks, old tin and rubbish, causing an accumulation of excrement, vivisection [?] and putrefying garbage along the course of the said ravine so far as exposed and open to view as aforesaid. The polluted water, loaded with impurities before mentioned, crosses the lot, which I have been informed, belongs to Mr DeCosmos, and there are above and below there gives off a most disagreeable stench and noxious vapors injurious to health."

The affidavit of Dr W Jackson, late Dominion quarantine officer, sworn Apr 23, 1888, is the same throughout as that made by Dr Hanington, and concludes by saying that the filthy water "gives off a most offensive smell and noxious vapors injurious to health."

In July, 1888, as a consequence the corporation was authorized by the ratepayers to borrow by bylaw $30,000 to construct Johnson street sewer and laterals to carry off the filthy water that usually flowed into and through the ravine. But the mayor and council have shirked their duty by not turning the whole of the filthy water into the sewer; and so, notwithstanding the Johnson street sewer was built at a cost of $30,000 to the ratepayers, the Johnson street ravine still continues to be a public nuisance, dangerous to the public health. After allowing the corporation the fullest time to abate the nuisance, I had again to have recourse to the court in October last to get further authority to compel it. So application was made through my counsel to the Chief Justice, who made the injunction a continuing one, and now awaits trial.

This last application to the court was made upon affidavit, of which the two following speak distinctly as to the condition of Johnson street ravine in September, 1890 - but a few weeks ago: John Meston, affidavit, sworn September 23, 1890:

1. "That my factory and place of business in the city of Victoria is on Broad street, in the said city, in close proximity to the so-called Johnson Street ravine.

2. The said ravine contains water constantly running, most impure in character, giving off most offensive stinks.

3. About three weeks since I became ill and was informed by my medical attendant that I had had a very narrow escape from typhoid fever, and that the offensive stinks referred to were the direct cause of my illness.

4. I employ eight men in my said business of carriage builder, and the men in my employment are frequently obliged to quit work owing to illness caused by the stink arising from the deposit of sewage in the said ravine."

Opposite to Mr Meston's factory resides Mrs Sarah McDonald, who in her affidavit, sworn September 23, 1890, says:

1. "That I am the wife of Charles Henry McDonald and reside on Broad street, in the said city, at No 70, in the said street, situated on Lot 658 in the said city.

2. That so-called Johnson Street ravine traverse, the street near the southern boundary of said lot, and passes within a few feet of the lot from one end to the other.
3. The evil odors arising from the said ravine are not only detrimental to our comfort, but injurious to health. So bad is the smell that I cannot open the windows in the southern side of the house for fear of illness, and because of the abominable stench that sometimes arises from the said ravine. Upon one occasion, some two or three weeks since, after opening one of the windows on the side of the house near the ravine, I was seized with illness, and I nearly fainted from the effects of the vile smell proceeding from the ravine. There is and has been all summer a quantity of dirty water or sewage running in the said ravine.”

I now submit, sir, the above statement to the public, not doubting that their conclusion, after reading it, will not justify Mr John Grant, mayor, and his aldermanic claquers [?] in indulging in abuse to cover their own criminal neglect of public duty. A DeCosmos...

A friend named Gallagher, who has been working with him, handling salmon during the past wk, says that he believed that he had been in a trance 2 or 3 times on shipboard. This led several of his comrades to believe, yesterday, that Anderson might not yet be dead, even though the Drs said so, and the body was growing cold and stiff. A Colonist reporter, during the day, applied the German test to the body, touched it with a lighted match, and was surprised to see a blister appear. Died Jan 22, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Robert Smith, 70, born at Ireland, he came here during the 1st rush to the gold mines. He represented Yale in the old BC legislature, having been a member of the delegation which discussed Confederation with Canada at the Yale convention. An apt illustration of the truth of the old lines 'Rattle his bones, over the stones, he's only a pauper whom nobody owns,' was evidenced in the case of late 'Bob' Smith, builder of Cariboo road, and formerly representative of Yale. He died in hospital, of which he had for several years been an inmate and was buried it is said, in a rough pine coffin, at the expense of the city, unwept and without a friend to see his remains deposited. *

Died Mar 14, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Frank Campbell, 60, n/o County Tyrone, Ire [1832], but when a child came to US with parents, arriving in Philadelphia in 1834. In 1843 the family moved to Iowa, where several of his family still reside. Aged 20 he was seized with a desire to visit CA, and with a few comrades started for the new El Dorado, coming to the coast by way of Panama. In after years he often related how he landed in San Francisco, with hardly a dollar in his pockets, but with a youthful ardor to make his fortune... His dreams were not realized, and after varying success he made up his mind to join the rush to Fraser River. The day before he sailed he was married to Margaret Morrow, of Cavan, Ireland, and they landed in Victoria Aug 3, 1858... After a few week's stay they went to Westminster, then Langley, where they spent their 1st winter in BC. In Feb, 1859, in company with C McK Smith [Amor de Cosmos' brother], he went to Pitt River to hunt for water power for a sawmill. Not finding it they returned to Langley, and on Apr 4 he made a start for Bridge River mines... Not finding gold in paying quantities he returned to Langley, in Jul he and S P Moody started for San Juan Island, but the mine there proved a myth, so he came to Victoria, where he was joined by his wife. He worked as a carpenter, but soon gave it up to start a general store on Johnson street, just below Gilmore & McCandless are now located. He had not been in business long when the Leech River excitement broke out, and leaving his store in his wife's charge, he started for the new mines. These mines also failed and when he came back he disposed of his Johnson street store, and established The Corner, where, as editor of the bulletin, he soon acquired one of the best known names in BC. For nearly 25 years, winter and summer he was to be found behind his little counter chronicling the day's doings, and gradually making the Adelphi Corner a household word. It would be safe to say not another man in BC would have made such a success of that well known corner. He soon became known as 'Genial' Frank Campbell, and few men deserved the title better. His home life was always the happiest. The 1st break in his life occurred in Dec, 1889, when his beloved and respected wife passed away, deeply mourned by all who knew her. Her death was a severe blow and from that time he was a changed man. He gradually left the business at the Corner to his only son Frank, and for some months past seldom left his residence. He leaves son Frank and 3 daughters, Mrs Aeneas McDonald, Misses Clara and Martha. Charter member of Knights of Pythias and United Workmen, and carried insurance policies of nearly $10,000. Hundreds of friends visited the family residence to obtain a last view of the familiar face... Long before the funeral the neighborhood was crowded with friends, and when the procession formed and the casket was placed in the hearse, some 60 vehicles were in line, while hundreds followed on foot... At the cemetery the Knights in sorrowful silence marched past the grave, dropping bay leaves into the grave as they filed past. Pallbearers: Mayor Grant, Alderman A J Smith, Captain Urquhart, Gordon Grant, E A McQuade, J B McDowell, M C Brown and Charles Lombard (all intimate acquaintances of deceased). KofP band returned to the city in silence, instead of marching to the sound of lively music. The new departure was well spoken of by many. C 037 E

Died Apr, 1891 at Victoria, BC, John George Taylor, 67, one of the last of the Argonauts. N/o Dundalk, Ireland, he came to US in early life and joined New York police force, of which he was regarded as being a very active and efficient member. In 1849, with the early goldseekers he left for CA, but only remained there for 2 years, his expectations not having been realized. In 1851 he left for Australia, where he experienced adventures of a most startling character, which he was accustomed to recall to his friends in the most graphic and thrilling terms. After 7 years there, he came to Victoria. His 1st employment here was upon the police force, which he continued until 1863. During those 5 years he proved himself to be a most efficient officer, both as a detective and member of the ordinary force. He had much to do with breaking up the notorious Sprague gang of burglars, which he caused to be disbanded. For 2 years, 1872 to 1875 he occupied a seat at city council. During his somewhat checkered career he accumulated a fortune of about $30,000, most of which, it is reported, has been left to the Protestant Orphan's Home. Member of IOOF, he leaves a brother in the East, 2 sisters in Ireland. Pallbearers: John Stevens, W Sommerville, A G Day, D Dale, J M Reid, C Christensen. Police force were present in a body for the funeral, the hearse was filled with floral tributes, among them being an anchor, the gift of the brigade. Jun 5, 1891, 5 - For some months Hugh O'Neill of Victoria, has been making inquiries as to the whereabouts of the remains of John W Dissette, who died on San Juan Island, in 1858, he at that time being a telegraph operator there. It is known that the body was interred in the old cemetery, but there was nothing to mark the spot, and the family, some of whom reside in Indianapolis, desired to give it a permanent resting place, marked by some monument, in Ross Bay. It was a mere matter of accident that the discovery was made. O'Neill happened to remark, in the house of an acquaintance, upon his mission, the head of the family withdrew, but returning in a few moments said, 'Why, he was buried alongside my son, and I can show you where he lies. I distinctly recollect all the circumstances.' Thus the mystery was solved.

Work/Jul 15, 1891, 3 - Killed almost instantly Jul 14, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Charles Bartley, n/o Caradoc Twp, Middlesex Co, ON, aged 51, a working carpenter. Working on new Jewell Blk, crnr/o Yates/Douglas sts, he was engaged w/3 or 4 others in removing a temporary partition, close to the elevator well, on the 4th floor. In order to expedite matters, he seized a piece of scantling, and was using it as a battering ram, when the end was struck by the descending elevator, and he fell backward, striking his head on the sharp corner of a plank. His companions saw him fall, but did not think he was seriously hurt. Not seeing him rise, they went to him, lifted him and dashed water in his face, thinking he was stunned. A doctor was sent for and a glass of brandy procured. Neither availed anything, for in a few minutes he was dead. Deceased had sent for his wife and family from London, ON. His son came over from Vancouver to take charge of the remains. Pallbearers: John Trimble, John Lewis, Angus McDonald, John Walmsley. Jul 26, 5 - subscription raised to pay for funeral, the balance sent to his widow in ON. H 064 E 20

Jul 15, 1891, 3 - Pioneer Society... Robert Ridley takes care of Pioneer Hall, been here since 1858... left Eng in 1837, sailing on a vessel of which his father was Master. Bound for Australia, afterwards wrecked on CA coast May 10, 1838, without loss of life. He then went upon a Spanish vessel engaged in the opium trade in East Indies, and when the English declared war against China he entered their navy. When the war was over he returned to CA before there were 50 houses in San Francisco. Ridley sailed a vessel of his own upon the coast until the war broke out between US and Mex, when he piloted the NY volunteers from Monterey to La Paz, Mexico, and subsequently shipped as a pilot in US Navy. Soon after peace was declared in 1848, gold was discovered in CA, and he subsequently went to mining. He mined a great deal, but lost in the long run.

In 1858 he came to Victoria during the gold excitement, when there were 5,000 tents pitched here. He went to Fraser River, mined a while and then came back, and afterwards prospected all over BC, following up all mining excitements and engaged in a vain pursuit for wealth. At times he was fairly well to do, and other times flat broke.

In 1861, Ridley and 4 companions, all of them old sailors, organized and fitted out an expedition for the Fraser River headwaters. The party started out in 20 canoes, and after a troublesome trip, full of hardships and perils, the little party, which had dwindled down to 2 canoes, reached their goal. Prospecting was continued up the streams, gold all the time getting coarser and coarser and prospects brighter and brighter, until their provisions were gone and they were faced with starvation. They made their way slowly back on foot, reaching home after a tedious trip, and leaving behind them a district - the Cariboo - which has since turned out many millions. In 1871 he started up the Skeena River to the rich mines that had been discovered there, but after indifferent success he started back to Victoria in fall of 1872. He joined a party and started down the Skeena in a canoe. While passing through the rapids the craft was swamped and 3 out of the 8 were drowned losing all their gold, furs and outfit. After a long and wearisome journey Ridley reached Port Essington barefooted, bareheaded and coatless. He was fortunate to find there Morris Moss and other old friends, who replenished his wardrobe, and he took passage to Victoria, with Captain Lewis. He reached home penniless and an old man, whose prospecting days were over, and finally settled down to quietly live out his life among friends and civilization. He was employed on the Government dredger, but is now caretaker of the Pioneer Society rooms. He was present when the British men-of-war issued the famous declaration to China, and compelled that nation to open its ports to civilization. [G 019 W 08 - Dec 7, 1898]

Sep 5, 1891, 1 - Drowned Sep 4 in the Inner Harbour, Victoria, BC, Captain Robert 'Bob' Dexter, 54, s/o well-to-do farmer in Cambridgeshire, England. He came to Victoria in 1858, and shortly afterwards followed the army of gold seekers to the Fraser River, and then to Cariboo. He was part owner of the Barker claim in 1862, and shared the ownership of Foster Campbell with Superintendent H W Sheppard from 1863 to 1871. He was also one of the principal prospectors and owners of the Waverley bedrock tunnel, on Grouse Creek, which is still running. While he made plenty of money in these mines, he was so enthusiastic a prospector that it all went as quickly as it came.

In 1872 he returned to Victoria, and, in early life, having gained a practical education as a seaman - having risen to the rank of mate on the Black Wall liners - obtained employment on the government dredge. For a time he was in charge of work on the Esquimalt cofferdam, on the completion of which work he returned to his old love, the dredge, which he has commanded for 12 years. BC Pioneer funeral. Coroners jury: Frederick Carne, William Memsie, James Pope, Arthur Holmes, W J Tippen, Joseph Gosnell. Accidental drowning. Sep 6, 8 - Chief Sheppard wired to another of their old Cariboo companions, Joe Denny, of Barkerville, to 'put the flags at half-mast, Bob Dexter's dead.' He received a reply yesterday: 'Joe Denny died at noon.' Thus 2 veteran miners and pioneers bade goodbye to the scenes of their struggles and hardships almost at the same hour. Denny was as well known as Dexter to all old Caribooites; he organized the Barkerville fire department and was chief from the time of its institution to his death. Sep 18, 1891, 2 - Died Sep 17 at Victoria, BC, John Kurtz, 59, a pioneer and friend of all, n/o Philadelphia, PA, of German parents. He was a man of unsurpassed geniality and rare kindness of heart, and, while none was fonder of a good practical joke or more ready for one, his humour found expression only in words and actions which entertained all and displeased no one. He started life as a druggist's apprentice, and in 1849 he made his way to CA. At San Francisco he embarked in the tobacco business, in partnership with a man named Drinkhouse. The business was a profitable one, and he soon became recognized as a leader in every movement for public good. He was one of the organizers of the CA State militia, in which he held the rank of Captain, and also of the San Francisco fire department. He was a member, and an outspoken one, of the vigilance committee of 1856, which hanged and drove out the gamblers and roughs who had usurped the civic government... In 1858, when the great wave of miners and prospectors swept up the Fraser River to Yale, Kurtz was one of the company, and, in the same year, Kurtz & Co entered into business at Yale. For a time he had for a partner there, Hugh Nelson, another pioneer merchant... In 1861 Kurtz was instrumental in organizing, and became secretary of, the Yale Steamboat Co, which built Fort Yale in Victoria harbour, and established a regular service up the Fraser to Yale, when Hope had previously been recognized as the head of steam navigation. For his services, he was presented with a handsome gold watch, a souvenir he treasured as one of his most valued possessions. The boat on its 3rd trip exploded, and many lives were lost.

In 1862 he again made CA his home, but only for a few months, Cariboo next claiming his attention. He was owner of the famous Point claim on Williams Creek, in which he made a large sum of money. With this fortune he once more returned to CA, but the spirit of adventure was strong in him, and he next came prominently before BC as the organizer of Lane & Kurtz Mining Co, formed for the purpose of working the meadows at the mouth of Williams Creek, where were popularly supposed to be enormously rich in alluvial deposits. Giant pumps and other massive machinery were introduced at an expense of hundreds of thousands, but the water came in so quickly that operations had to be abandoned, after a fortune had been spent. From Cariboo, Kurtz went to the Nevada silver region, then an unknown land, where he at one time was the owner of mining property worth several millions.

One more turning to CA, this pioneer of CA, BC and NV, opened a real estate office, which he disposed of to advantage 14 years ago. He then made Victoria his home, establishing the 1st white labour cigar manufactory in BC of which he remained proprietor until his death.

A keen and energetic student, he was possessed of a wide and liberal education. In science he was also at home, and few were better informed on botany or mineralogy.

He remained an American citizen until his death, and while a Mason in good standing, chose to maintain his connection with the pioneer lodge of San Francisco. He was also a founder and officer of Pioneer Society. He leaves a widow, son and 3 daughters [2 of them - Annie J and Walter], all residents at CA. Died Sep 21, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Alfred Alexander Green, 58, connected with Wells, Fargo & Co since 1873, and with banking institution of Gareche, Green & Co. N/o Ixworth, Suffolk, England in 1833. For a few years he studied medicine under his father, but in 1860, during an Australia gold craze, he left his home for that country to seek his fortune. He amassed considerable capital at the goldfields, but was attracted to CA some years afterwards. Getting tired of the diggings he went to Nevada, where he joined Wells, Fargo Express Co. Having spent a short time in San Francisco he went home on a visit, and in England, married Mrs Green [Theophia], having 6 children, who, today, mourn the loss of an affectionate father.

In 1873 he returned from England, and, entered into partnership with late Francis Gareche. Mason, founder and President of Protestant Orphans' Home, prominent in several benevolent societies. Marine/Died Sep 27, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Capt James Stephens, n/o Glasgow, Sct, aged 46, a well known seal hunter and Master Mariner. Sep 29, 1 - 'Capt Jim', as he was popularly known by seafaring men and old-timers.. The death was so altogether unexpected, and it was necessary to raise a subscription to defray funeral expenses, enquiries were instituted as to the cause of death and means he possessed with anything but satisfactory results. Deceased was the possessor of at least $200 a few days previously, as he was paid off from schr City of San Diego [1st Officer]. A shipmate, Francis Curran, alleges that deceased had a good round sum in hand before pay day, and is at a loss to know how the money disappeared... 'In behalf of the late Capt we wish to thank the general public of Vitoria, and the seafaring men especially, for their kind contributions towards the expense of the funeral. Everywhere that application was made subscriptions were generously given. In one instance only was it refused, and that where it should have been most generous. The late Capt was loved and respected by all who knew him, and his sudden death was a cause of much sorrow and regret among his many friends. He leaves a family in Glasgow, and an effort will be made to relieve them from want, now that the husband and father is laid to rest so far from them. Thanking the people of Victoria for their kind contributions, and the Capt's many friends for their help in the matter, we remain, George F French/Francis Curran.' He was paid off Sep 15, and what he did with his money I don't know. He had been drinking a little, but he could not have spent all that way - he was not a man of that sort. He said he was robbed, and I believe it. He was at the Standard theatre and he he had not his money afterwards. He was not 24 hrs in the hospital when he died. I believe he must have been drugged.' [read Sep 29...]; Sep 30, 5. Oct 14, 1. Police/BkHx/Died Oct 18, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Honourable Augustus Frederick Pemberton, 83, n/o Dublin, Ire, one of the most striking figures of Victoria's early history. BC was on the threshold of a new and enlarged career brought on by the gold discoveries of 1858. The government required a firm and wise hand to control the multitudes which were suddenly landed in our midst. N/o Dublin, youngest son of a stipendiary magistrate, educated for the bar, he filled for several years an office in Dublin Castle. He came to this colony in Dec, 1855, with a view to devoting himself to agriculture. But a more important career awaited him. In 1858 he was commissioned by Governor Douglas to organize a body of police, and in his two-fold capacity of commissioner and magistrate he was for several years the prefect of the city, which up to that time had depended for the preservation of its peace on a single constable. To Mr Pemberton's conduct and prudence was mainly due the good order which obtained when the city was filled with men who, to the number of some 10,000, were waiting for the fall of the Fraser River to proceed in quest of the gold the fame of which had attracted them to these shores. It is not too much to say that, next to Governor Douglas, there is no man to whom the country is more indebted for starting on a law-abiding career than to the late honourable gentleman. He, as member of Executive Council, retired with the well-earned title of Honourable and a pension for life on the confederation of the colony with the Dominion. He also filled the office of County Court judge for a period, and afterwards that of stipendiary magistrate. He leaves a son, Chartres Cecil, and a daughter, Evaline.

Of the courage and coolness of the deceased in hours of extremist danger, many interesting anecdotes are related. At the time of the great influx of miners in 1858, he was the sole representative of law and order in Victoria. To secure the preservation of peace, he appointed a number of coloured policemen, with whom the miners at once declared war, carrying their enmity so far as to threaten to throw one of the objectionable officers into the harbour. The miners were rioting at the time, and a moment's indecision would have been fatal. It was not shown. Pemberton, alone, ventured the ranks of the rioters, and by his quiet determination compelled them to release their prisoner. Though a quiet man, he was an enthusiastic sportsman, and, in his younger days, one of the best cross-country riders in Ireland, where 'Pemberton's leap' is still spoken of as the greatest ever made. Nov 12, 1891, 6 - Residents at Old Folks' home... William Raby, 66, an old veteran, shaking and weatherbeaten, bearing on his face evidence of the trials he has passed through during a rough life. In 1855 he left the East India docks in ship Marquis of Bute, for Royal Roads, via Sandwich Islands. On board were Messrs Chapman, Flett and Smith w/their families, and Bishop and Mrs Cridge... During the 1st 2 yrs here he was a watchman, carpenter, cobbler, painter, butcher, storekeeper, gravedigger and asst to missionaries, and for 10 yrs, as he describes it, he 'was a jobbin' all round the country, getting my hands in more trades in a wk than I had fingers and toes.' Then for 2 yrs he tended/herded sheep nr Saanich, for J F Thomas, and, when he left that occupation, he continued to try his hand at innumerable callings, gradually losing his health, and drifting downwards as wages decreased, until he reached almost absolute penury. Then 10 yrs ago a very hard struggle for life began, and, pushed out of work everywhere he was forced to let the crowd go by and look for the barest crumbs of employment. Lately, seeing that his case was a most deserving one, and that Raby had always been a hardworking, honest man, the doors of the Old Folks Home were opened to him. [d Nov 29, 1900]

James Sewell, who has long since turned the corner of 70, is a man well known here, having been, up to very lately, employed regularly in the Arcade bakery. He left Woolwich in barque Norman Morison in 1852, and reached Esquimalt 5 mos afterwards, the vessel anchoring under the bows of HM Frigate Thetis, and causing a ripple of excitement among the naval officers and men, for whom she had, in addition to a large amount of mail, several outfits and a good many stores. Sewell left Eng under a 5 yrs' engagement as head baker to HBC, and, on arrival at the Fort, he at once started work, and for the 1st time in the hx of the country the officials of the company tasted well made bread. The only 2 ovens in the place were added to and built on, and the bakehouse which was inside the fort stockade stood where the Five Sisters' block is now nearing completion. The Fort garden occupied the ground now taken up by the Brown Jug saloon, and the big palisade gate swung just where the grocery of B Gordon stands today. Baking bread for all the servants of HBC, and turning batches out to their satisfaction, was, with the limited appliances at hand, quite a big feat, and Sewell says that sometimes he was raked over the coals fearfully. His stipend was £51 per annum, and seeing that out of this he had to keep a wife and family, he saved very little until he managed to buy a gun. Then they lived on venison and grouse, and soon had quite a 'pile' saved up. With this he purchased the ½ acre lot on which the Occidental hotel now stands, the purchase price being $450. At the end of his contract with the company he left the service and started in baking on his own account at a little place still standing on Store st, behind the Indian camp. Fifteen yrs ago he sold his property for $6,500 and went to CA, where he lived for 3 yrs, returning to Victoria and going into the old business, in which he continued until a few wks ago, when his strength completely failed him and he entered the Old Folks' Home. In 1871 he had $50,000 and he says that it went quite as easily as it came. [d Sep 6, 1900 - K 013 W A]

The most interesting inmate is George Hughes, aged 68, but in all but age just as much a boy as he was 50 yrs ago when he enlisted as a chipper young bugler in HM Marines, and was drafted in 1841 aboard frigate Argus, bound for Jamaica. The ship stayed, without being released, in the West Indies for 9 yrs, and then was sent roaming the seas on the lookout for Russians. Hughes was in the thick of 3 naval engagements, and on being transferred to HMS Tribune at Hong Kong took part in the bombardment and capture of Canton by the combined French and English fleets. Tribune, being nearest the riverbank on the Canton side, her men were the 1st ashore, and Hughes was one of the 3 directly behind the Lt, that led them over the walls of the city after a stiff fight outside. On the arrival of Tribune here in 1859, her Marines were landed at San Juan, and they lived there for 2 yrs w/US soldiers facing them. In 1861, Hughes, with 85 others, decided to quit the service. After some trouble they succeeded in escaping in canoes to the US, after an exciting chase, and the whole of them worked in a coal mine at Whatcom for 1 yr. Then Hughes came over to Victoria again, and started landscape gardening, and the raising of flowers. Then gradually drifting down he found himself old and poor, and gladly took the advantage of the opportunity to enter his present home. D Jan 8, 1909 - N 036 W K]

Work/Dec 11, 1891, 5 - A very serious accident happened to Mr Patton, a carpenter of Victoria W. He was working on a scaffolding at James Dunsmuir's new house, on the Gorge, when his support gave way and he fell to the ground, striking heavily on his head and shoulders. He was picked up and removed to Dr E Hall's office, where it was found that several bones of the neck were broken, and as a result the unfortunate man was paralyzed from neck to feet. This morning Drs Hall and Foote will open the neck and remove the broken bones which are now pressing on the spinal cord. Died Dec 12 at Victoria, BC, William Francis Patton, aged 40, n/o ON, who was so severely injured by a fall from a scaffolding that Drs, from the 1st, had only the most meagre hopes of prolonging his life. The operation on Fri showed that the spinal cord was lacerated and all but divided, and under the circumstances the sufferer was told that he had better prepare for his departure from earth, family and friends. Deceased was in the prime of his life, and leaves a loving wife and several children, the eldest is 15. Pallbearers: F Belange, C Chislett, H Dowsett, H Catterall, S Rutter, J Collins. F 038 W 21

Died Dec 22, 1891 in Provincial Jail, Victoria, BC, a young woman named 'Frances Stephens', sentenced by police Dec 16 to 2 mos imprisonment.

Inquest. Dec 24, 8 - death through habitual use of morphine...

Aged 18, n/o Victoria, her mother/stepfather still live here, though neither relative nor friend came to her side when she was dying, or when she was dead. It was Mrs John who tenderly cared for the frail sufferer; brought her her own clothes to put on - she had nothing more than a thin dress, stockings and soleless shoes when arrested - and when she was dead, crossed her lifeless hands... She commenced the use of morphine 6 yrs ago, dragging her down to the lowest depths of shame and degradation. Her family long ago disowned her, and lately she had been living with a man named Stephens, whom, police say, she had supported with the wages of her shame, and to whom she sent for aid when she was arrested as a vagrant...

But, like the majority of his kind, he deserted her in her trouble... [Buried under name Frances Stephens] E 007 W 20

V/Dec 24, 1891, 2 - Provincial jail population cut from 60 to 36... no desperate characters behind bars at present, in fact, more than one have been guilty of no crime, unless it is a crime to be old and poor. Old Francis Creegan is one of these. He is the only nonagenarian in the jail, having celebrated his 90th birthday last Aug, still his mental faculties are unimpaired, and he can read without spectacles.

About 2 yrs ago the old man was found wandering aimlessly about Victoria W, and taken to jail for safekeeping - there being no Old Folks' Home then. He has been treated with kindness and indulgence ever since by the ward and his staff, who, however, consider it more than unfair to an old veteran that he should be compelled to spend his last days in jail - after spending his manhood and his strength for his country, and facing the horrors of war as a British soldier in India and the Crimea. His pension from the govt, of course, is a little help, but he cannot live upon it, and for such as he the Old Folks'

Home was established. Warden John wrote the chairman of the committee having the home in charge, some time ago, and received his promise to admit the old pensioner as soon as room could be found for him. 'And yet,' adds the warden, 'he remains here with me, though 6 others have been admitted to the home since then.' [d Feb 2, 1897, aged 100 - K 017 E A]

Died Dec, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Michael Hart, 58, who first struck Victoria in 1858. N/o Leitrim, Ireland. When 1st here he was a night watchman, in later years he merged into business as a partner of Thomas Shotbolt in a cannery, and here he amassed a considerable sum, BC salmon then becoming popular in England. He was a confirmed old bachelor, and a few years ago brought out 2 nieces from Ireland to make his life more happy. He had for years been suffering from paralysis and a tumour in his side, and endured his sufferings uncomplainingly, always saying 'much better today'. He had had many vicissitudes in life, and went through the Cariboo gold craze, like many others, without anything to show but loss. He died a man of wealth, having a bank account of $70,000. Work/Died Dec 26, 1891 at Victoria, BC, Frank George Clifton Atwood, 29, n/o Victoria, from injuries which at the time of the accident gave him no uneasiness. He was employed by Boucherat & Co, and was working in their warehouse, handling cases, when a couple of cases fell, striking him, and not inflicting any serious external injuries. Feeling but little pain, he said nothing at the time, and continued his work, until making the discovery that he was losing blood, he came to the conclusion that he was injured internally. He at once consulted Dr Davie, by whose advice he went to the hospital, where he died in agony, all efforts to save him futile. He leaves, a loving young wife, 2 children, and very many friends. Jan 27, 1892, 5 - Yesterday morning the Colonist published the fact that the postmaster was in receipt of a letter from Iola, IL, informing him that Charles Davis, supposed to be here, had been left a tidy fortune. Enquiry yesterday seems to have demonstrated the fact that the man who is wanted died here, 1 yr ago in abject poverty, falling down dead in an apoplectic fit in the miserable View st cabin where he lived. A great many people knew Charley Davis. For some yrs he was the janitor of the old theatre, and was the 1st bill poster Victoria ever had. According to his own statements he came here from Ft Vancouver, being a deserter from a Co of US Army established at that post. Several people acquainted with him had heard him speak of having lived in IL. The funeral expenses were paid by a general public subscription. Two of his children are now in St Anne's Convent, and friends are interested to find out whether there will be any possibility of the money, or portion of it, reverting to them.

Feb 10, 1892, 3 - description of life inside Tolmie st jail... In this yard, sitting crouched on a little bench, contentedly smoking a clay pipe, we meet old Frank Creagan, who, for want of better accommodation elsewhere, is lodged here for the remainder of his days. Fifty yrs ago he entered the service of the E India Co and went through the terrible mutiny. I mentioned Havelock and Outram to him, and he brightened up as he started to talk about the deeds of both these magnificent soldiers. Cawnpore, Lucknow, Calcutta, were all words that, as they were mentioned, struck a chord in his heart, and, when I left him he asked me to come and see him again. He is aged 90, and draws a pension of L13/annum.

Died Jan 26, 1892 at Nova Scotia, Mr A V Stronach, 53, of Victoria. Leaves 2 children, now in Vancouver, orphans by his death, Mrs Stronach having died here last year. Born at NS, he came to BC 30 years ago, and shouldering his pick and his blankets at once struck for the mines. During the past 25 years he has pursued fickle fortune with a miner's varying luck almost continually, usually spending 8 or 9 months of the year in the mining camps, and the remainder of his time in Victoria, where the property representing the investment of his savings has gradually risen in value, until, at the time of his death he was comfortably well-to-do. Stronach's cabins are well known, and, in addition to possessing these, deceased had a number of valuable lots in James Bay ward, besides mining claims on Rock Creek and other rich gold streams. A very peculiar circumstance in connection with his death is that, during the whole 30 years of his absence - since the spring of 1862 - there has been no sickness among 'the folks at home'; he returned to NS about Christmas, and la grippe made its appearance in the household within a week after, causing the death of 5 members of the family within 1 month. May 23, 1892, 8 - Some children picking flowers in the old cemetery on Quadra discovered in a small wooden box stowed away under some lilac bushes, the body of a female child. The police are now endeavoring to ascertain how the corpse came to the cemetery, and whose child it was.

The little children who made the discovery tell their story very simply. They were picking flowers amongst the bushes when one of them came upon the box. With childish curiosity they examined it and, to see what was inside, pulled off the lid. The body was lying face upwards, neatly laid away in a soft bed of cotton waste. When removed to the undertakers a thorough examination was made, disclosing that the baby was fully developed and bore no marks of violence. It had evidently been washed after birth, but whether it had lived or was stillborn, was not ascertained. How long the box had lain where found, could only be surmised, but it is thought from the freshness of the corpse that it could not have been put away more than a day or so.

The receptacle, which was evidently a candy or biscuit box, bore the marks C N W Victoria and William Rudge Victoria, but these marks furnish no clue to guide the authorities in their search.

As yet, mystery surrounds the whole affair, There may have been no infanticide, nor even an attempt to conceal the fact of the birth, but the law is very strict, and not only the birth, but the death should have been reported, and failure to comply with these regulations gives the matter an ugly look. Further developments will be awaited with interest.

May 25, 6 - Many theories - stillborn, and of poor parents, people think that the mode of disposing of the body, under the circumstances, is not so highly censurable, seeing that the necessary burial fees, at the very lowest calculation, would have been $8.75. Objection has often been raised to the exorbitant fee for the interment of a stillborn child, and it is a well known fact that such children are frequently interred in vacant, unconsecrated plots, by parents who cannot afford to incur an expense of $5 for a tiny spot in a graveyard, and an additional $3.75 for registering the death and turning the 2 or 3 shovelsful of earth over the little corpse. The police are on the lookout, and pending their action, the coroner has instructed the undertaker to hold the body.

May 26, 7 - inquest...; May 27, 5 - stillborn ch/o Charles Flesh, a marine engr and wife, b May 13, at 103 View st... the husband was away from home at the time of birth, she entrusted the burial to some friends and neighbors who were in attendance during her sickness. She knew nothing of

Med/V/Died Jun 3, 1892 at

Victoria, BC, Dr Joseph Beauchamp Matthews, 63, MRCS, ELSA, London, surgeon to the BC Garrison Artillery, a pioneer Victorian, n/o Western-on-the-Green, Oxfordshire, Eng, and after practicing for some yrs in Eng, came to BC in 1862. He was in Cariboo country for some time and afterwards came to Goldstream, where he resided until 1867, when he moved to Victoria. Since the organization of BCBGA he has been one of their surgeons and was well thought of. The only relative here is a sister who recently arrived from Eng.; Jun 7, 5 - Fort/Langley sts, where he lived and practised for so many yrs, was meeting place for many mourning friends... Handsome casket was carried to the hearse by Hon J H Turner, Hon F G Vernon, D Boscowitz, George Byrnes, C A Vernon, E Mohun, John Stevens, W Monteith, W G Pinder, A Keast. Hon Sir Matthew Begbie, J R Anderson, Drs Davie and Hasell, were chief mourners... In addition to the pallbearers, nearly every prominent pioneer in the city was present, BCBGA, of which he was surgeon, being represented by Col Prior and Capt Smallfield. The medical fraternity followed the funeral in a body, and all are sincerely grieved. B 096 W 30

Died suddenly Jul 5, 1892 at Victoria, BC, Joseph Heywood, 73, n/o Milton Mills, Yorkshire, England in 1819. When quite young he resolved to try his fortunes in the New World, and crossed to US, settling in Cincinnati, where he worked as a butcher. The wild tales of golden fortunes in the far West fired him with that spirit which appeared to be then almost universal, and in 1849, joined the vast pilgrimage to the coast. Varying fortunes attended his quest, and, after having mined in a number of the leading camps of the day, finally settled down in Sacramento, and, having opened a shop, married.

The old restless longing for change which has carved the blaze marks of sturdy pioneers on countless trees, led him to seek the Fraser river in 1858. The HBC tents were about all there then was of Victoria. Deceased opened a store on Johnson & Government, afterwards transferring to Yates street, where he continued until his retirement 8 years ago. He was a naturalized US citizen... The majority of his property consisted of real estate, his residence at the top of Fort street, and the 5 acre tract opposite the fountain. Deceased leaves a widow, son Harry, daughter, Mrs John Grant. Pallbearers: Mayor Beaven, Hon J H Turner, W P Sayward, Dr T J Jones, F Page, L Goodacre. B 080 W 33

Circus/Jul 7, 1893, 5 - Wharf, Johnson and Store sts witnessed an exciting and unusual spectacle this morning - an elephant hunt, probably the 1st ever seen in BC. Monarch, the big elephant, who forms 1/4 of the parade in the great Washburn show, was the game, and all the circus employees joined in the chase. The elephant has been having his own way since disabling his keeper [Elephant Tommy was injured by the elephant while at Nanaimo], and when his temporary master attempted to take him on board the stmr, Monarch rebelled and decided not to go... Pedestrians did not dispute his right of way, and he was not captured until he reached the lumber yd of Sayward Mill Co, where he was cornered and eventually induced to return to the company, though not without difficulty. Not the least amusing feature of the grand tour was the surprise of 2 blue jackets who stumbled out of a saloon just in time to see the monster come thundering down on them at a lively gait. They neither ran nor screamed - they were too thoroughly scared - but, when speech did return, the English language was inadequate to express their sentiments, and they were awfully sober...

Died Feb 23, 1894 at Victoria, BC, George Steitz, 62, n/o Bavaria, one of the foremost pioneers of Victoria. Arrived here, via CA, in 1857, and in 1858 established a modest restaurant on Government st, the present New England hotel being the modern outcome. In 1861 he joined the emigration to the Cariboo gold fields, returning 10 years later and again embarking in business, at the stand on Yates street still bearing his name. Here he remained until his failing health compelled his retirement. Feb 27, 5 - ... from 1862 to 1866 he was member of Bedrock Flume Co, of Cariboo... In 1862 or thereabouts he associated himself with John Laumeister, Charles Gowen, J Hoffmeister in another scheme... this was importing from CA a herd of camels... They were brought here safely, and were accommodated on the Indian reserve, where they excited 9 days' wonder and the longer continued admiration of the younger generation... They did not prove a success... as they struck terror to the hearts of the Indians and horses... One camel, which was left behind to care for her offspring, was for some time the chief attraction of the 'commonage' where now stands the stately residence of Mrs Robert Dunsmuir...

During the last years of his time in Cariboo he was owner & proprietor of the Cottonwood ranch, one of the most popular road houses... Pallbearers: Jacob Sehl, William Schmidt, William Stevens, A Henderson, Messrs Williams and Anderson. B 055 W 34

Died suddenly Mar 15, 1894 at Victoria, BC, Peter McDonald, 58, n/o Co Carlow, Ire. Coming here in the early days he went to Cariboo in 1863, and remained there until 1875 when he lost the fingers of both hands by getting them frozen, and then came here, where he went into business as a tobacconist a yr later. Only known relatives res/NY. He was extremely popular, especially among his brother Irishmen, he had acquired considerable property here. Peter Corr, an old friend, has been put in charge of his place on Yates, just below Government st. . Funeral - ...pioneers formed a procession and marched to the graveside from the RC cathedral. They refused to ride in the carriages, saying that they had tramped beside each other in early days, and they were not now going to drive to the burial of one of their number. That veteran of pioneers, Hon Dr Helmcken,

Jun 3, 1894, 5 - Hugh Grant, well known logger, who has recently disposed of a boom of logs at Vancouver and has come round this way [Victoria], says that last wk Haslam's camp, at Discovery Passage, was invaded and a quantity of provisions and valuable articles belonging to a lumberman's outfit were carried off. At Morgan's camp, on Read I, a general sweep was effected, some 100 lbs of potatoes being part of the plunder. From these places and Jim King's, at Duncan's bay, several hundred dollars of article were stolen. White men are supposed to be the marauders; but whoever they are a sharp lookout is being kept for them. Died by suicide Jun 4, 1894 at Sooke, BC, Mrs Peter Jolibois, 25, n/o Victoria. The unfortunate woman, whose husband is a sealer on schr Vera, and at present absent from home, lived in a little house on Sooke R some 2 miles from Otter Pnt. Yesterday 2 men called at the house and found her, a Winchester rifle lying beside her showed plainly how the deed had been committed. Jun 6, 5 - inquest...it is believed that the reported loss of Capt Shields and 2 of his men from their schr has been interpreted by Mrs Jolibois to mean that her husband had been drowned, the result being that in a fit of despondency she has terminated her life. Verdict - suicide, a letter was left which explained she intended to end a life which had lost its charm for her. D 007 W 25

Died Jul 11, 1894 at Victoria, BC, William Barker, 75, a pioneer of BC, after whom Barkerville is named, at the Old Men's Home. He had been an inmate of the Home for several months. The ups and downs of a miner's life are well illustrated in the career of Barker. Deceased was n/o Cornwall, and in early life a sailor; he came to BC in 1858, one of his shipmates on the long journey round being the veteran Robert Ridley, who also shared with him the adventures and varying fortunes of life in the mines. In partnership with late Bob Dexter, Barker's profits for a few months ran into thousands of dollars a day, but so free was he with his money that he saved nothing for his declining years. To 'Bill Barker' belonged the honour of sinking the 1st shaft 'below the canyon,' and at one time his fortune was counted by the hundreds of thousands. Pioneer and St George's societies - being well and popularly known as one of the oldest pioneers of BC. F 013 E 16

Med/Sep 1, 1894 - Bichloride of mercury, in 2 tablets of 6 ½ grams, such is what a young woman known to the half world as May Franklin, took on Thurs, in the hope that it would end a life which to her had grown intolerable. Just what the specific cause of the attempt at suicide was is not known; the girl had been 'in the blues' for several days, but seemed in fine spirits during Thurs evening, when in company with Jessie Howard, of whose house at 39 Broad st she was an inmate, she had spent some hrs in Beacon Hill park. The two returned home about 9pm, and shortly thereafter the girl must have swallowed the deadly dose. Dr Frank Hall was summoned as soon as the truth was suspected, and thanks to his efforts, seconded by the intelligent action of Jessie Howard, who had before his arrival administered simple emetics which fortunately acted, the unhappy girl owes her life. Several hrs were spent by the physician at her bedside, and when he left it was with the knowledge that the lightly valued life had been saved. May Franklin had twice before attempted self-destruction since entering upon a life of shame. Her real name is Annie Sullivan. She was sufficiently recovered in strength yesterday to undertake a trip to Portland, where a sister resides and where she intends to make her home until she can in a measure forget her recent sad experiences.

Fire/Oct 28, 1894 - It has been the custom to 'tap in' at the fire halls at noon and 5pm, so as to train the horses to take their places at the engines or other apparatus. Feeding time comes immediately after the 5pm 'tap in.' The animals having 'horse sense,' have learned to connect 5pm with feeding time, and as far as that particular hr is concerned, they can tell the time of day as well as a human being. A few minutes before they get restless and excited, and even whinny with anticipation. For this reason 'tap in' has been changed to 4:30, so as to break the combination.

Nov 3, 1894 - By a landslip at Shooshartie bay, Cape Commerell, on Mon morning last, William Kipling, 31, n/o Eng, of Victoria, one of the founders of the little commonwealth colony at the NE end of VI, was carried to a horrible death, and Frederick Goss and Daniel Patterson, two of those intimately associated with him in the enterprise with which he was so prominently identified, were very seriously injured. Details of the tragedy were supplied on the arrival here last evening of the stmr Princess Louise, which also brought to Victoria for burial the remains of poor Kipling. The landslip was caused by the heavy rain which had been falling continuously for several days previous to the fatal Mon, loosening the earth and sand in the 300' of steep hillside, at the foot of which the cabins of the co-operative colony had been erected.

The slide came without the slightest warning at about 6:30am, the men being at the time in the act of getting out of their beds. Kipling, who was the first to rise, was partially dressed. First there was a sound like the crash of a falling tree; the next instant the three men were at their journey's end, the slide having carried them with it to where the rising tide was beating on the shore.

The cabin was simply lifted from its foundation as though it had been a child's toy, and deposited in the crushed and broken heap of debris at the foot of the cliff, beneath the accumulation of soil, roots, trees and giant boulders.

Jack McClugan was the first of the settlers to recover consciousness and rouse himself to action. His knee was dislocated but he succeeded in forcing the joint back and hastened to release his companions Goss and Kipling, whose cries for aid reached him as he was attending to his own injuries. Dan Patterson with a broken arm was his assistant. William McGarry and his wife Polly, who occupied the neighboring house, escaped by a miracle; half of the house was swept away, but it was luckily the half devoted to the culinary operations of the household.

These four, the only survivors who were not pinned into the very earth, at once went to work with a will, stimulated by the agonizing cries of their unhappy friends. The rain was descending in torrents and their efforts were further hampered by the lack of proper tools to work with, almost everything having gone in the general wreck. It was 10:00 before they succeeded in rescuing Goss from under the timbers by which he was held down, but which in reality saved his life as they prevented his being crushed to death, one giant tree having formed a bridge over him. Both legs were broken, but it is confidently anticipated that he will live.

Kipling was pinned in the salt mire by his legs, and his rescuers were forced to labor waist deep in the sea, the rising tide dashing in their faces and almost sweeping them away on half a dozen occasions. When Goss was freed and borne to the partially demolished store of Mr. McGarry the tide had covered Kipling to his chest. An hour later it had reached his mouth, and in desperation, failing to release his broken leg it was literally hacked off with the axe just above the ankle, and the mutilated and half drowned body was borne to where it could be tenderly cared for. Kipling did not, however, long survive his frightful injuries.

As soon as the rescue work was completed word was despatched to Malcolm I for assistance. Stmr Evangel was met at Ft Rupert, and with Indian Agent Pidcock, Officer Wollacott, and a party in charge of Rev Mr Hall, proceeded at once to the scene of the disaster, where they arrived on Thurs evening, but too late to render any aid to Kipling. All the sufferers were taken aboard the stmr, which, calling at Malcolm I for Mr G H Turner, another prominent officer of the colony, crossed with them to Alert Bay. As there was some uncertainty as to when Louise would be along, the steamer then started for Vancouver. The same night rough weather, which threatened again the lives of the colonist, drove the Evangel for shelter into Robson Bight, and Louise was next morning sighted and the party transferred to her. The injured on the way down had the advantage of Mr Hobbis' surgical skill, and they are now on a fair way to complete recover.

Poor Kipling, the single victim of the awful slide, was a res/o Victoria, where his parents are now living; and had for yrs manifested a keen interest in all schemes having for their object the betterment of the condition of the workingman. Nov 4, 3 - Northern Tragedy...

Died Feb 23, 1895 at London, England, Captain William Power, 65, n/o Ireland, resident of BC since the days of the gold excitement [1858?] He was one of those who made money in the pioneer days and when fortune frowned on him afterwards in other countries returned to BC... He and his wife arrived on the old Enterprise, commanded by Captain Tom Wright, Captain Power and D W Higgins made their 1st journey up the Fraser River to Yale in Aug, 1858. Power, Higgins, late Lieut-Governor Nelson and John Kurtz, there formed a friendship which lasted through life, Higgins, the youngest of the quartet being the only one now alive... Arrived at Yale he went into the restaurant business, in which he fairly coined money. His genial disposition made him many friends... About 1860 he secured contracts to build a trail over part of what has since become the Yale wagon road. Finally, in 1866, he had 'made his pile' and left for New York... He afterwards went to Peru and engaged in railroad building. His luck finally deserting him he lost all his money and returned to BC about 1880. His old friend Mr

Nelson had then a chance to reciprocate a good turn Power had done him years before, and did so. In the early 1860s Nelson and ??? ran an express business, an important part of their work being to ship to Victoria the gold dust entrusted to their care by miners. One day a messenger of the firm while handing aboard the steamer at Yale a bag containing several thousand dollars in 'dust,' when by some mischance the bag fell into the river and that was the last of it. Captain Power, who was then in Yale, at once announced that he was prepared to pay up everyone who had a receipt from the express company and was as good as his word. The express company were perfectly solvent, and paid him back, but Nelson never forgot Captain Powers' kindly action. Power again gradually came to the front and finally became interested in the lumber mills at Port Moody. Quick to recognize business opportunities, he began to invest in Vancouver real estate when that town began to spring up.... Executors of his estate are Mr Erb and R P Rithet.

Oct 29, 1895, 6 - Goodbye to Earth... - Died by suicide Oct 27, 1895 at Victoria, BC, Archibald Turner, 64, h/o late wife, Mary, who died Sep 14. Oct 31, 5 - The funeral was attended by mem/o BC Spiritualists' Assn and other friends of deceased. A H Maynard conducted the services at the Turner cottage and Mrs R Maynard read the poem 'Beyond.' Pallbearers: P Cavin, D Davis, W A Robertson, R Maynard, J Sheppard, J Blackburn.

In his funeral oration Maynard made no reference whatever to the manner of Turner's going... Spiritualism does not teach suicide. At the grave there were comments made deploring deceased's last action in life, and the probability canvassed of its casting a reflection upon mem/o the local spiritualists' assn.

At the Turner cottage the will was read, naming Simeon Duck and O R C Hastings as executors: Mrs S Duck, Mrs O R C Hastings, Mrs George Caven, Mrs E C Shepperd, Mrs H Mansell, Miss J Johnstone, Thomas Caven and Albert H Maynard, all inheritors... His wife, Mary, was n/o Sct, 62. G 038/039 E 17

BkHx/Marine/Died Oct 28, 1895 at Victoria, BC, John Henry Scott, n/o MD, aged 63, was steward of stmr Isabel and Joan for some yrs. All who knew him called him 'Scott', was highly respected and esteemed. Among steamboat men there is no name probably better known in the NW, for it is intimately associated with important events in Pacific Coast marine history. He was steward onboard SS Labouchere at the time she was wrecked in a fog off San Francisco in 1867. Eight boats loaded with crew and passengers of the vessel started from the sinking ship, and the one in which he was upset, drowning all but Scott and 2 others. During the San Juan trouble he was w/Capt Tom Wright on Diana. He came to the Pacific Coast in 1855, entering the service of HBC soon after his arrival and running on nearly all of their stmr. At the time of his last sickness he was steward on stmr Joan. He leaves a widow to mourn his loss. Nov 1 - funeral. Pallbearers: J Giscome, S Coones, T W Pierre, G Kennell, R T Clanton, C H Sharp. Died suddenly Nov 1, 1895, while settling himself down to read a paper at his residence, Carlo Bossi, 69, was suddenly carried off by heart disease. He had been troubled for some time, but was apparently in his accustomed health. Was member of Pioneer society, having been resident here for 37 years. He arrived on SS Commodore and was carried up the Fraser by the gold excitement, following trading rather than mining. He returned to Victoria after a short absence and opened a general store on Johnson street. In 1868 he went into the grocery trade on Yates street from which he retired 7 years later having laid by considerable money. Good investments in real estate since that period swelled his earnings and he died one of the wealthy men of Victoria. He left a widow, but no children. N/o Lombardy, Italy. Murder/BkHx/Nov 6, 1895, 8; Nov 7, 3...; Nov 8, 6...; - a mysterious and sudden death of a colored woman named Mattie J Smith, but more generally known as Mattie 'Crow', found dead in her residence, 27 Discovery st...

She came to Victoria from Winnipeg 6 yrs ago, where she was during the latter 1880s a mem/o the sporting fraternity
well known to the police all the way from Winnipeg to Calgary. During the last 3 yrs

she has shared her house with a young bartender named Edward Rohrig...he discovered the body... scantily dressed, and about the neck a tie that the woman had been accustomed to wear was tightly tied with a double knot coming just below the ear... Officer Carson was 1st on the scene and later in the day Detective Perdue and Officer Palmer also came into the case. There was no signs of a struggle and no evidence of robbery... her small belongings
would have offered temptation to no one. Nov 7 - post mortem proves murder theory, and by the nature of the injuries they have come to the startling conclusion that when Mattie Crow's assassin is identified he will be found to have been responsible also for the death of Cape Mudge Sally on the Songhees reservation Oct 18...
Witnesses include: John Lang, MD, William Stedman, aka,
'Boscowitz Billy' , May Williams... inquest - came to her death from strangulation,
but whether her fatal injuries
were then and there self-inflicted or otherwise we have not sufficient evidence before us to decide.' Nov 13 - for the present the police have abandoned their inquiries, all their investigations having led them into blind alleys. It is now a case of waiting for chance to disclose some weak point in the apparently invulnerable armour of the murderer... Dec 27, 6 - mystery surrounding tragic death of Mattie Crow has again been brought to notice by arrival of a young man who claims to be h/o dead woman's daughter and who introduces himself as

'Cherokee Jim'. He is more anxious to procure possession of the dead woman's belongings than fathom the mystery of her death. E 006 E

Dec 3, 1895, 6 - To the Editor - I noticed in your valuable paper the other morning a reference to the late Captain Thomas Pamphlet as being one of the men to navigate the 1st steamboat on the Fraser River. Mr P Manson, Sr, who died at Jubilee hospital in Feb last was taken on board at the mouth of the river, and then piloted her to Fort Hope, she being the 1st and only sidewheel steamer that ever went up the river as far as that point. Manson was at that time, 1858, Customs Collector at Fort Langley, and the 1st one on the mainland of BC. The name of the steamer was Seabird; Seabird bar and Seabird Island on the Fraser being named after her. I might also state that Manson also erected the 1st flagstaff that was ever erected on the mainland, and raised the 1st flag thereon in honour of the arrival of late Sir James Douglas, then Governor of BC. The flagstaff now standing at Herring's Landing, opposite the city of New Westminster, was placed there about 37 years ago. Signed, X

WmHx/Died Dec 17, 1895 at Victoria, BC, Agnes Porter, 78, relict of late Joseph Porter, n/o Wigan, Lancashire, England, daughter of John Brigham, a cotton spinner. She was twice married, her 1st husband being John Holmes. About 3 years after their marriage they sailed to Sydney, New South Wales and from there they went to Hong Kong, where he died. Two years later she married Mr Porter, and after a residence of 6 years in China followed her husband to CA, arriving there in 1850, coming to Victoria 9 years later. He was private secretary to Sir James Douglas during the stirring times of Fraser River and Cariboo gold excitements. They arrived in Victoria in 1859... Hers was a nature to invite and inspire confidence, and the young men who in the wild days of the early gold rushes found themselves in

BC without friends or resources, she was a true counsellor and friend. She leaves a daughter, Mrs J W McKay. Pallbearers: Honourable D W Higgins, A W Jones, W C Ward, Honourable P O'Reilly, J R Anderson, Sir Joseph Trutch, A W Vowell, Honourable D M Eberts. B 028 W 33

Marine/May 10, 1896, 8 - Some time this week the bodies of Capt and crew of lost ship Janet Cowan will be brought from Carmanah Pnt to Ross Bay cemetery for re-interment. May 23, 6 - for 'Christian Burial':

Capt M Thompson, 52, n/o Shetland I, Sct, d Jan 5, 1896 - M 063 W 04;

William Selkirk, 61, d Jan 6, 1896 - M 065 W 04;

William Peverall, 59, n/o Durham, Eng, d Jan 6, 1896 - M 064 W 04;

G M Kinnear, 22, n/o Dundee, Sct, d Jan 6, 1896 - M 064b065 W 04.

With all her flags at half-mast DGS Quadra entered port yesterday bringing the bodies of the Janet Cowan crew. Since the disaster last winter the remains of these unfortunate men, who died from exposure, have been lying interred nr the scene of the wreck.

A party of 3 men, in charge of Mr Caselton, employed by Mr Hayward, were sent up in Quadra last week to the scene of the wreck and there, assisted by the crew of Quadra, after 2 days of fearfully hard work, the bodies were carried through the bush to the beach, where they were enclosed in airtight coffins and taken on board. The bush through which the bodies had to be carried was of the wildest and most impenetrable character, and the only way they could get out was by cutting a path from the telegraph trail to the nearest shore, on arrival at which the bodies were lowered down the cliffs by ropes to the beach.

The graves were 2 miles apart, and by the side of the telegraph line between Carmanah and Cape Beale, nr a part of the coast known as Cape Clanewah. An inscription to the deceased's memory had been placed on the nearest tree. With the bodies of Peverall and Selkirk, who were buried together, was found a purse containing some gold and silver, and this was handed to Capt Walbran by Caselton. It is hoped through the Dept of Marine & Fisheries, the relatives of the late owner will receive this money.

The wx throughout the trip was exceptionally fine, had it been otherwise, owing to the extreme wildness of the coast, the arduous work could not possibly have been carried out. The coffins were covered with black cloth with electro-plated mountings and name plates.

The funeral takes place May 23 from the custom house wharf to Ross Bay cemetery. The wreck is fast disappearing. Great steel girders and huge plates of iron have been twisted into fantastic shapes by the fury of the elements. Her large hollow masts have fallen inwards, and so close was the vessel to the shore that these now form a gangplank from the rocks. May 24, 5 - left the custom house headed by 4 hearses, on either side of which were a detachment of blue-jackets from HMS Royal Arthur, who acted as pallbearers for each of the sailors, while acting in the same capacity at Capt Thompson's burial were Capt Gaudin, agent of Marine & Fisheries; Capt Walbran of DGS Quadra, and Pilots Babbington, Newby and Morrison. Quadra's crew acted as chief mourners. Four beautiful crosses made of ivy and narcissus were laid by friendly hands one on each coffin before they being afterwards placed on the graves.

Work/Died June, 1896 at Shawnigan Lk, Edmund Franklin, s/o John Harper, 22, of Victoria. Employed by Shawnigan Lk Lumber Co, he was working at a camp at the head of the lk, and in the evening he took a team of horses to water them. Close to where the path leads down to the lake there is a steep bluff which sheers down to the water (20+' deep). In some way one of the horses and Harper fell down the bank into the lake, and apparently in the struggle the man got kicked on the head and injured, so that he was rendered helpless to save himself from drowning. Aid came from the logging camp a short time afterwards, but though the horse was rescued Harper had sunk in 27' of water and was only recovered after dragging. Body was brought to town by the evening train, funeral from family residence. AOF will attend in a body. N/o York Co, NB. B 066 W 37 [Jun 14].

V/Died Feb 15, 1897 at Old Men's Home, V, Francis Cregan [Creegan], 99, n/o Longford, Ire, b 1798, in 1844 he emigrated to BC to seek his fortune. He had joined the army in his youth and served in 52nd Light Infantry, part of his service as a soldier being spent in E Canada. He was w/HBC when he came to BC and afterwards farmed in Cowichan. In 1892 he became an inmate of Old Men's Home. Feb 18, 5 - funeral... Few indeed of the friends of the old veteran attended his interment, save and except the other mem/o the home, who attended in a body - no one is left to recall his 1st experiences in this new land, of which he was one of the very earliest pioneers. Cregan took the Queen's shilling at a time when all Europe looked to Britain for relief from the returned Napoleon, enlisting as a drummer boy 3 days after Waterloo was fought and won. His Reg was one of the hard-worked and highly honored brigades during this campaign, and when his term expired, Cregan became a sailor, he never wearied of relating the credit of the corps. It was as Gov Douglas' body servant that Cregan came to BC, and he recalled in later yrs how Victoria at that time consisted of 3 humble huts, with the fort in process of erection. He spent yrs in the Governor's service, when, with all other residents of that day, the mining fever compelled him to desert civilization and engage in the searches on Fraser R and Cariboo... He passed away when existence had become to him little more than a waiting for the rest which in his case was so long delayed. K 017 E A

Died May 26, 1897 at Old Men's Home, V, Old James Larman, a Victoria 'character'. A shoemaker for 30 yrs, 1st as foreman for Mr Mansell and afterwards running a little shop of his own. He was a peculiar man, very close about his affairs and never spending much money. He had an old-fashioned horror of banks and there is a strong opinion that he buried it in ground over towards the Indian reserve. He would put his money in a tin box and then some evenings he would go for a walk over that way... he had a house and lot once but sold them. He had a fine physique and was quite adept at athletic exercises, especially rowing. Aged 72, n/o Monaghan, Ire. A 035 W 30

Born Fulda, Prussia, 1835, left there at 16 for Bavaria, where he decided to embark in brewery business... He obtained experience in the largest breweries of Bavaria, Austria and Hungary, Warsaw, Bucharest and then New York. San Francisco next claimed him, and after becoming accustomed to western conditions in CA he came north to BC with followers of gold... At the time of Big Bend excitement he was in Lillooet, then Cariboo became the cry, establishing himself in Barkerville where he remained until the procession of gold seekers passed on to Mosquito creek - his brewery being a feature of the industry of that place... In 1870 he came to Victoria associating himself with Joseph Loewen, acquiring the brewer interests of Vogel, Loertz and Himmen... Leaves widow, 2 sons, 2 daughters, one son is Joseph Wilson. Died Mar 24, 1898 at V, Katherine Burke, rict/o late Henry W Doscher, 65, n/o Galway, Ire. One of the earliest settlers in Victoria, known throughout the NW as proprietress of the French Laundry, the 1st establishment of its kind in the colony. The interment was originally arranged for today, but as her daughter, Miss Doscher, is also lying at point of death, a postponement was decided upon. H 090b091 W 23

Mar 25, 1898 - Died Mar 25, 1898 at V, Kate, d/o Katherine Burke Doscher, 30, n/o Victoria. The death messenger called at the res/o the Doscher family, 190 Yates st, Victoria, BC, where Mrs Doscher and her daughter Kate lay ill, and claimed the mother for another world. Miss Doscher was afterwards removed to St Joseph's Hospital, where the angel followed and claimed her also with 24 hrs of the time when her mother had been taken away. There was then but one member of the family left, Minnie, wife of William Herbert Adams, of 36 King's rd. Here the messenger hovered about while his next intended victim lay weak with the same affliction from which her mother and sister had suffered, and early Sun he completed his mission. The ordinary death notice issued every day causes but little interest outside the circle of the relatives and acquaintances of the deceased, but this singular coincidence stirred to an unusual extent the sympathetic feelings of all who heard it.

Mrs Doscher was a widow, her husband having died a year ago last Feb. She was 65 years of age, and a n/o Galway, Ire.

About 9 days ago she and her daughter Kate contracted severe colds and 3 days later Mrs Doscher was stricken with an attack of pneumonia. Miss Doscher though weak herself and growing worse, tried to alleviate the sufferings of her mother, but soon succumbed to a physician's care, and was very ill when her mother died. Mrs Adams was also exhibiting symptoms of illness, but stirred by the same motive of family affection she visited her sister at the hospital and immediately after her death was forced to a sick bed, from which she never rose. And so all three went out of this life one after the other in quick succession.

Miss Doscher was aged 30, Mrs Adams was 33, and leaves to the care of her beloved husband two small children the youngest of which is but six months old.

The remains of Mrs and Miss Doscher were interred yesterday morning. Services were conducted in St Andrew's Roman Catholic cathedral and at the cemetery by Rev Father Nicolay. Pallbearers: Messrs W P Allen, J W Keller, C A Lombard, Joseph Wriglesworth, J Cathcart and H R Young. For

Died by suicide May 1, 1898
in an Oaklands field at V,
John Alexander Knox, 54, n/o Belfast, I. In earlier years deceased had been an owner of a # of small farms in Hillsboro, Co Down which enabled him and his family to live in luxury. Then new land laws came into force and the rents were cut. But before things had come to this low ebb he moved to BC and secured employment as a land surveyor. His earnings enabled him to send for his wife and 5 sons to join him,
which they did, and for a time resided here. Two yrs ago he returned to Ire to see if something could be done with his property [his 2nd visit in 3 yrs]. Upon his return he did not reside with his family, but engaged a room in town spending a great deal of time looking for work... M 048 W

Died Dec 9, 1898 at Victoria, BC, Thaddeus Harper, 65, n/o Virginia. One of BC's wealthiest citizens a few years ago. Harper Brothers - Thaddeus and Jerome - came to BC in 1858 from CA, having been in the cattle raising business in South America. Soon after their arrival here they went to the interior, Jerome taking in cattle and supplying the miners of Cariboo with meat, and Thaddeus erecting a sawmill and supplying the camp with lumber. Both amassed fortunes. They consolidated their interests and also launched out in mining, trading, transportation and other enterprises, most of which were successful. Jerome died in CA, and the management of the immense business fell to Thaddeus. He met with an accident, however, being kicked in the face by a horse. His brain was affected, litigation followed, and in a few years the fortune that it had taken years of hard work to amass, was wiped out. During late years deceased had resided at Driard Hotel. Although he never fully recovered from his accident he was quite rational. Premier Semlin and G Hartnagle were chief mourners, pallbearers were: J B Lovell, John Dougall, John Moore, A Cameron, J L Crimp, J Clearihue. M 042 W 02

Dec 18, 1898, 3 - Shaggles, pet of Victoria fire dept, the ugliest dog in the city, has barked his last bark... a cherished pet of the Victoria fire dept members. He was found yesterday cold in death, the final alarm, as far as he was concerned, having been rung in during the night. Shaggles was 16 and had been an active member of the dept during the greater portion of the time, attending every fire, leading the way. The 1st tap of the bell sent him scurrying to the front of the fire hall, barking sharply as much as to say 'Come on boys; I'm here to clear the road for you.' If it was a fire he went off in front of the 1st piece of apparatus to leave the hall, but for the usual mid-day alarm he contented himself with joining in the crowd of small boys who gather around the engine house. Shaggles is the hero of many a story told by the members of the dept. On one occasion the call men were engaged in a game of baseball at Beacon Hill, Shaggles going along as mascot. Suddenly he was noticed making all haste towards the city. The men listened and sure enough the bells were ringing. The dog had sharper ears than they and was at the engine house to greet them when they arrived. On another occasion a fireman took the dog home and locked him in a room. An alarm was rung in and Shaggles being unable to find any other exit, went through the window, carrying sash and all.

JT/Jan 6, 1899, William Pollock is dead. His remains were brought to Vancouver by Comox last night. Mr Pollock was sentenced to a year's imprisonment for forging certificates upon which government bounty for destruction of wild animals was paid, but after 3 or 4 months' confinement was released owing to bad health.
Pollock insisted upon his innocence, telling the justice presiding that he was sentencing an innocent man.
After his release he went to Thurlow I and worked for a logging camp. Last Thurs he left for Bear Rv, 20 miles distant. On Fri his body was found on the beach of Blind Channel. His boat bottom up was discovered some distance
off. An inquest may be held.

Jan 7 - The death of William Pollock, whose body was brought to Vancouver on Thurs from Thurlow I, proves to have been either murder or suicide, for a bullet hole was found in the head. Pollock, it will be remembered, was in poor health and naturally his sentence in gaol for forgery
must have made him despondent. The whole of the matter, however, is being investigated. [Found to be suicide]

JT/Feb 5, 1899 - Sgt J M Langley has returned from Heriot Bay, Valdez I, where he went on receiving information that H A Bull, storekeeper and postmaster, had been selling liquor without a license. The Sgt had considerable difficulty in securing a conviction, but finally did so. Bull being fined $200, $7.50 and $30, the amount of the license, which, however, does not allow him to sell liquor. The hearing was conducted before Mr Marshall, JP, of Shoal Bay. The trick resorted to by Bull in his effort to override the law was the old one of calling his premises a "club", and having all his customers register in a book. After each name was marked "$10 paid," intimating that all the "members" had paid fees. Bull admitted in court, however, that he paid the fees for them. He had a set of club by-laws and rules and regulations all drawn up according to law, and according to reports had been doing a rushing business for some time.

Mar 7, 1899, 5 - Died Mar 5 at V, Jacob Lenz, 81, n/o Kerpen, Germany. Founder of Lenz & Leiser, a sagacious and far-sighted commercial pioneer of BC. He married in Germany, and came then to Madison, Wisconsin until he moved here 25 years ago. This was at the time of the Cassiar gold rush, he formed a partnership with his son-in-law Simon Leiser and operated stores and trading posts at Telegraph, Tibbet's, McDame's and Dease creeks... They returned here 18 years ago and dissolved their business association. Lenz, and his son Moses, and s-i-l, late Gustav Leiser, founded the drygoods house of Lenz & Leiser. He was a tireless worker in every department of his business, his heart was in his home and business... Leaves 3 daughters, 1 son, his wife having died 20 years ago in San Francisco. In accordance with his wishes his body will be forwarded to CA for interment. Pg 8 - letter by John Grant about his friend Jacob Lenz...; Mar 8, 5 - Sent South for Burial...

JT/Mar 26, 1899, 1 - A month ago today a party consisting of 10 people left Alert Bay for Hornby I, in the sloop Thistle, commanded by its owner,
William Ford, since then they have not been seen, and now wreckage has been picked up south of Alert Bay, which is identical and has been recognized as a portion of the craft... William Ford, his aged mother, and two sisters, aged 18 and 15 respectively; Mrs
Harry Thames, her daughter Hilda, of 19, and three children of tender age.

Another woman, whose name
it was impossible to learn,
also embarked on the little craft. It is thought she was the d/o a Comox farmer... William Ford is a s/o William Ford, a wealthy farmer of Honolulu, and his mother was up north on a visit to her old homestead. The Thames' were a progressive farmer's family and neighbors of Mr Fletcher, residing at Qualicum....; Mar 28 - The 9th victim by the loss of sloop yacht Thistle is declared to have been Mrs Elijah Thompson, the d/o a Comox farmer and wife of a former Victorian who just now is trying his luck in the Atlin mining district....; Apr 8 - After all the commiseration that has been expressed for the unfortunate "victims" of the sloop yacht Thistle, it now develops that these 'victims' are still alive and as well as any other res/o BC. As a matter of fact they have at no time been in any danger, according to a letter which Sam Huston of Victoria, BC has just received from his son, Wes Huson, a res/o Alert Bay. Mr Huston says that the Ford-Thames party are still there with their yacht, having regarded the weather as too stormy to justify them in setting out for home. Whatever wreckage was picked up and 'positively identified' as belonging to their craft had never formed part of that staunch little sailer. YGold/May 7, 1899, 6 - Proprietor Leeson, Hotel Victoria tells of an old miner who had just come out after several yrs of roughing it and was assigned a room... Soon they heard strange thumping and scraping noises... he and night clerk went to investigate. 'What do you think was the matter? Why, the Klondiker was lying on the floor, persistently scraping and digging at the carpet with his heel - and sound asleep. We wakened him, and he apologized... He imagined he was still on the trail, and was trying to scrape away the snow and ice to make his bed comfortable. We helped him off with his boots and left him to scratch and scrape as long as he liked. Of course, he still slept on the floor. Perhaps very few know it, but a very large proportion of the old miners, though they take the best rooms a hotel has to offer, will never sleep in the beds. They may try it, but ultimately they take a blanket and go to sleep on the floor. They find it less 'suffocating' and more 'homelike and comfortable.'

Bryce and party of 6 had been teaming on trails to Bennett and Linderman for upwards of 6 wks, and had accomplished much work when forced to quit on disappearance of snow. They had 50 hd of horses engaged in the work, 25 of which they brought home with them, 14 they parted with at White Pass to Mr Macauley, who is still in the transportation business there, and the remainder are being used by Joseph Heaney and A M Bannerman on the Atlin trail. Only 4 head were lost during the season. Freight hauling paid 5 cents/lb from Log Cabin to Bennett, but the money was well earned, for in places the horses would sink to their ears in the soft, marshy ground when the ice gave way. 100T of steamboat supplies were hauled down to Bennett... There are now 700 to 800 men engaged on White Pass & Yukon RR beyond the summit...

May 28, 1899, 2 - Many of the first residents of Victoria will remember John Wesley Dissette, one of those bright actors and intelligent young men who came to BC in the early days and who for a time was connected with the Chronicle newspaper of this city. Mr Dissette, while in charge of the government telegraph office on San Juan I, died in 1868 of apoplexy. His body was interred in the old cemetery on Quadra st, but the grave was almost a nameless one, for there was no stone to mark the spot. Mr Dissette came from Bradford, ON, but his brother and other relatives had gone to the US, and had attained to prominent positions there. Mr J J Dissette has long been anxious to find his brothers grave, and has been in correspondence with persons in Victoria, BC to that end, culminating in obtaining sufficient information to encourage him to make the effort.

Yesterday Mr F W Lewis, of Indianapolis, an intimate friend of Mr Dissette, who is on a visit to this city, succeeded, with the help of some old personal friends of the deceased, who were present at the funeral, in locating the grave, reverently exhumed the remains and placed them in one of the prettiest spots in Ross Bay cemetery, where a small stone bearing the inscription

JpHx/Jun 1, 1899 - Again complaint has been made that fishermen on the way from Victoria to the Fraser river - principally Japanese - are in the habit of landing on Darcy I, the leper station, to spend the night. Residents of N Saanich state that a few mornings ago a large party of Japs could be seen on the island with their blankets hanging up to dry. This is bad enough, but there is a still more serious allegation made by people who are able to see the island from their homes. They say that almost invariably after the visit of the board of health boat with provisions for the lepers, a number of men visit the island in sealing boats, and the belief prevails that they take out opium to trade with the lepers for provisions supplied by the city. As the Chinamen are eager for 'dope', the white men are able to make profitable trades.

Died Jun 6, 1899 at Victoria, BC, Peter Leech, the pioneer engineer and surveyor. Came to BC with Royal Engineers, under Colonel Moody in 1858 and remained with the command at New Westminster until it was disbanded in 1862. He then engaged in the practice of his profession and was one of the party who surveyed the route for the overland telegraph line, which was to have extended through BC, Alaska, Siberia and Russia to the European capitals. The work was abandoned upon the completion of the Atlantic cable, and Leech entered service of HBC, taking charge of their Esquimalt post. Later he became city engineer for Victoria and took part in many important works through BC. A daughter survives him. Jun 8, 5 - I think it will not be amiss to recall to public mind, in addition to his other qualifications, the great abilities of late Leech as mathematician and astronomer; and also that he was entrusted with an important charge by late Governor Kennedy, who enlightened conduct gave an impetus to the progress of the colony. I allude to his payment through the government of $1 for every dollar subscribed by the public for the exploration of Vancouver Island. He entrusted Leech with the command of these parties, which resulted in the discovery of Leech River, and the addition of $100-150,000 to the wealth of the colony. Edward Mallandaine. Jun 10, 5 - ... was for many months engaged in the important work of determining the boundary between Bulgaria, Turkey and Austria, in which undertaking Russia, Great Britain, Italy and Austria were concerned. He was also one of the astronomers of the Royal Engineers under General (Chinese) Gordon, and was engaged near Mount Ararat - where the Ark is supposed to have rested - in the Garden of Eden and Erzeroum, Asia Minor. Until shortly before the appointment Leech was Victoria's city engineer. Many old pioneers attend funeral. RN/Jun 23, 1899 - The Esquimalt correspondent of the Naval and Military Record says: 'Naval men are, as a rule, somewhat sensitive with regard to the respect paid to their dead, and many will regret to learn that in a prominent position in Victoria there is an old cemetery, now disused, which shows every sign of neglect. The wooden railings around it are guiltless of paint, and are tumbling down, while inside the place is so overgrown with broom (which some enthusiastic person introduced into the island as a remembrance of home, but which has now become a nuisance), that only the tops of gravestones, or the highest monuments can be seen above it. The state of the graves is even more distressing. The place seems to be the dumping ground for refuse from the neighboring houses - old tins, bones, the skull of an ox, rags and other refuse being strewn about - while children wander over the place picking the wild flowers that grow there. Some of the graves are only marked by the sinking of the ground. But what more closely affects the navy is that one corner is devoted to the graves of officers and men principally from Sutlej, Topaze, Plumper and Satellite. Their shipmates have erected handsome monuments to them, and that of Satellite, dated 1860, is very conspicuous from the road, with its inscription relating to 'Her Magusty Ship' which has been altered as far as possible to the correct spelling. This cemetery does not seem to have been used for burials since 1873, and the naval graves are all within the 1860s, but although dating so far back it seems a pity that they should be allowed to be dishonored in this manner, when doubtless a small subscription would ensure their being kept in proper order. Even if the civil authorities, who are responsible for the maintenance of the place, are content to have such an eyesore in their city no doubt they would consent to this naval corner being railed off and maintained at the expense of the navy.'

Marine/Aug 4, 1899 - Henry Glide, of Erie street, will today celebrate the 46th anniversary of his arrival in Victoria on HBC steamer Otter. Mr Glide is, therefore, one of the oldest residents in Victoria, and still looks hale and hearty. Glide was born in England in 1835. In 1850 he began an apprenticeship with HBC, on bark Prince of Wales, and was transferred from there to steamer Otter in 1852, coming to the Pacific with her the following year. The voyage out was an eventful one for Glide. The captain was intoxicated almost continually from the time they left the Thames until well into the Pacific, and made such a long passage that all the crew, with the exception of Glide, were down with scurvy. This threw much additional work on the apprentice. Although the vessel left England in Dec, 1852, it was not until the following August that she entered the Straits. Here she narrowly escaped destruction, being caught by a strong tide and swept through between Tatoosh Island and the mainland, fortunately without injury, and on Aug 4 she reached Victoria. Glide continued in the service of HBC after his arrival, and received the 1st pilot's licence granted in BC. It was dated Jul, 1858, and was issued by Sir James Douglas and Captain Prevost of HMS Plumper. On Aug 8 of that year he sailed 8 barks and 2 schooners into Victoria harbour, all from San Francisco, and when they were discharged he took them out again, there being no tow boats in those days. In 1861 he married a daughter of late Robert Laing, who had joined her father at Victoria in 1854. Glide left the water several years ago, and at present is living in contented retirement in a snug cottage overlooking the entrance to the harbour into which he sailed 46 years ago.

Sep 20, 1899 - Sam Adler, who crossed the Thompson River on his way down from Cariboo 40 years ago this fall, having gone up via Lillooet and the Fraser River, spent a night in Ashcroft this week. Mr Adler has within the past 2 years visited Atlin, Dawson and the Northwest in general. He has probably done what no other man alive ever did. Forty years ago he rocked out the gold to make a wedding ring for the lady he afterwards married. Twenty years at Granite Creek he rocked out the gold that was made into his daughter's wedding ring, and this season, in Atlin, he again set to work with a rocker and rocked out enough gold to make a wedding ring for his granddaughter and presented it to her at her recent marriage. Can anyone equal this record?

Oct 11, 1899 - Poor old Martin Willis, 71, n/o Boston, MA, who for yrs was known to everyone who called for a hack on the Victoria stand, and concerning whose admission to the Old Men's Home considerable discussion arose in city council lately has shelved all question regarding his disposition. He died Oct 9, and was buried Oct 10, pallbearers: George Winter, J Rowe, S W Eastman, R Margetts, H G Brown, Dan McCallum. Deceased had been one of the pioneers of 1860, mining in Cariboo, Cassiar and Omineca. Afterwards he engaged in service as a hackman at Victoria driving for J W Williams, and later for K Transfer Co, a corporation which in their treatment of their old employee in his latter days, somewhat contradicted the popular impression that companies 'have no souls.' They cared for the veteran tenderly, and carried him on for yrs without complaint. Deceased was n/o Boston, MA, and so far as known has no living relatives. E 001 W 17

Legal/Died Oct 10, 1899 at Victoria, BC, a pioneer whose personality is inseparable from the early history of BC and the stern and just administration of law and order in the old colonial days, Benjamin Evans, or 'Judge' Evans, as he had been affectionately christened by his acquaintances of the bench and bar, was n/o Glamorganshire, Wls, aged c 70.

He came here in 1861, a combination of all the excellencies possessed by the thorough Old Country family servant, and it was not long after that he attached himself in the capacity of general factotum to late Chief Justice Begbie, whose inseparable companion he was thereafter, on circuit or at headquarters.

The forceful old Knight would go nowhere without 'Evans' to drive or care for him, or to see to his dogs or guns, or his gown and wig; on the other hand, Sir Matthew was to Evans the incarnation of wisdom, power and authority. He was proud to serve him throughout his life, and when death closed the eyes of the rugged pioneer of the judiciary, none mourned him more sincerely than did Evans. Indeed, it was at the death of the Chief Justice that his own health commenced to fail, and week by week his stalwart frame grew less and less able to resist the infirmities of advancing yrs. A yr or more ago he ceased to be a characteristic feature of the courts of justice, where he had presided as chief usher for more than 30 yrs, superannuation on a substantial pension enabling him to spend his latter days in comfort at the cosy farmhouse-home he had made for himself, overlooking picturesque Cadboro Bay. There his dogs, his fruits, his vegetable garden furnished occupation for his restless mind and active body. Nor did the time hand heavily when with a friend of earlier days as auditor he found opportunity to live again in fancy the days when he and the old Chief Justice were both the interpreters and administrators of justice in a wilderness of isolated communities and dangerous, lawless men. It was then that Ben Evans' great resources of tact, nerve and courage had won for him the affection of the leonine Sir Matthew, an affection that endured until the death of that strong entity of BC's infancy.

The late Mr Evans leaves a widow and family of 4 - Mrs Ira Wilson, Mrs Bragg, Mrs Boyce and Harry Evans - all grown up and making their homes near the old place at Cadboro Bay. It is in token of respect to the departed pioneer that the flag flies half-mast high over the courts of justice. Pallbearers: Sir Henry P Pellew Crease, Hon Mr Justice Drake, Hon C E Pooley, QC, MPP, Hon D M Eberts, QC, MPP, J W Bland, of the Law Courts and O C Bass, of the A/G's office. M 078 E F

Music/Died at Livermore, CA,
Oct 23, 1899, William Greig, 42, n/o Eng. Organizer and conductor of Victoria's famed Arion Club he had been in CA
in a vain endeavor to win back his failing health. He came of famous musical stock, both a brother and an uncle having achieved enviable distinction
as composers and interpreters of works of the highest order...
When but a boy he was found wielding the conductor's baton
at his early home in Manchester, where for a time
he had the sole direction of the Manchester Choral Union. On coming to US his musical education was further evidenced, a choral club at Berkeley, CA claiming him

for a time as director. Then upon his coming to Victoria he speedily recognized the excellence of the local male voice material... Funeral at San

Nov 1, 1899, 5 - Died Oct 30
at New Westminster, BC,
James Phillips, 73, n/o
Cornwall, England. Deceased lived there until he was 26,
when he went out to Australia, and for 2 or 3 years engaged in mining. He then returned home, but when the news of the gold excitement on the Fraser River reached him, he decided to come and try his fortune in BC. He married Miss Ladner, sister of W H & T E Ladner, of Ladner. In the spring of 1860 he left England, accompanied by his wife and child (Mr J E Phillips) and his 2 sons-in-law (Mrs W J Armstrong and Miss Ladner), the latter of whom died about 13 years ago, reaching Victoria on May 23. Later late Mr Phillips went to New Westminster and proceeded to Fort Hope with the idea of meeting the Messrs Ladner, who were then engaged in business in the Upper Country. Learning that they had been delayed in the interior, Mr Phillips returned to Victoria and took up a farm in North Saanich. The severity of the winter of 1861-62 having killed most of his stock, he closed down his farm and himself went into the Cariboo country to mine, in company with Mr C G Major and late Messrs J J Jeffree, J H Todd and others. After two seasons of mining Mr Phillips returned to his farm at Saanich and resided there until 1874. In Feb, 1875, he was appointed to a position on the staff of the provincial insane asylum in Victoria, and on that institution being removed to New Westminster in 1878, he was appointed superintendent, a position he held for several years, until a medical superintendent being appointed he was made bursar. Of the deceased's own family, a brother, John, still lives on the old Cornish homestead; another brother, Matthew, with a maiden sister, also resides on an English farm, and another sister died there a few months ago, aged 76.

The children of the deceased, J E Phillips, Miss Phillips and Matthew J Phillips, survive him, the wife and mother having died in Jan, 1893.

Fire/Bldg/Nov 1, 1899, 33 - Old Hook and Ladder House on Government st being torn down - One of the 1st, if not the 1st, building erected by the citizens of Victoria as a body is being torn down to make room for a modern business block. In the summer of 1859 fire destroyed a block at the crnr/o Johnson/Government sts, entailing a loss of $13,000. The fire might easily have been checked had there been proper fire-fighting apparatus, but the only engine in town was owned by the HBC and managed by the police. The Colonist, then as now taking a leading part in everything looking to the advancement of the city, urged that a volunteer fire dept be organized. The result was a meeting held on Oct, 1859, and the organization of the Union Hook & Ladder Co. The town was canvassed and sufficient money secured to erect a building on HBC property, just below the site of the present board of trade building. Of the men who organized the company there is now but one living, Mr W H Oliver, of San Francisco. Then yrs after it was built the bldg was moved to Government st, where it stood until yesterday, when workmen commenced to pull it down to make room for Mr Vernon's new block. It was vacated by the fire dept in 1890, 4 yrs after the city took over the apparatus of the 3 volunteer fire companies.

Chief Deasy yesterday had a photograph taken of the old bldg, and also secured the name-plate and a piece of the wood, with which to make a gavel for the Pacific Coast Assn of Fire Chiefs. The Chief himself was a member of the Union Hook and Ladder co, joining as a member of the lantern brigade - a body of youngsters who carried lanterns to fires - in 1869, when he was but 12 yrs old. He worked his way to the front, being foreman of the parent company when elected asst chief of the Victoria fire dept. Since the time he carried the lantern the Victoria firemen have responded to 2,000 alarm, and from few of them was Chief Deasy absent.

The bell which called the men of the Union Hook and ladder Co in the old days now does service in the Yates st fire hall, and their old truck is part of the apparatus of the Jubilee hospital.

Dec 9, 1899, 5 - Chief Deasy

and members of the Victoria fire dept were gracefully reminded of faithful services performed and of the season yesterday by a letter from Samuel N Reid:

'Now that the Christmas season is again upon us, and not forgetting the valuable service rendered by yourself and the 'boys' in Apr last, will you and each of your members accept at my hands a small token in the way of suspenders made especially for firemen by the Dominion Suspender Co, which I trust will aid the 'boys' to 'brace up' and thoroughly enjoy themselves during the holiday season.' Chief Deasy in an appreciative reply remarks that 'we 'shoulder' a great deal of responsibility, but when 'braced up' by the good opinion of our citizens the weight seems light.'

Dec 9, 1899, 6 - The Pioneers Entertain... Last evening, in the spacious dining room of the Dominion hotel, there assembled the remaining members located in Victoria of the gallant band of pioneers, who in the early days - before the sound of the iron horse had been heard in western America - crossed the great continent or came 'round the Horn' to seek their fortunes in BC...

Old Father time is fast calling across the great divide the old pioneers, and many a familiar face was missing from last night's festive board, where song and jest and story enlivened the evening and indicated how in the olden days merry gatherings of a similar character broke the monotony of the miners' lives...

Proprietor Jones, of the Dominion, was the subject of warm congratulation during the evening...

Among those present were the following: Lt-Gov McInnes, US Consul, Hon A E Smith, Premier Semlin, Mayor Redfern, G N Ablett, W P Allen, Capt Bucknam, A L Belyea, QC, James W Blane, John Butts, I Braverman, James Blackburn, J Baker, J Clearihue, Charles W D Clifford, MPP, J Christensen, E Dickson, C A Gregg, G L Gerow, Col F B Gregory, W T Hardaker, Richard Hall, MPP, Ald Hayward, Ald Humphrey, Charles Haltz, John B Lovell, C H Lugin, F Gilchrist, James Muirhead, Ald MacGregor, Dr Milne, Neil McArthur, E Metcalf, R Mitchell, W H Pooley, E Pearson, E E Wootton, A Graham, Thomas Russell, Andrew Ruster, Gordon Smith, H I Shotbolt, J Stuart Yates, H R Young, Andrew Tolmie, N Shakespeare, James J Sargiment, H D Helmcken, QC, MPP...

Dec 12, 1899, 4 - Editorial - Chief of Police... Shepard will retire from office... he has been 23 yrs in the service of the city, at a salary that has not averaged $100 a month. He is advanced in yrs and can hardly hope successfully to embark in any new line of work. That he has not been able to save enough out of his pay to live upon is what everyone would expect. That he should be sent adrift in his old age without any resources would be unjust. No man who has worked for his fellow citizens for nearly 25 yrs ought to be dismissed in his old age without some provision being made for him.

During the yrs that he has been at the head of the police dept, Mr Sheppard has, in addition to his other duties, acted as Chinook interpreter and in many cases as prosecuting officer. In these capacities he has saved the citizens a good deal of money. This yr there have been nearly 100 cases in which he has acted as interpreter. When he is unable to act the fee to an interpreter is $2.50, which is certainly not unreasonable. After he retires from the position the city will be to the expense of from $200 to $500 a yr to pay for an interpreter, unless the incoming chief happens to be able and willing to speak Chinook...

Died Dec 14, 1899 at V,
Daniel McDonald Gordon, 62, known as Sgt Gordon through his claim that he had been a non-comm officer in 93rd Sutherland Highlanders. As soon as it was learned that Gordon was dying Supt Hussey rushed to the gaol in the hope that the dying man would clear up the mystery surrounding the murder of Mrs Bings on the Indian reserve, for the police suspected that Gordon knew more than anyone else. However, he was too far gone to make a statement.

Suspicion first attached to him
a few days after the murder
when he offered his services
as a private detective to the police. He haunted the hdqts and finally led the police to the spot where the skirt belonging to the dead woman was found, although the police had previously made a diligent search without success. This seemed so suspicious that the police made a search of Gordon's cabin and in a tub of water found a lot of clothes,
which, however, were so filthy
and had been in the water for so long that nothing could be made of them.

There was another circumstance that made the police suspect Gordon. On the night of the murder a man
answering Gordon's
description was seen by Mrs Bales of Victoria W as she left the RR bridge to proceed home through the Indian reserve. The man peered into her face, followed her a short distance and then returned towards the bridge. A woman supposed to be Mrs Bings crossed the bridge at the same time as Mrs Bales, but instead of proceeding along the sidewalk went along the RR track. When halfway through the reserve Mrs Bales heard a scream and stopped, but the wind being high she could not hear anything more.

Statements attributed to Gordon show that he was a mental pervert on the subject of women.

Deceased was over 6' and built like a giant. He was a mem/o BC provincial police force for a short time and took a hand at prospecting but latterly lived by doing odd jobs. He gave so many accounts of his life
before coming here, that it is impossible to say what his occupation was. Both his ears were cut off, he said in battle, but others said as punishment
for some crime.

He was in gaol for stealing a pipe, having served 2 wks of the 2 mos for which he was sentenced. Dec 17, 5 - police have taken charge of the effects of deceased, and will communicate with his relatives in Sct. Papers found show that he was 71+, and the scars on his body show that he had seen active service, as he claimed.

Died Dec, 1899 at Victoria, BC, Felix Leslouis, 84, n/o Dieppe, France. Deceased arrived here in 1858 with the rush of goldseekers from CA. He identified with active mining on the Fraser and Thompson rivers and in Cariboo, after which he accepted a position as gauger for the HBC, a position which he occupied for upwards of 20 years. Old-timers will recollect the deceased more particularly as one who took a leading part in amateur theatricals and a singer of note in his native tongue. 'Le Beau Nicholas' was one of his favourites and the walls of the old Theatre Royal, formerly situated on Government street, have resounded again and again with the encores of theatre-goers of those old days. The announcement that he was going to appear on the stage was in those days a guarantee of a crowded house. Deceased was one of the founders of the French hospital, of which institution he was an active member until the same was taken over by the Jubilee hospital. One daughter, wife of Mr A Borde, city water collector, survives him. Pallbearers: A E McDonald, John McTiernan, T M Brayshaw, C A Lombard, J Coigdarippe, A Casanave. A 073 E 21

Feb 23, 1900, 2 - William Everett Reynolds, a well known young Victorian, was assassinated in Pariana, Mex, Jan 21, 1900 by a Mexican. A letter was received by the young man's mother, Mrs G Petherick, of Bay st, from William Mitchell, of La Gram Bretana, Mex. It appears that Reynolds was standing in a store in Pariana when a man fired 2 shots, one of which inflicted the fatal wound. The next morning the owner of the quartz mine, in which Reynolds had been working,
was informed of the outrage,
and immediately despatched a special train to Ozaco, the nearest city, for a physician, who unfortunately arrived too late to be of any avail.
Reynolds was removed from

Ozaco and died there on the 23rd.

½ yrs ago to join his step-brother, William Petherick, who was mgr of a quartz mine owned by Mr Morse, an American capitalist. On arriving at Pariana Reynolds found employment, and through faithful performance of his duties he was soon promoted to the position of asst supervisor. Letters were received from him in which he spoke of the brightness of his prospects. He was left in charge of the mines last autumn, when Mr Petherick went to Eng for a rest. William was c 23, n/o Victoria. After leaving school he was employed for several yrs in Henry Saunders' grocery store,
and was also with John Piercy & Co. He assisted his stepfather, Mr G Petherick, in executing the ornamental work in the parliament bldgs, just before he went south.
He leaves his mother, Mrs G Petherick, 2 brothers, George and Frank, and 2 sisters. His grandparents, Mr/Mrs Branch, reside in Cadboro Bay Dist and are well known throughout the city.

Recent letters from young Reynolds speak of several fatal shooting affairs in Pariana,
which is situated in a lawless district. Petherick/Reynold plot

May 2, 1900, 3 - Jack Levin is dead. Jack was not, as his name might imply, a man, but simply a field spaniel, who for many years made his headquarters at the city police
stn. He belonged to late Sgt Levin, and when that officer died the dog took up his res at 70 N Park st, where he was born, although he paid regular and frequent visits to the police stn, and occasionally took a round of the beats. He died and was buried with full honors by the officers. With the old time officers Jack was quite a pet, and there were always a few delicate morsels kept for him at the stn.

May, 3, 1900 - The many friends of Mr D McKinnon,
the WC prospector and miner,
were greatly shocked when news was received that that gentleman had died suddenly at Alberni of heart disease.
The shock is all the greater as it is but a few days since Mr McKinnon was in Victoria, apparently in the best of health. To the deceased is due much of the credit for proving to the world the mining possibilities of the WCVI, and particularly Clayoquot. He came to BC from Frankly, WA, where he had been working in the coal mines.
After spending several yrs in the mines around Nanaimo he took to the hills on the WC
and located many properties,
in which he interested capital.
He was considered one of the coming wealthy men of BC,
and in fact was already realizing the reward of several yrs of labor and hardship
when death intervened. Mr McKinnon had about completed arrangements for the outfitting of a sch to take a party to Cape Nome. His death is a material loss to VI,
as he had the confidence of a number of capitalists, whom he interested in the Island mines.

Bldg/Jun 3, 1900, 2 - She Pulled His Whiskers - Mrs Drowskewicz Makes Things Interesting for the Sanitary Officer's Staff - the Passing of 97 Pandora St and What Occurred as it Passed - Among a number of shacks which were neither things of beauty nor institutional calculated to improve the attractiveness of the city, was one dirty looking one-storey frame building with broken windows and general tumble-down appearance, known as No 97 Pandora st. Some 4 or 5 wks ago the sanitary inspector came to the conclusion that the structure was a menace to public health and so he notified the council. They ordered the building to be destroyed, together, together with a number of Chinatown shacks. The Chinese eyesores were promptly eradicated, but the Pandora st one remained - much to the regret of the nearby residents.

Mrs Drowskewicz is, or was, the owner of the condemned building, and she was far from being willing to allow it to be destroyed. She fought for the hovel tooth and nail, and the destruction was again and again postponed. It was a sight to see the owner of the building in close conversation with one of the city fathers on the curbstones, her hands going and her shrill voice pitched as high as the range would permit, pleading for the building. The civic solons, however, were obdurate for they had also talked with the sanitary inspector as well as the lady in the black straw hat, the Paisley shawl, black gingham dress, and the ever-present bundle. The shack was to go and yesterday was the day fixed for the destruction.

Daylight was just breaking when Inspector Wilson and 4 of his staff marched up Pandora st, armed with axes, spades and other utensils for the work. They had gone early, in the hope of finding Mrs Drowskewicz wrapped in the arms of Morpheus, and thus being able to execute their work in peace.

Peace reigned for about one brief minute. With the first crash of the axes on the back door of the doomed building, she rushed from her domicile, next door and then the overture ended and the comedy began.

There was a flow of language anyone who has heard an irate woman knows what kind of a flow and the workers stopped, saved one. He raised his axe to renew the work of destruction, and then there was a swish of petticoats, as the early-rising landed proprietor swept across and grasped a large handful of his beard. She gave the whiskers a quick tug, and down went the axe. He had to drop it to protect his whiskers. What would have happened to that unfortunate weather vane on the workman's chin can scarcely be conjectured, had not a fellow-workman rushed to the rescue and drawn the attack upon himself. He was reaching out to disentangle her hands from the beard when he got a left hook just below the ear, and had he not fallen back would have gotten a swing on the nose. His punishment though allowed his friend to get free, and the operations allowed the others to proceed somewhat with the destruction of the building. The back was all but out of the building and the lady soon realized that despite her fistic ability, the building would be destroyed, so she desisted from efforts at physical suasion and stood by, saying things, as the house went down.

Soon its timbers were all in a heap, and she retired, as the workmen carried the debris to a vacant lot nearby, where it is to be burned. Thus passed 97 Pandora st, the much beloved shack of Mrs Drowskewicz.

Along this route, he states, a good deal of freight is being packed this year, the boom, if such it might be called, being occasioned in part by the Canadian telegraph party, as well as by the increased mining activity in that far-off district... Messrs Veith & Borland, though they have sold out their interests at the 150, where they have carried on business since 1867, still retain their establishments at the Forks and Keithley Creek, as well as some ranching and mining interests at Williams Lake. Jun 20, 1900, 3 - Mrs Walker's friends heard of her sudden death on board Sarmatian on her voyage from Eng. Mrs Walker lived at Victoria, BC for nearly 12 yrs. During the greater part of that time she filled the position of matron of the Protestant Orphanage. When she took charge of the old home on Rae st the little ones whose lonely, neglected lives were to be cheered and controlled by her wise, motherly care, formed only a comparatively small band, but when she laid aside her work, almost 1 ½ yrs ago, feeling that she had remained at her post as long as duty required it, the large new orphanage held a family of nearly 60 children. No one who has not tried it can have any conception of what it means to have sole charge and care of such a number of children, but no visitor, however thoughtless, could help admiring the firmness, kindness and tact with which Mrs Walker controlled the children, and the cheerful industry with which she led her little band of helpers to accomplish tasks which older and more skillful hands would have hesitated to begin. In private life Mrs Walker was one of the most loveable of women. [leaves a daughter at Victoria]

another of the old-timers who came to Victoria in the days of the gold rushes of the 1850's. The old gentleman had just risen from his bed and was dressing when the fuse of his life gave out. Deceased was a Mason for the past 30 years, and had risen in the order until he held the highest position attainable in the province. He was born in Tregero Farm, Viryoun, County Cornwall, England, and when of age he went to London, where he spent 5 years. Then he joined one of the stampedes of the Argonauts of those days and went to Tasmania, practising his profession - that of architect and builder - in the wake of mining rushes. In 1848 he followed the goldseekers to CA, the then Eldorado, and 10 years later came to Victoria. Here he followed his profession and was very successful, some of the well-known local buildings having been planned by him. Bank of BNA, Pritchard House and other city structures are among his works. He was twice married, his 1st wife having died 14 years ago. His 2nd wife, Elizabeth, survives him. His only other relations here are his stepson John Richards, and Mrs McDonald, sister of his 1st wife. His other relatives are in Cornwall.

Late Mr Trounce, who was a good type of an upright, sterling English gentleman, for 3 years held the position of councillor, or, as it is now designated, alderman. A large estate is left. Pallbearers: R B McMicking, A McKeown, E Harrison, D Wilson, John Teague, T Shotbolt. G 035/036

Bldg/Sep 21, 1900, 5 - At the rear of the old barn on Broad st which was destroyed at the suggestion of the health authorities a few days ago, is one of the 1st bldgs erected in Victoria. This bldg was the Pioneer bakery. Here is still found the large oven where was baked the bread for HBC and their employees. The baker died recently in the Old Men's Home. He was known to all the old-timers as 'Jimmy the Baker' [James Sewell?], although he was brought out by the company, there are few who recall any other name. He was always 'Jimmy the Baker.' The old-time bakery is now occupied as a storehouse.

Died Sep 15, 1900 at San Francisco, CA Mr W H Oliver, one of the largest owners of Victoria realty. Deceased was hardly known in Victoria, in which he was so largely interested, residing here for but 4 years - from 1858 to 1862 - and being a very infrequent visitor since. During his residence here and at different intervals afterwards he purchased considerable property in the heart of the city, and some in the suburbs. He was one of Victoria's largest taxpayers. Mr Oliver was n/o New Brunswick, and was well advanced in years.

Died Jun 29, 1900 at Burton Manor, Burton Wilts, Gloucestershire, Eng, Charles M Beak. In the young yrs of this province few men were better liked or more widely known than 'Charley' Beak. In the early 1860's he engaged in the butchering business on Williams Ck, made money rapidly and branched out extensively in ranching, stock-raising, dairying and dealing in all kinds of livestock, most of which he brought from OR. He soon became a financial power between Lac La Hache valley and Cariboo country.

About 1880 Mr Beak disposed of his up-country interests and settled in Nicola valley as rancher and stockraiser, founding the now extensive Douglas Lk Cattle Co, in which he remained some yrs as a partner, but on selling out to the firm for a large sum, he moved to OR, where he lived for some yrs. Subsequently he and his family all went to Eng, where he bought a residential estate...Sep 25, 1900, 3.

ChHx/Sep 28, 1900, 2 - Cheng Yin Huan, who, as announced in the despatches, was one of the officials beheaded by order of the Empress Dowager, for his pro-foreign leaning, will be remembered by Victorians as the dignitary who strenuously objected to being bathed at the quarantine stn. Huan was on his way to London to attend Qn Victoria's Diamond Jubilee. He crossed the Pacific on one of the Empresses, and arriving at quarantine, was ordered to undergo the usual bathing treatment accorded to all the passengers. He objected, and there was considerable correspondence between the Chinese Ambassador in London, Lord Salisbury and the federal government, before Huan could be induced to take his bath. This, it might be thought, would help to make him anti-foreign, but probably the treatment he received in London offset this, and hence his untimely death.

Murder/Oct 20, 1900, 5 - Whalen Pardoned - Lawrence Whalen, who early in 1891 was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of David F Fee, has been pardoned and is again a free man, having served scarcely 10 yrs of his sentence. He was liberated 2 months ago, but so quietly was it done that not until within the last few days was the news known in Victoria. The crime for which Whalen was sentenced will for many yrs remain fresh in the memory of Victorians, the victim being one of the city's most popular young men. He had been to an entertainment in Philharmonic hall, and was on his way to midnight mass in the Catholic church, which has since been turned into Institute hall. While passing the crnr View/Blanchard sts he was shot down by Whalen, who was nightwatchman at St Andrew's cathedral, then in course of erection. The weapon used was a shotgun, borrowed that evening by Whalen. The trial was a sensational one, lasting for several days, there being a good deal of evidence produced to prove that the murder was premeditated, but that the wrong man was shot. It is believed that a petition was sent to the Minister of Justice, asking that a pardon be granted. After his release Whalen lost no time crossing to the States. He was seen in Seattle on Labor Day, and it is believed he is still there.

Other pardons have been granted in this secretive manner, even to police being left to find out for themselves that criminals have been set at large.

Died Dec 10, 1900 at Los Angeles, CA, Louis Vigelius, the well known capitalist. Deceased was n/o Bavaria, where he was born 62 yrs ago. He emigrated to US in boyhood and came to Victoria in 1862, establishing here a barber shop, which is still carried on by his brother, A Vigelius. By close attention to business, he made quite a fortune, which he invested in realty in Victoria and vicinity, being one of the larger holders of property. Mr Vigelius held the confidence of the people of Victoria to a marked degree, being elected on 10 different occasions as a member of the aldermanic board for Centre and North wards. He took a great interest in the affairs of the city, from active participation of which he has been kept by ill-health for a number of yrs. For a while he resided on his farm at Metchosin, but the last few winters has gone to CA. A widow, 3 brothers in Victoria and 2 brothers and a sister in Portland survive him. Bldg/Dec 14, 1900, 8 - Cabin Men Burned Out - The large wooden bldg on Humboldt st, made up of 3 tiers, containing 28 cabins, in which lived longshoremen, laborers and other cabin men, was the scene of a well attended fire yesterday. There were fully 2,000 spectators on the bridge, and on the galleries on the opposite side of the street...

It was about 3:15 when the fire started. 'Bill Nye,' that picturesque longshoreman, who is far better known by that sobriquet than by Thomas Chaplain, his seldom-used name...noticed smoke coming from the cabin below. Not long after that, Bill Nye was obliged to fly from his cabin, which is on the 2nd floor by flames bursting through the floor...

The bldg is but 1-storey on the Humboldt st elevation, and runs down step by step until there are 3 and some room to spare at the James Bay frontage. Stored there are a fleet of fishing boats of the Japanese, but these were not injured, the Japanese having cast them loose from their moorings and poled them out to safety. The Japanese have the lower cabins...

Among those who have been burned out are many well known on the waterfront. Prominent among them are 'Bill Nye' - the long-haired, gaunt man, with the eternal waterproof; 'Rock Hammer Billy,' Mike McHugh and 'Old Man' Murray. Some being absent, lost their gear, and others managed to get some of their goods out before the flames drove them out.

'Bill Nye', who, although a picture of abject poverty, is the wealthiest of all the cabin men, was more perturbed by the loss of his bank book than anything else, and was eagerly asking if the bank would pay him without the book. He managed to get his bags of silver and coin, which he kept in the cabin, safely away. This money he keeps in long cotton bags, tied with shoelaces or string, and he had one of these bags in every pocket when he ran from the burning cabin. He says he lost a large collection of postage stamps and a number of valuable curios, as well as much of his gear. His losses will be heavier than any of the others, for he was, if anything, a miser, while the others who suffered usually think it a long while between pay days, and have little property at the end of the week other than a roll of blankets and a few days' provisions.

Thomas Chaplain, otherwise 'Bill Nye,' and sometimes 'Tom Snooks,' is a character. He has property in London, Eng, and Aus, and, according to those who should know, it is said that he has over $10,000 in cash. He usually carries $1,000 or more on his person. He came here 7 yrs ago from Honolulu, and has lived most of the time in the same cabin, which he never troubled about sweeping out, and there was quite an accumulation on the floor. At the Hawaiian Islands he lived on the beach, and does here, too, as far as practicable. He is well known among the longshore fraternity.

Among his losses was his canoe, which sometimes was converted into a catamaran, and that carved-out barrel, in which he performed aquatic feats during the summer season. These had been crowded into the room for the winter, when the water was too cold for 'Bill's' improved oars, those which nature gave him.

Although having so much money and realty, 'Bill Nye' will not patronize any hatter to replace the hat lost in the fire. He has already accepted a promise of an old one. He also does not patronize barbers, but shaves himself - sometimes - and does not bother about his hair. While his noted namesake had none, he has and to spare. It hangs in clusters of raven black over the ragged collar of his torn black waterproof, without which he is seldom seen summer or winter. 'Bill' is indeed a character - a picturesque miser.

Died Dec 21, 1900 at Victoria, BC, Joseph William McKay, 72, n/o Albany River, Canada. Pioneer of Pioneers. The surviving pioneers of Victoria, and indeed of the whole of BC as well, will regret to learn of the sad event that marked the noon of yesterday, namely, the death of Joseph W McKay of this city. Well known from end to end of the province, he had numberless friends everywhere, whose constant sympathy followed him in his long illness of the past several months, and who now join with his family and relatives in mourning his loss.

For the greater part of the present yr Mr McKay, whose long life spent in pioneering in the west, had in spite of all its hardships scarcely affected his remarkable bodily strength and mental activity had suffered from an affection of the heart, which crept on with old age, and for some weeks his death has been almost daily expected, and it was only apparently by the continual sapping of sickness that the grim reaper achieved his victory.

There are but few of the pioneers of the coast left to recall the days when Mr McKay came westwards from Ft Garry in the employ of the great company, as the HBC has been justly called. With the exception of some 3 or 4 of the old timers, all of them found him here on their arrival, and prominent as many of these stalwarts have been in the making of Canada's westernmost province, it has fallen to the lot of but few of them to be so closely connected with the beginnings of her industries or to have performed such important services both of a political and commercial sort as have fallen to his lot.

Joseph McKay was born away back on the Albany river in 1829. There his father was a clerk in the HBC service, and so after being educated at the Red River he embarked in the same service, and following the long trail westward with Mr J A Grahame of this city, he crossed the mountains and descended the Columbia rv to the then headquarters of the company at Vancouver, WA. Here he entered the maritime service, but was soon sent with Capt Gordon Park and Lt Peel, a s/o the great Sir Robert, to traverse the country then in dispute between Gt Britain and the US. Starting from Cowlitz, the little party crossed country to the Columbia, and although Mr McKay when alive declared that the officers were vastly impressed with the possibilities of that vast region, it was upon their evil report that the International boundary was allowed to come 400 miles too far north.

Coming over to Victoria, which had been founded but a year before, he left marine and entered the trading service, and through his great natural parts and his ability to acquire command of the Indian dialects, he rapidly rose in the ranks until he became a chief trader.

While acting in that capacity, it is learned from Bancroft's History of BC that in 1846 he was given charge of the north coast trading establishments, under the supervision, of course, of Sir James Douglas. There the situation was far from secure. The rival Russian trading companies often tempered with the natives, and on one or two occasions almost succeeded in inciting them to a general massacre of the English. Their animosity was by no means lessened by the fact that, after Mr McKay became settled at Ft Simpson, less and less of the coast furs went their way. From far-off Alaska the Indians were induced to bring their furs down to a Stikine port, and that in spite of Russian threats and Russian warships. Of one of these large purchases a rather good story is told. The Chimayans and the Tongass tribes being at war, the Russian factor, Etholin, came down to Bella Bella to enlist

Mr McKay's influence in staying the savage feud. While at dinner Mr McKay was informed that a large fleet, well laden with furs, had surreptitiously come down from the Russian side to trade. The corner was a close one, but the resources of the HBC servant were quite equal to the refreshment, for, remembering the Russian appetite for English rum, fresh bottles were ordered, and of the single gallon then in store at that point, little was left when the enemy was stretched hors de combat. But it was done, and the valuable cargo went to London instead of Moscow.

In 1849 Mr McKay's geological turn of mind led him to the honor of founding the Black Diamond city. The story of the Indian and the coals on the blacksmith's forge - which is too well known to need repetition - led him to visit the place where Nanaimo now stands, with a prospecting party, about May, 1850, and upon his report John Muir (the f/o the patriarchs of Sooke), and his men were brought down from Ft Rupert and the operations of coal mining got under way. Mr Muir's force was but a small one, but his knowledge and skill in directing it soon led to the taking out of 2,000 tons, and in May of 1853 the 1st shipload was sent to San Francisco by the ship William, where it sold for $28/ton. It was to protect this infant industry that, under Mr McKay's direction, the famous bastion at Nanaimo was erected. Immediately after this he undertook a closer survey of the country between Victoria and Nanaimo, and is reported to have found colours of gold in several of the streams in that district.

In 1856 the 1st legislature of the colony was elected, the names of the '7 fit and discreet men' as the Imperial memo had it, being John Muir, of Sooke, Thomas Skinner and J S Helmcken of Esquimalt, John F Kennedy of Nanaimo, and J D Pemberton, James Yates and E E Langford, of Victoria. The return of Mr Langford being declared void on the ground of an insufficient property qualification, Mr McKay was selected in his place, and his demise leaves but one survivor of that historic body.

A few yrs later he was appointed factor at Kamloops, and took up the men and machinery to construct a steamer there. Jackass mtn, on the other side of Lytton, proved a hard place to handle their heavy load, and one man's life was lost in crossing it; but they pushed on, and the steamboat was afterwards built - the 1st steamer on Kamloops lk and the Thompson and Shuswap waters. From Kamloops Mr McKay went down to Yale, where he took charge of the company's transport business, and soon afterwards was given the supervision of the company's retail stores in this city, where he resided until he left the service in 1873.

At that time he entered the Indian department, succeeding late Mr Moffatt, and after yrs of service in the head office here, was given the superintendence of the Kamloops district. This he held until some 6 yrs ago, when he again sought the city with so many steps in whose existence he has so intimately been connected, and accepted a position in the Indian office here.

By those who knew him the deceased was well liked. Possessed of much tact and self-taught to a large extent, his abilities were far above the ordinary, and his pleasant smile and sterling integrity will be long remembered by both of the races with whom he had so much to do.

He married a Miss Holmes, of Aus, and leaves 4 daughters and a son, J W McKay, a mining engineer of Nelson.

Jan 5, 1901 - The remains of Robert James Abrahams, or as he was known to Victorians, Robert James Gray, are to be removed from the pauper's section of Ross Bay cemetery and given a burial commensurate with the position in life to which he was born, but which in latter yrs, he did not live up to. Gray, or Abraham, it will be remembered, lived for yrs in a shanty facing Ross Bay. One evening his body, badly cut and bruised, was found on the beach at the foot of the cliff, not far from his home. The conclusion was arrived at that he had fallen over the cliff during one of his midnight walks, and a coroner's jury brought in a verdict of accidental death. Among the papers were found letters from E W Abrahams, of a large firm carrying on business at St Dunstan's Hill, London, Eng, and Chief Langley therefore sent word of the death of Mr Abrahams. He received an answer in which Mr Abrahams said the dead man was his brother and that Gray was an assumed name. Why he had assumed the name and lived as he did, alone and in a shack was not stated. It was evidently not want that had driven him to it, for the writer inquires whether a will had been left, suggesting that his brother had something to leave. There was a document in form of a will left, but it was not signed. Friends of the family have undertaken to give the remains a respectable burial. P 095 W G

He went to Cariboo when that district was attracting Argonauts from all parts of the world, and during his absence burglars broke into the bank, which was in charge of Mr Waddell, the general manager, and cleaned out the vaults.

This caused the bank to fail, and in 1865 Mr MacDonald returned to CA, where he resided up to the time of his death. He was n/o Scotland, and was a CA pioneer of 1849. Deceased was greatly respected by the early residents of this city.

Died Feb 23, 1901 at Victoria, BC, James Adam Mahood, aged 58, n/o St Andrew's, NB. a surveyor and explorer, who had done so much to open up to the world the little known portions of this province and other parts of the Pacific coast. Mr Mahood, during his 30 yrs' residence here, had visited almost every section of the province, and generally in advance of other white men, being engaged on many of the exploratory surveys carried on by the government. His greatest work, though, was in connection with the dream of the early 1860's, the overland telegraph line from the Atlantic seaboard of America, across the continent to BC, up the coast to Alaska and across Behring straits to Siberia and thence to Europe. As is well known, this work was abandoned when the Atlantic cable proved a success. Mr Mahood was Maj of the Corp of Engrs sent from America to survey N Siberia for the line. When the work was abandoned, Mr Mahood returned to America, and a few yrs afterwards made the surveys for the forts around San Francisco bay. He came to BC in 1872, and as said, took part in most of the important works which have been carried on since that time. For several months his health has been failing, and he passed quietly away at the res/o his sister Mrs Berkley. Pallbearers: E E Wootton, H P Bell, T Gore, J Hunter, E B McKay, C Lowenberg. Died Feb 25, 1901 at San Francisco, CA, John Rees, a well known and highly respected pioneer miner and prospector of BC. Deceased came to BC in Mar, 1864, and went to Cariboo with Edwin John, of S Saanich, where he mined for 10 yrs. In 1874 he left Cariboo and went to Cassiar, where he mined on McDame and other creeks, for 20 yrs, with various success. Early in the yr 1895 late Mr Rees went to the Yukon country by way of the Chilkoot pass, and after considerable prospecting and hardships, located on Mastodon Ck, nr Circle City, where at the time of his death he still had some mining properties. When the great Klondike strike was made, he went to Dawson City, and purchased a claim on Hunker Ck. During the last 2 yrs he had spent a portion of this time at Cape Nome, where he also had some mining interests. He arrived in Victoria, BC, from Nome during the latter part of Oct, 1900, in poor health, and was for some time a patient in the Jubilee hospital. He left Victoria, BC for CA on the Walla Walla, anticipating an improvement to his health.

The late Mr Rees was born in Glamorganshire, Wls, 63 yrs ago, and had no relatives in this country. He was a member of the Pioneer Society of Victoria, and his remains will be brought here for interment. Funeral - there were a large number of old-time friends and members of the BC Pioneer Society present. Died suddenly Mar 30, 1901 at Victoria, BC, John Jessop, aged 72. Mr Jessop went to his office in the government buildings as usual yesterday morning, apparently in good health, and attended to his duties, until 12:30, when he left hurriedly to transact some business at the Bank of Commerce. He hastened across James Bay bridge and was walking rapidly on Government st, when he suddenly collapsed on the sidewalk. Passersby rushed to his assistance, but almost before the 1st kindly hand touched him his life had sped. It was known to a few intimate friends that deceased had a weak heart, and possibly his haste to get to the bank before closing time produced the fatal palpitation.

John Jessop was born Jun 29, 1829 in Norfolk, Eng. His parents were John and Mary Phillips Jessop. The former died in 1894, and the latter in 1886. Mr Jessop was educated in private schools and came to N America in 1846, settling in Ontario Co, ON. In 1853 he entered the Normal school, Toronto, where he obtained a 2nd-class certificate, which he taught school on for 1 ½ yrs, when he returned to the Normal and secured a 2st-class certificate, after which he taught for 3 ½ yrs. He then started on foot to BC via Ft Garry, where he spent 2 months, and in Aug, 1859, with 1 companion, reached Ft Ellice; then, with 6 others, crossed the prairies and mountains via Boundary Pass and Tobacco Plains, and reached Colville on Nov 5. Proceeding with 1 companion he crossed the Cascades and reached Victoria on Jan 1, 1860, 8 months from Toronto. He spent some time in Cariboo, where he engaged unsuccessfully in mining on Harvey and Keithly Cks, and had to work out the following winter in New Westminster, a debt of $120, for which he had made himself responsible. He built the old Central school in New Westminster, and in 186? started the Daily Press in Victoria, in partnership with Leonard McClure. In Aug, 1861, he commenced teaching a non-sectarian school, which he continued until the spring of 1864, when the VI free school system was introduced, with Mr Jessop as principal of the Victoria school. He helped to frame the 1st school act of BC. During 1872-78 he was superintendent of schools for the province, and resigning in the fall of 1878 joined the Colonist staff, of which he was a member of 2 yrs.

He was appointed provincial immigration agent in Mar, 1883, which position he held up to his sudden demise. Mr Jessop was in politics a Conservative, and in religion a Methodist. He was a member of the Masonic order. Deceased was married in Victoria on Mar 31, 1868, to Miss Margaret Fausett, d/o William Fausett, MD, of Dublin, Ire, who died in 1897... His only surviving relative in Victoria is a niece, Miss Scott. B 073/074 W 35

Apr 6, 1901 - One more of the fast thinning ranks of the pioneer prospectors of the province passed away Apr 5.
The name of the veteran of the Coast pioneers is Matthew Kane, 77. He died in St Joseph's hospital, where he has been an inmate for some time. He was n/o Dublin, Ire.
Deceased came to CA in 1850,
and went thence to the goldfields. In Apr, 1858, he came to BC, and during the gold excitement went to all the new discoveries, from Idaho to Cassiar and Omineca. He sent some time in the Cassiar district. In 1883 and 1884 he joined the first expedition to explore the Yukon. On account of the Indians preventing them crossing the Chilkoot Pass, they turned back, and the government of the US sent a man-of-war to protect the expedition. Later Mr Kane was in charge of a powder magazine

at the Treadwell mine in Alaska. Ill health forced him to give up this occupation, and he paid a visit to his native land.
Thence he returned, and has been in St Joseph's ever since.

V/May 5, 1901 - An application is being made on behalf of George Thompson, an old pensioner who is over 60, for admission to the Old Men's Home. If that application is granted it will mean that the old soldier who has fought under the British flag in India and elsewhere, will be moved to a palace in comparison to his present residence. All last winter he lived in a little hovel-like den at the rear of the now tenantless Albion Saloon on Herald st, where before the old soldier took up his home there was a chicken house. It would hardly be thought sufficiently comfortable for the chickens, in fact, there is hardly a ranch in the vicinity of Victoria at least where the chickens and the stock are not better housed than is the unfortunate old man who huddles at night in the hut, which is home to him.

The place is entered from Herald st, just above Store st. There is a vacant lot on the corner and then a Chinese laundry, between which and the now empty Albion Saloon is a lane by which the pensioner goes in to the dismal yard with its unused tumble shacks, one of which is his home... when Thompson came home hobbling along the uneven boarded sidewalk of his alleyway on a stick, for he suffers from wounds received in the wars. The small pension he receives from the Imperial authorities is not sufficient to provide him in anything but food, and that in such a quantity that frugality must be exercised to eke out his existence.

He is desirous of getting into the Old Men's Home, and his case is now being represented to the proper authorities. If his pension stands in the way, he says, he is willing to give that up. In the meantime he huddles from the cold in his little hovel, and tells stories of 'how we captured the guns at Cawnpore in the moonlight,' and of the cutting and slashing in the hand to hand encounters of the days of the Mutiny. Story after story he can tell, and being Irish, even Kipling's Mulvaney can scarce tell these tales of that horrible war better than the old pensioner who makes his home in such an uncouth shack.

V/Marine/May 18, 1901 - Capt Thomas Harmon, the veteran diver of Victoria, arrived in the city yesterday on a visit to friends, says the Seattle P-I. Capt Harmon is almost as well known in Seattle as he is in BC, having, as he remarked last night, 'visited Seattle often each yr since she was a village of 4 houses and Yesler's mill.

Capt Harmon in his capacity as diver did valuable work in connection with the saving of SS Umitilla. The vessel, then in command of Capt Worth, in 1885, ran on a reef S of Cape Flattery, tearing a great hole in her bottom.

Passengers and all save a few of the officers deserted the ship, and Capt John A O'Brien, now master of steamer Dolphin, and then 1st officer of Umatilla, ran the vessel into Esquimalt Hbr, where she sank and was afterwards floated through Capt Harmon's efforts.

Bldg/Jul 2, 1901, 5 - Veterans of the old Cariboo days and the golden age of Victoria will remember with pleasure Major S B Abbott, who was a prominent figure in the early history of the city. Major Abbott left Victoria in 1867, and has since had varied experiences in the US, in all of which, however, he managed to 'come out on top.' He arrived from his home at Los Angeles last night, the object of his visit being to look up his old friends and stroll once more through the scenes of his early manhood. He came to Victoria in the first Cariboo rush and after some successful work in the gold fields - one famous creek being named after him - returned to Victoria and entered upon the practice of his profession, that of an architect and civil engineer. He designed some of the principal buildings in those early days, many of which are standing today as monuments to his skill. He was a personal friend of Sir James Douglas, and speaks with admiration of that gentleman's ability and his sterling qualities. During his residence in Victoria the Major took a lively interest in public affairs. He was deputy chief of the Victoria fire brigade under Chief John C Keenan.

After leaving here he built and operated the St Helena mills, on the Columbia River. He also built three large mills at Krypton and Coos Bay, Oregon. Then he went east to Kansas, and finally settled permanently at Los Angeles and became interested in the oil industry...

Bldg/Aug 22, 1901, 3 - Historical Society of Victoria is to preserve the site of the old HBC fort, which was the principle and only bldg of Victoria in the beginning. On the site of this fort, which, according to a statement made some 30 yrs ago in the BC legislature by one of the members, was bought from the Songhees Indians by the company for 3 blankets, a plate is to be placed so those who run may read and know that they stand on the site of the old fort.

A plate which is to be placed on the NE crnr the site, the cigar store on the crnr Bastion/Government sts, is being engraved by G Crowther. The inscription on this plate reads:

'The fort of the HBC, occupied this site from AD1842 to 1860. This tablet is placed on the NE corner to preserve an ancient landmark by the Historical society of Victoria, MCMI.

V/Aug 23, 1901 - S Luscombe, of Turner, Beeton & Co, who served under Maj Kennedy, at the time of the Fenian raid, of 1870, has received a handsome silver medal with clasps, for that service. He was a Pte in No 2 Co, Engrs, of Montreal, and in an engagement at Trout Rv, he took an active part. No 2 Co, with others, was ordered to capture a village near Trout Rv, where the Fenians had established themselves. The village was reached after some forced marching and it was found to be strongly entrenched. However, an attack was made, and after a few shots, the Fenians fled, leaving their ammunition behind them. When the soldiers took charge of the village, it was found that the Fenians had eaten all the provisions, consequently the men were forced to subsist on very little food until supplies arrived from outside.

Wreck/Aug 27, 1901 - The gloom which has prevailed since the news of Islander disaster reached the city a week before, was intensified on Sunday by the mournful scenes attendant to the funerals of some of the victims. Capt Hamilton R Foote, the dead master of the fine steamer which lies 40 fathoms deep in Stephens Passage, and late Mrs J H Ross, wife of the Governor of Yukon Territory, and her little child, were then carried to their last resting place in Ross Bay cemetery. Both funerals were largely attended, and at the cemetery over 1,000 persons gathered to watch the last sad rites before the victims of the accident were lowered into their graves...

Wreck/Aug 27, 1901 - A Victorian tells a story characteristic of late P W Bell, one of the victims of Islander wreck. A party were leaving Winnipeg for the W, and Mr Bell went to the station to see them off. One of them said to late HBC's factor, 'You'd better come along.'

'Don't care if I do,' shouted Bill, as he jumped aboard the train, and without grip, trunk, or anything other than in what he stood and had in his pockets.

Port Arthur newspaper -Peter Warren Bell, was one of the earliest Algoma residents. In the early 1860's he was the HBC factor at LacLoche, Lake Huron, and was afterwards moved to Michipilcoten, where he had one of the HB posts for many yrs...

'Let us walk softly, dear friends;

For strange paths lie before us all untrod;

The new year, spotless from the hand of God,

In thine and mine friends.'

'Let us walk lovingly, dear friends;

We cannot tell how long this life shall last.

How soon these precious days be overpast;

Oh then, let love walk with us,
friends.'

Sep 19, 1901 - Sep 17 [1862]
was the 39th anniversary of the landing of some of the pioneers of Victoria from steamer Tynemouth. The voyage from Portsmouth, Eng to Victoria took 99 days. A stay of 13 days was made at the Falkland Islands to procure coal and water. The supply of coal ran short and in order to reach San Francisco
all the spare spars were cut up and used for fuel. Several of the passengers who made the trip are still residing in Victoria: Ex-Mayor Redfern,
Joseph Yorke, Mrs
Mallandaine and Mrs J H Lawson are among the number. The steamer carried about 400 passengers - she was afterwards lost in a typhoon off the coast of China.

Wreck/Work/Sep 10, 1901 - A few days ago Supt Hussey received 3 photographs of victims of Islander disaster from Juneau, AK, having not been identified there, and these photographs were posted at Frank Campbell's cigar store for identification. Yesterday Mrs Burkholder, m/o the lost oiler, Claude Burkholder, aged 21, identified one of these pictures as that of her son. W H Burkholder, father of the victim, is on his way out from Dawson, and is expected at any time. He was at Dawson when the news of the wreck was received there, and when the photos were printed in the Dawson News he identified one as that of his son. When he identified the picture in the Dawson paper he started for Juneau to claim the remains, and if he finds that they are those of his lost son, he will bring the body to Victoria for burial. Mr Burkholder has been engaged as a carpenter at Dawson. Sep 22 - Body of Claude, s/o W H Burkholder, of Caledonia av, was brought down on steamer Hating from Juneau, and will come to Victoria on steamer Charmer today. Funeral: Sep 24, 3 - pallbearers: Messrs Collis Winch, James Denny, Carl Pendray, Noel Barker, Thomas Hawkins, Melville Jewell... P 124 W L

Sep 19, 1901 - St Ann's Academy was the scene of a joyful and touching ceremony yesterday, when the feast of Sister M de Bouseccours was celebrated by the members of the community and the pupils. The venerable sister is one of the pioneers who founded the 1st convent in Victoria in 1858. She was superior of the Orphanage at Quamichan for several years and founded the 1st convent and hospital in Alaska, at Juneau, 18 years ago. Yesterday, being the 50th anniversary of her taking her vows, was marked by an imposing ceremony in the chapel during the morning service, and in the afternoon the children held a reception in her honour.

Sep 27, 1901 - Thomas

Seward, a Lytton rancher, is a guest at the Dominion hotel. Mr Seward arrived in Victoria from CA in 1858, in which year the Colonist was first issued, and Mr Seward said last night that he remembered that there was a leading article in the 1st issue of this paper calling upon the Imperial government to construct a dry dock. Since then he has been a 'constant reader,' having been a subscriber for 41 years. In 1858 Mr Seward went to the Fraser River to dig gold and did well. Soon afterwards he went to Lytton, named after Sir Burwer Lytton, and he has been resident there for 41 years. He has been a licensing commissioner and JP for 30 years. He is now in Victoria to select his residence, for he will in future reside here, having disposed of his ranch at Lytton.

RNV/Marine/Nov 3, 1901, 2 - Antonio Alamanza, aged 60, the Maltese boatman who lived in a cabin near the boathouse in which he kept his steam launch and boats, nr the pier at the public wharf at Esquimalt, is dead. Alamanza, or 'Jose' as most knew him, was one of the best known of the ferrymen at Esquimalt, engaged in carrying Victorians and visitors to and from the warships. He was a pensioner from the British navy, and came to Victoria some 15 or 16 yrs ago on HMS Triumph, which was then the flagship of the then Admiral and now, Sir Michael Culme Seymour, in the capacity of boatswain's mate of the warship. On leaving the service he started business as a ferryman, and, being of a saving disposition, he gradually secured more and more boats, and ultimately a steam launch, the operation of which added to his profits. This launch was purchased by late ferryman from an Esquimalt resident. With this launch 'Jose' carried visitors and others to the ships and about the harbor, and engaged in towing the targets for gun practice, took crews out to the sailing ships in the Royal Roads, and in other business that offered. Alamanza had engaged in his usual business, and towards evening he went to the Globe hotel across the street from where he resided and sat in company with some others around the stove...[found the next morning in his home unconscious, died soon after]. Alamanza has relatives in Malta, whom he visited about 3 yrs ago, and until they are heard from the business he has accumulated is being held by the police, who have taken charge of his premises and effects. He had a nephew, or as Alamanza persisted in calling him, his 'niece', residing with him until some months ago, the nephew assisting in the business. They did not agree though, and at the insistence of Alamanza the nephew was bound over to keep the peace. Soon afterwards he shipped as a sailor on the bark Roland, which sailed from Esquimalt in May and is now due in Greenock, Sct. C 004 W 24

Lugin...remarkable composition of the gathering. There were men present who had served the Empire in every clime and continent - in Russia, India, China, Egypt, the South Seas and on the prairies of Canada. The majority of those about the table were men of British birth, but there were those who for generations claimed Canada as their motherland...He was proud to say that his family for 5 generations had served the Empire. He had volunteered in 1865, his father in 1837, his grandfather in 1812, and his gt-grandfather in 1776...

Dec 8, 1901, 5 - When the Pioneers eat around the festive board at the Victoria hotel they told some tales of BC in the 1860's. A good story was then told by Mayor Hayward of how they surprised Mr Edgar (afterwards Speaker in the House of Commons), who came here to adjust matters regarding the 'Carnarvon terms' and the CPR. It was 27 yrs ago, and with 'Jock' Robertson, who sat at the banquet table, the Mayor was then a councillor. The dam at the waterworks had been constructed in that yr, a loan of $100,000 being borrowed at 7%, and this loan had been paid up 2 yrs ago, as the Mayor was sure all other loans borrowed by the City of Victoria for public works would be. Well, in those days, it was thought advisable when Mr Edgar came to Victoria, that he be shown the dam of Elk lk, and when he was shown the dam there was, of course, a dinner - the aldermen dined at the public expense in those days, although they do not do so now. All went to Stevens' hotel, and all were hungry, and, as usual, dinner was late at Stevens'.

The late J S Drummond was one of the councillors, and it was he that put up the joke on Mr Edgar. Mr Drummond had a pocket full of $20 gold pieces, and going quietly among the councillors he gave 5 or 6 to each. Then getting Mr Edgar among them, he suggested that they have a game of pitch and toss, to while away the time until dinner was ready. Mr Edgar did not want to play, so Mr Drummond said, 'Very well, we'll play without you,' and taking $20 gold pieces, the councillors played pitch and toss, while Mr Edgar looked on amazed, wondering what riches the country must possess, where common councillors could play pitch and toss with $20 gold pieces. The game went on gloriously. As soon as 1 man was broke more coin would be surreptitiously passed to him and Mr Edgar was kept astonished. What he reported when he returned East is unknown, but while in Victoria he often remarked that this must be a rich country indeed.

W Humphreys was the oldest pioneer at the board. He came to BC in 1858. He started from CA and came overland through CA, OR and WT. There were few settlers then in

OR and WT other than at a few coast settlements. Now where there had been only sagebrush in WT there are populous and thriving settlements. On his arrival Mr Humphreys went to Omineca and to Cassiar. He had been amused some days ago to read an account of hardships suffered by the builders of the telegraph line to Dawson. In 1874, when he got instructions from Mr Beavan, then chief commissioner of lands and works, to proceed to Omineca, he started from Hazelton and went through the mountains in 3 months. He could not find hardships, and wondered how those did who had a government pack train to supply them. These men should see the miners of those days with their small packs with a small amount of grub - all they could get on credit - striking off into the mountains. If they could strike it rich, they got more grub, and if they did not, they had to get along the best they could. They were the men who suffered hardships. When he reached Okanagan in this province, in Aug, 1858, Mr Humphreys proceeded down the Fraser in a skiff, and landed at the head of James Bay, which then had but one house, the old Christ Church cathedral, which was long ago burned down, visible on its shores.

Fire/Dec 14, 1901, 2 Mrs Mary Ann Keeler [aged 45, n/o Ire] and Child Lose Their lives in fire at Ross Bay...; Dec 15, 6 - Keeler Gives His Version...wife went back to rescue her child...; Feb 11, 1902 - The city police have tired of 'Old Man' Keeler, who has been a boarder and lodger at the city lockup since his home at Ross Bay was destroyed...The old man was too quarrelsome and was always getting into trouble with the trustees and prisoners. As he is not eligible for the Old Men's Home, not having been a res/o the city for the required length of time, the city has rented a cabin for him and will allow him sufficient to keep him in provisions. The caretaker of the cabin has promised to look after the unfortunate man, but it is not likely that Keeler will remain with him long, as he prefers to be in the lockup, where he gets his meals regularly without any effort, and where he can find a warm corner without having to light a fire.

Mar 8, 1902 - Old Man Keeler

is tiring of the shelter given him at the city lockup, and is looking for a new home. Yesterday 2 members of the police force who were called to Ross Bay, heard a noise of hammering in the woods near the cemetery, and going in the direction of the noise, found the old man busy repairing an old cabin. Later Keeler appeared at the police station, where he goes for his meals and lodging, and demanded that the city supply him with blankets and provisions, saying that he had found a new home. The jailers would not be sorry to see the last of him, but are sure that he would soon be back again. F 005/006 E 18

Died suddenly Jan 14, 1902 at Victoria, BC James Frederic Fell, 48. He was born 1853 at Cheshire, England, but came to Victoria when aged 9, with his father. Landing here in 1862, they camped on a spot between the present Point Ellice and Rock Bay bridges, but only for a short time, as they were bound, with thousands of other gold-seekers, to the placer mines of Cariboo. Father and son remained in Cariboo for 2 or 3 years and returning to Victoria started the grocery business now carried on at Fort street, and of which deceased had been head since the death of his father, late Mayor Fell. But the young man did not remain with the business continuously, the spirit of adventure, which had been partially gratified at such a young age, was not yet satisfied, and he was in the stampede to the Cassiar country in the early 1870s. Remaining in the north country for a time, he returned to Victoria only to get ready for another adventure, being one of the party which made the survey of the Yellow Head Pass for the CPR. This work having been completed, he came back to Victoria and rejoined his father in business, finally assuming the management. Besides his interest in the grocery business, Mr Fell was interested in a number of small freighting steamers making this their home port, notably Oscar. Unlike his father, he took no active part in the affairs of the city, although he took a keen interest in them and was a firm believer in the future of the city. The late James Fell was one of this big-hearted, open-handed men who was never known to refuse assistance to the needy, and in this case, it can be truly said: 'Like father, like son,' for Fred Fell certainly inherited the charitable nature of his father... Besides a widow, daughter and son he leaves a brother, Thornton Fell and 3 sisters Mrs Morley and Mrs Moss of Victoria, and a 3rd in Liverpool, Eng. Jan 21, 1902, 2 - Found Drowned... George, 12 yr old s/o Mr F L Henry, n/o Buffalo, NY...found held fast in the mud at the ft of Pleasant st, not many yds from the boat house...last seen Dec 28, when he had taken his father's lunch to the Sayward mills, where his father is engaged as a teamster. He and a small sister had gone together with the lunch, and after the girl went home, and the boy remained behind. He did not return home that night and the parents reported him missing. They feared that he might have shipped on one of the sealing schooners as cabin boy, and inquiries were made, but without finding any news...until yesterday when some boys playing near the scene saw his dead body, standing upright with the legs fast in the mud, the tide having gone out. At high tide there was about 7' of water over the spot. The boys telephoned to the police and Csts J Woods and W Harper went over and dragged the body from the mud. When the body was removed to the morgue it was seen that a blow had been received by the dead boy on the centre of the forehead. In all probability he had struck himself in falling or his body had been washed against some hard substance. Inquest...Jan 22, 6 - Death by Drowning - father's and C Medrich evidence... P 097 W H

Died Feb 20, 1902 at Victoria, BC Henry M Short, 59, well known Douglas street gunmaker, who was a pioneer of the city of Victoria. He grew gradually worse in health since the death of his daughter some time ago, never recovering from the shock... Deceased was a sportsman, whose skill with rod and gun is known, and as the maker of guns and keeper of the sporting goods depot he made friends in legions. He was born in Cork, Ireland. He was one of that party of now passing pioneers who came to Victoria on Tynemouth in 1862, when the days of gold created excitement in BC. In those days Victoria was the Mecca of the goldseeker. The thousands were hurrying from CA and from all corners of the globe to the diggings of the Fraser and Cariboo, but unlike the large proportion of these fellow-pioneers who rounded the Horn in his company on Tynemouth, late Mr Short did not become a victim to the gold fever. He engaged in business in Victoria as a gunsmith, and made his money here thereafter. At first his sign was suspended from a smaller store near the corner of Pandora & Government streets, and gradually the growing trade necessitated larger establishments. He moved to Fort street and from there to the store on Douglas street. Pallbearers: H D Helmcken, MPP, J M Langley, B H John, W Gordon, Thomas Shotbolt, J Braden Sr, E White, George Winter.

Mr Short, who is survived by his widow, 2 sons, Nugent and Richard, and 1 daughter, is the last of his family. His two brothers, both British army officers, have preceded him through the valley of the shadow. Deceased was a member of BC Pioneer Society and past master of the Victoria lodge, AOUW, one time choir leader of Christ Church cathedral and Reformed Episcopal church. D 006/007 W 25

SV/WmHx/Feb 23, 1902 - letter to editor - Sir, I take exception to A J Pen's letter which appeared in this morning's paper, and respectfully beg to say that there are not any delicate ladies in BC, but good, broad-shouldered, deep-chested women, every mother's daughter of 'em, who are not afraid to suffer a little inconvenience to do honor to the noble boys who gave their lives for Queen and country. If there are any 'delicates' (which I doubt), they should possess enough common sense (or a doctor's orders), to keep them home on such occasions. As to loyalty; what of the hundreds of women who stood beneath the scorching sun for hours, and again at night, in the camp grass in front of the parliament bldgs on Oct 1, 1901, only to catch a glimpse of England's future King and Queen? Nor did they fume and fret at the privileged few who were admitted to the royal presence. That the veterans were overlooked on Tues night, 'tis true, 'tis pity, pity 'tis 'tis true.' And for once the women of Victoria were sadly lacking in their usual forethought in not providing for the aged and infirm, but upon the next occasion that shall necessitate it, we promise that a nice, comfortable, cosy corner will be prepared, hung with Oriental rugs, furnished with reining chairs, heated with gas radiators, and lighted by electricity, where a few gouty, asthmatic old gentleman, like A J Pen may go away back and sit down. Signed A Native son's Mother. [rebuttal to letter about faint-hearted woman at a welcoming ceremony for S African veterans]

Died Feb 24, 1902 at Victoria, BC John Sayyea, pioneer prospector and miner, who has visited every mining district in BC, and who did so much to make known the riches of BC. He was n/o Dundas, Sct, aged 76 and came to Victoria in 1862. Within a short time of his arrival, he started for Cariboo, and from that day until health prevented it, followed his occupation as prospector and miner, following each rush to new districts, his principal fields of operation, however, being Cariboo, Omineca, and Cassiar. He had unbounded faith in the richness of the province, and after he himself was no longer able to shoulder his pack and seek fortune in the creeks and mountains, devoted himself to imparting the information he had gathered to the younger generation. Knowing the province from end to end, there was no man better able to tell of its resources. Died Nov 24, 1901 at Longford, Ireland, Mr J C Browne, son of late William Browne, Clonee, Mohill. Browne was an old-timer of Victoria, BC. He emigrated to Australia in 1854, and went to New Zealand in 1860, coming to Victoria in 1862, at the time of the Cariboo gold excitement, on Alice Thorndyke, arriving here on Jun 14. There were 180 passengers on the boat, and among them were ex-Chief of Police Shephard, late Captain Ramsey, Mr Mackay of James Bay, and James Walsh, a personal friend of Mr Browne. In 1862 and 1863 Mr Browne lived on Johnson street. In 1865 he went to Montana, but in 1880 to 1882 he was again in Victoria. In 1884 he left for South America. He returned home in 1886, but visited BC in 1892, looking over the mines at Kootenay, when he met an old friend, Captain Fitzstubs. Mr Browne amassed a huge fortune in South America, and was very successful wherever he went. He discovered 3 gold fields in his career - the Hibernian Lead, in Ovens District, Australia, in 1860; Washington Gulch, in Montana Territory, in 1865, and a placer mine on the Surinam River, Dutch Guiana, in 1884. A short time ago he went to Ireland to end his days at home. The remains were conveyed to Mohill.

Bldg/Mar 7, 1902, 5 - The small cottage on Fort st in the rear of the Board of Trade bldg has gone the way of all things mundane. A force of workmen were busy wiping it off the map. The old house was one of the original HBC offices, and is about the last of the collection of bldgs which were inside the old fort. The old Theatre Royal, which occupied the site of the old Colonist bldg, on Government st, was among the last traces of the white man's 1st habitation in what is now Victoria city. The bldg torn down, although small, was very substantially built. The squared timber with which it had been constructed being as sound as the day it was cut.

Mar 11, 1902, 4 - Like the Ancient Mariner of Coleridge's famous poem, George Purcell, who is now paying his annual visit to the Coast, still maintains that distinct personality that has marked him as a character throughout the whole of BC. This patriarch of Port Douglas, at the head of Harrison Lake, has seen that once noted portage point rise and fall, from the busy height of the days when all the trade of Cariboo passed by its doors and paid it tribute, to its sleepy present, interrupted only by an occasional prospector or some wandering native intent on trading off a few furs from some of the varied stock that is to be found in Mr Purcell's store.

It is now a year since his last visit and many an oldtimer will regret to learn that the year has left its mark on the hoary head of this old '58er'... Coming here from CA in 1858, he followed up the exciting chase for gold, but his 1st season up in the Horsefly country resulted only in as the old man quaintly calls it, 'fisherman's luck'. Since then he has been the patriarch and almost the hermit of Port Douglas, still retaining the strong prejudices of the old Crown Colony days he strongly asserts that if any man will call him a Canadian he will knock him down.

Mr Purcell is quite busy buying supplies for his upcountry trade, but reports that trapping is falling off very much of late, and that furs are hard to get, very few being brought in.

Mar 22, 1902, 2 - Out in the Royal Roads, where the fleets of merchantmen drag their anchors taut in the holding ground, and the restless seas sing the requiems overhead, lie the remains of the child of Mr/Mrs Sturgis, of Esquimalt. Sewed up in thick canvas and weighted with heavy stones, the dead child was lowered into the Roads Mar 19, and as the body sank fathoms deep in a grave as those of lost sailormen, Rev W D Barber conducted the impressive services for those buried at sea.

Mr Sturgis is a former man-of-war's man. He was a bluejacket of HMS Pheasant, and when his term of service expired, he and his wife took up their residence at Esquimalt. A short time ago his only child fell ill and died, and the father, who had helped to make canvas shrouds for former comrades who had died at sea, decided that his child should also have a sailor's grave. He called upon the mayor to ascertain the legality, and then went to Rev Barber. A rowboat was hired, and the funeral party started from Isbister's pier at Esquimalt, with the canvas-shrouded remains of the dead child lying in the bow, and the officiating clergyman, attired in his canonical robes, the sorrowing father and mother, and the dead child's nurse, seated in the stern, which the oarsmen pulled quickly towards the harbor mouth.

It was a sad boat's crew that in silence rowed for at least a mile from the harbor mouth out into the deep waters of the Royal Roads. There the oars were stayed, and as the sorrowing father took the little canvas-covered body into his arms and sadly launched it into the waves...

Then the oars were again taken in hand and the boat headed back towards Esquimalt.

WmHx/Mar 23, 1902, 2 - In the police court yesterday Mrs Ferry was charged with being drunk and was remanded. Mrs Ferry is a character and is better known as 'Annie Rooney,' than as either 'Jack' or 'Mrs Ferris.' She is a piano player, and although she may not have the technique of a Paderewski, she can rattle the ivory keys in a manner that would make a ragtime expert dizzy. She can bring good music from a cornet, or any other instrument from a jewsharp to a lyre. Since she came back to Victoria about a wk ago, after an absence of 4 yrs, she has been engaged as piano player at the California, and on her 1st night in the city she arrayed herself in an artilleryman's coat and drank too much. She was gathered in and after her fine was paid, she went back to the piano at the California. On Fri night she drank much strong drink, and then, attiring herself in a bluejacket's uniform, taken from the room of a sleeping sailor off HMS Phaeton, she went across the street to get further drinks. She staggered out onto Johnston st into the arms of a policeman and was run in.

When the case was called this morning she took her place in the dock still attired in the sailor's uniform. She looked unique, but not strange to those who remember her residence in Victoria aforetime, when she was often arrayed in a sailor's uniform. She has a decided leaning for the navy, and has made a lengthy cruise as musician on the USS Philadelphia. It was some yrs ago, she says, when she was in Tampa, she was shipped on Philadelphia. Garbing herself as a man she went to the officers to ship. On their giving her a cornet she soon convinced them that she could play and was taken on the vessel as a musician. Annie Rooney made an extended cruise and after being in souther waters for some time she was paid off in NY.

Then she went on the stage. She became a member of Pat

Rooney's company and did a song and dance. While with the burlesquers she says she wrote the popular song 'Annie Rooney'. She sold this song to old Pat Rooney for $40, and she says she must have been a chump to do so, for he 'made a barrel out of it'. She also composed marches and pieces which are still being used by the bandmaster on Philadelphia.

Her 1st introduction to BC was in the mining camps of Kootenay, when she played the piano in dance houses. In 1896 and 97 she was at Ainsworth and several other upcountry resorts, always wearing the sailor uniform, to which she is partial. Then she went to Seattle and met Ferry, a bluejacket of USS Charleston, and they were married. Soon Annie went back to the dives of the Sound playing her piano and from point to point she went, until she struck Victoria again.

May 1, 1902 - The problem as to what shall be done with William Keeler, the old beggar, who has been a charge of the city for a number of yrs, is again confronting the police. For a long while after the death of his wife and child in the fire at Ross Bay, the old man was kept at the police station, but he made himself so objectionable to officers and prisoners, that it was found necessary to remove him. He remained at a cabin provided by a short time although supplied with food and clothing, and wandered back to the lockup. Next he found a cabin at Ross Bay, where he stayed a few days. Later he went to a farm in the district, but on Mon the familiar voice was again heard at the police station. As he could not be kept there, a charge of vagrancy was laid against him, with a view of having him sent to the provincial jail, but as reported in the police court proceedings, the law would not allow this and he was again turned loose. Last night a telephone message to the station asked that a policeman be sent to a residence on Fairfield rd, as there was a man there who refused to leave. An officer went out in response, and found that the trespasser was Keeler. He was on a begging trip and was carrying around a lot of provisions that had been given him by the charitably inclined. He had also been given money, and somehow or other he had even got liquor, and when taken in was under the influence. What is to be done with him now is a question which is agitating the police. He is certainly not a fit person to be allowed to wander around from house to house.

Marine/May 16, 1902 - Capt William Cox, of Victoria, BC has been added to the Victoria pilots. He has had considerable experience in BC waters, and was formerly engaged in sealing. He was born in NS in 1855, and has been engaged in the marine business for some 28 yrs. He commenced sealing on this coast in the schooner Sapphire, which was afterwards burnt, and was very successful in following the seal herds. When the Yukon rush started, he like many other sealers, began steamboating, and he has been master of several ocean going steamers and river boats on northern waters. His last command was steamer Capilano, which towed river steamers Mona and Glenora, which were recently burnt on the Klondike river, to St Michael.

May 16, 1902 - Letter to editor - Sir - Kindly allow a few facts to be stated in connection with the Ross Bay cemetery and its working. It has been stated that the sum of $510 is paid monthly by plot owners. Now, if this amount is paid then it is well known amongst the gardeners that someone beside them gets a fair share. Again, supposing that amount was paid, it is wages for 7 for from 7 to 9 months of the yr.

These men have to be supplied with 1200' of hose, 5 mowing machines, shears, brooms, barrows and general garden tools to do the work. Again, it has been suggested that the city should take over the garden work in the cemetery. Will the citizens please remember that it is the so-called city portions of the cemetery roads, etc, that is the disgraceful part of the same, and why? Simply because when a caretaker was wanted a carpenter was appointed. Now, this caretaker has made a good showing as a carpenter by fencing, etc, but the cemetery in general has been neglected, and this is the clue to the maze that our aldermen seem to be in, in regard to the disgraceful condition of Ross Bay cemetery. Signed, G J Bagshaw, Ross Bay Cemetery Gardener.

May 28, 1902, 3 - A private despatch received here contained the information that a warrant had been issued in San Francisco for the arrest of Thomas Deasy, former chief of the Victoria Fire dept, he being charged with misconduct with a woman, Mrs Della Westwood, formerly of Nanaimo, and now residing at 236 Sutter st, San Francisco. Mr Deasy indignantly denies the charge. It was also said in San Francisco that Mr Deasy had deserted his wife, who is now in this city. This is untrue and the ex-chief's many Victoria friends are confident that the other charge is equally foundation less. He left Victoria with the view of placing a patent fire escape, which he invented, with the fire depts of the larger American cities.

Mrs Westwood's husband resides in Nanaimo. He some time ago instituted a suit for divorce against her, and it is now before the Supreme court in this city.

Died Jun 8, 1902 at Victoria, BC, William Andean, 79, a pioneer of CA, Australia and BC. Deceased was born in Cornwall, England, and early took that wandering fever that brought so many young men to America in those days. When less than 20, he moved to Ontario, where he remained until the CA gold excitement of 1849. This brought him west, and after meeting with varying fortune in the Golden State, he went to the Ballarat goldfields in Australia. From there he returned to Canada, and in 1863 came to BC, the Cariboo gold excitement bringing him to this part of the coast. After trying his luck in the goldfields he returned to Victoria and for many years conducted a store on the west side of Government street, between Yates & Johnson. Died Jun 17, 1902 at Victoria, BC Hon Benjamin William Pearse, of Fernwood, aged 71. Deceased was a member of the executive council of the colony of BC, which voted the colony into confederation of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada, and was assistant surveyor-general under late Hon J D Pemberton. He took a prominent part in the early affairs of the colony and province, and likewise was a participant in the work of making the city what it is today. He came to BC in the early 1850's, when a young man of not more than 20, and being a CE and surveyor, found lots to do under the crown colony and HBC. His work was largely confined to Vancouver I before the union, but later he also did work on the Mainland, taking over for the colony the Cariboo wagon road, which was built by G B Wright. He laid out most of the wagon roads on the Island as well as the original townsite of Victoria, and was also engaged in exploration work on the Island, being the first to examine the country to the N of Cowichan...He was twice elected a member of the City council, and for 2 yrs, with Hon D W Higgins and W J Macaulay, was a sewerage commissioner.

Mr Pearse was twice married, his 1st wife dying in the '1870's. His 2nd wife survives him. His only daughter died about 1 yr ago, and his only other relatives in the province are 2 nephews. In 1862 Mr Pearse built Fernwood, the handsome residence on Cadboro Bay rd, to which he has resided since. He owned a large amount of property in the vicinity, which some yrs ago was subdivided, and is now known as Fernwood, the W boundary being Fernwood rd. Work/Jul 25, 1902 - While fighting a grass fire, which threatened Ross Bay cemetery, Robert Allen, the caretaker, dropped dead yesterday. The fire had gained considerable headway, and Mr Allen was exerting himself to cut it off. Suddenly 2 ladies, Mrs Clarke and Mrs Thompson, who were watching him, saw Mr Allen drop in the midst of the flames. They rushed to his assistance and picked him from the fire before he had been burned, but he died shortly afterwards. Drs Fraser and Ernest Hall, who were summoned, upon examination found that death had been caused by the bursting of a blood vessel in the head, the result no doubt, of the heat and over exertion. Mr Allen was n/o Baltimore, ON, aged 59. He came to Victoria in 1888 and for the past 5 yrs has been caretaker of the cemetery. Gold/Died Sep 16, 1902 at Victoria, BC Robert Homfray, CE, n/o Hales Owen, Worcestershire, Eng, aged 78. Deceased took great pride in tracing his descent from a retainer of the great Richard of the Lion Heart. Originally the family name was Homvrae, or as stated to have been given by the King, Homme vrai - true man. And a true man late Mr Homfray was. He studied under the celebrated engineer Brunnell, and with a brother went to CA about 1858, taking up his residence in Victoria, a few years after.

He was a member of the 1st Volunteer Corps organized in Victoria, about 1863, and his portrait taken with a group of officers and men of that organization...

When the militia was reorganized in Victoria, BC in the early 1870's, Mr Homfray again enrolled as a member and continued in the ranks until advancing years compelled him to relinquish duties in which he took an infinite amount of pride.

He was unmarried, and has, it is stated one brother in San Francisco, and 2 residing at the old home in Eng.

With that characteristic self-reliance which was so well known to all his acquaintances he refused to leave to those who came after him, the ordering of his own monument, and therefore some years ago designed and had carried out such a one as he wished placed over his remains. Police/Died Sep 17, 1902 at Pt Simpson, BC, Charles Todd. There was no better known man in BC a few yrs ago. He came from his native province of ON in the early 1860s, being attracted by the reports of the marvellous riches of the mountains and streams of the Pacific colony. He mined principally around Wild Horse Ck and other sections of the Kootenay dist, and was fairly successful.

His straightforward ways won him the confidence of the men in the country in which he worked, and when the province entered the Dominion he was elected a member of the 1st legislative assembly, the other member from Kootenay being Mr J A Mara. Mr Todd sat in the House during the 1st parliament of BC, which was dissolved in 1875. He became connected with the provincial police shortly after this and was supt for a number of yrs. In those days the supt had charge of the city as well as the provincial force, in fact the forces were the same until 1881, when the city appointed an independent force. He was succeeded by H B Roycroft, as supt, and entered the service of the CPR as land commissioner. In the 1880's he was appointed Indian agent for the NW coast, and held that position until the time of his death. Wielding a great influence with the Indians, he always exerted it for the welfare of his wards, and has been the means of averting trouble on many occasions.

He was a great favorite during his long residence in Victoria, and was equally popular throughout BC, and particularly along the Coast, when he has passed the greater part of the last 20 yrs.

He was married in Victoria in 1873 to a str/o Mr Downey of Saanich. He had no family, but besides a widow leaves a niece, Miss Downey, who has been with him since childhood.

WmHx/Oct 25, 1902, 6 - Mrs J Merifield has returned to Victoria after an absence of 5 years in the north. Her husband and herself are well known residents of Victoria, having kept the Pacific Telegraph hotel on Store street for 14 years. In 1897, when the 1st Yukon rush started, Jack Merifield, who was an old Cariboo miner and packer, started for the north, and his brave little wife accompanied him. They broke the trail from Skagway to Log Cabin when thousands of 'tenderfeet' were hesitating on the outskirts of the new El Dorado, earning $1 per pound for the freight which they packed on their backs over the snow and ice. For months they never slept in a house or even in a tent, for the exigencies of their business did not permit of their carrying anything except the articles which Mae up their burden. When better transportation methods were supplied, they went to Atlin, where they secured some valuable claims, but the husband falling ill, was obliged to return to Victoria, and the brave little woman was left to do as best she could. Helpless in the rush which occurred at that time, she sold out the claims at a nominal price, and they afterwards turned out to be the most valuable in the camp. Undeterred by their ill-fortune, the couple went north to the Koyukuk district, and then to Stewart River and Dawson. Fortune played with them. At one time they had what they considered the most valuable claim in the Klondike, on Gold Run, but they were forced to part with it for a small price, the purchasers making a fortune from it. Mrs Merifield was the 1st white woman in Atlin, and is known and esteemed by the old-timers there for her pluck, energy and kindness, amid surroundings that would appall the ordinary woman. She tended the sick and did so many kindnesses to the miners that they liken her to Florence Nightingale.

Quite recently Mrs Merifield took part in a stampede from Dawson to 60-Mile Creek, and succeeded in staking a valuable claim. She and her husband own claims on Stewart River, Dominion Creek and 60-Mile Creek, one of which Mr Merifield is working on at present.

Mrs Merifield has returned for a well-earned rest. She is staying at the Dominion, where she will be glad to meet her old friends.

Died Nov 27, 1902 at Victoria,
BC Alexander James
McLellan, n/o PEI, aged 68, a well known railway contractor and mining man. For a couple of yrs or so Mr McLellan was associated with the CPR construction party in pushing the great transcontinental road to the Coast. On the completion of that huge enterprise, Mr McLellan located in Victoria, and in 1887 joined Thomas Earle, MP, in a business enterprise, which resulted in them securing the contract for the construction of a considerable portion of the

Mr McLellan actively superintended the work of carrying on the RR contract, and as a result of his excellent supervision, the firm of McLellan & Earle realized a considerable sum of money on the enterprise. He afterwards acquired large interests in the canning business on the N Coast.

Of late yrs deceased paid much attention to mining enterprises.
He constructed for Mr Croft the

Died Jan 7, 1903 at Victoria,
BC David B Reid, of N
Saanich, aged 81. Deceased was n/o Strathardle, Sct, where he was born 1821. At age 40
he left Sct for Canada, sailing
by way of Cape Horn, and landed in Victoria, or what was then known as Ft Victoria, in 1862. After some very thrilling experiences, which were very common upon the trip from the Old Country by way of the Horn, in the slow sailing craft of the early days. A few of the passengers who came with the deceased upon the same vessel are still residents and pioneers of Victoria, and delight in relating the little incidents which occurred on the trip.

Deceased has resided in N
Saanich during the past 40 yrs, and was one of the 1st settlers to open up the district
when the HBC retained a trading post in the vicinity.

He lived quietly, being of a reserved disposition, but had always a kind and welcome
word for those with whom he became acquainted, and many little incidents are remembered in connection with the deceased, particularly his desire at all times to repay
in some manner any little act of kindness done him. The writer remembers well a little incident which occurred in a dining room in town where he had the pleasure of simply helping the deceased at the table, and happening to be in his neighbourhood 2 wks afterwards, was readily recognized, and requested
with much earnestness to receive some little token of gratitude.

Jan 23, 1903, 2 - Charles Palmer Gee, who died in Victoria, BC Jan 13, aged 61, n/o London, Eng, was a ½ brother of Capt Mellon. Capt Mellon had lost all trace of Mr Gee for 17 yrs, and thought him dead. He last heard of him in Weymouth, Eng, and had no letters from him in 20 yrs, while all his letters remained unanswered. Capt Mellon saw the notice of his ½ brother's death in the Colonist, but could hardly credit that after looking for him in the Old Country for 17 yrs and finding no trace of him he should have passed through Vancouver and died in Victoria. Capt Mellon says that his right name is Gee, and that when his mother married again she gave him the name of Mellon, and called his ½ brother Gee. Mrs Gee was communicated with regarding the matter, and said her husband often spoke of his ½ brother, a sea captain, who he had given up as lost at sea.

Capt Mellon wrote a mem/o the Colonist staff a few days ago asking him to make enquiries regarding his relative. The Colonist man called on the widow, and from information furnished by Capt Mellon soon established the identity of the deceased as the long-lost brother of the Capt Mrs Gee, who has supported the family for over a yr, since they arrived here from Red Deer, AB, by dressmaking, is living in humble circumstances over Jones' cigar store on Douglas st. She has 2 young children dependent upon her and her sad position calls for the assistance of the charitably inclined.

has been living at Olympia.
Many Victorians, will remember Captain Doane,
who was born in Bangor, Maine, Jan 16, 1825, coming from a long line of seafaring people... He was engaged in the oyster business until 1850,
when he went to CA via the Isthmus route. Here he followed varied lines of business until the Fraser River gold excitement, following the rush of goldseekers to the north in 1858. In the palmy days of Hope, Yale and other mining towns on the Fraser, and of the Cassiar and Cariboo districts. Doane was a prominent figure among the river steamboat men. He built the 1st steamboat in the Cassiar district, on Williams Creek, packing the iron in over the mountains for 200 miles. He remained on the Fraser River for several years, running on the river steamer Union in 1861 and 1862 and on steamer
Enterprise between Victoria and New Westminster, and later on Diana between Victoria and the San Juan Islands, on which route he for a time held a mail contract.
He lived for a number of years in Victoria, but removed with his family, in 1869 to CA, where he remained until 1872... Doane was married in 1866 to Elizabeth Pendergast, in Victoria. Two sons were born to them... Mrs Doane died in Olympia in Dec, 1875...

Marine/Mar 15, 1903, 2 - Capt J D Bendrodt, one of the Nanaimo board of pilots, died yesterday. He was n/o Denmark, aged 44...he has followed the sea since his boyhood and since he came to Victoria 25 yrs ago he has held many responsible positions before he attained his appt on the Pilotage board.

Capt Bendrodt was in command of many vessels running in BC waters during his career, which has extended over 25 yrs and witnessed many changes in the shipping business. He was in the employ of R Dunsmuir's Sons for some time, and he was also master of the big tug Alexander, then known as McAllister's Folly, which was the only vessel built on the Skeena, and which is now a 4-masted schooner plying these waters. He was commander of the tug Pilot, and was master of Isabel when the steamer - now converted into a wrecking bark ran on the route between Victoria, Comox and the Islands.

It was on the old schooner Kate - now lying waterlogged on the beach within sight of his late res - that Capt Bendrodt began his career as a master mariner sailing out of Victoria. Kate was then trading between Victoria and Pt Simpson and many an interesting narrative could be told of experiences on board that vessel. In 1879 he made a trip to Aus as 2nd mate of brig Hazard and on returning to Victoria he entered the employ of the HBC as mate of steamer Otter, and afterwards of Pr Louise. He remained there 4 yrs, and in 1885 signed articles on the big sidewheel tug Alexander as mate with late Capt Jagers.

Two yrs later he was given command of the vessel, which was then owned by R Dunsmuir's Sons until 1890. He had a very good record as a pilot, having no accidents other than the stranding of steamer Mineola recently [no fault].

Mar 28, 1903...The King had sent out invitations on his blue-tinted stationery for a gathering at which a strenuous lady was called upon to explain why she biffed a certain employee of her husband on the ear with the palm of a plump hand, which caused him to reel and totter on his foundations - which was contrary to the peace of HM.

It was this way: the man had come in from canvassing, and started an argument with the lady. The dove of peace was then lost in the snow somewhere back of the Sooke hills. The gentleman said that the lady was no lady, and, moreover, that she was a liar.

Just for the purpose of forcible explanation, she handed him one in the region of the ear - a right swing, which almost put him out. He tottered and was almost at the stage for the timekeepers to get busy.

Then he hiked hot-foot to the police department and poured his tale of woe into the ears of the defenders of the public weal. On the blue-tinted paper they wrote it. It was there that he charged his assailant with assault, and she was bidden by the King to attend his court yesterday - but she didn't come.

In the meantime the dove of peace hit the berg, and the painful sensation having gone from the region of his ear, the complainant was less willing to complain, which made things easy for the dove. Settled out of court.

Died May 18, 1903 at Victoria, BC, Mrs Mary Lewis, beloved wife of Capt Herbert G Lewis, aged 65. It was in 1851, the yr of what is known as the great exhibition in Eng, that Mrs Lewis came to Victoria with her parents, her father, Mr Langford having been one of the officials of that once great institution, the Puget Sound Land Co. After having lived here for a period, the family went back to Eng, where Capt Lewis, one of the early master mariners of the HBC on the Pacific Coast, married her. When Mrs Lewis arrived here as a bride, there were no wharves or other shipping accommodation to speak of, and it was necessary to land on the beach in a small boat somewhere in the neighborhood of the Dallas hotel. Her brother, George Langford, who is still living, was the 1st white boy born in BC, the event taking place in Gov Blanchard's house, the site of the old PO on Government st. Many old Victorians remember Mrs Lewis, in the days before declining health overtook her, as a most entertaining hostess, and an accomplished lady, while not a few of the then newcomers have recollections of kindnesses shown at a time and in a manner not to be forgotten. She was one of the old time type which is rare nowadays. Langford Lk and Plains are named after Mrs

Lewis' father. Pallbearers: Capt Gaudin and Messrs E C Baker, J A Graham, A Munroe, E E Wootton, E Johnson. B 090 W 36

Died May 21, 1903 at Victoria, BC, William Charles, 72, late inspecting factor of the western department of HBC, another tie binding the present with a past generation has been broken; and it is with feelings of sadness we view the decimated ranks of the old band of pioneers in the fur trade, to which in a large measure we owe our present political existence and organization as a province.

Deceased was son of John Charles, an HBC factor, Inverleith Row, Edinburgh, and was born Mar 5, 1831 at Winnipeg. He was educated at Hill Street School, Edinburgh, and at Edinburgh University, having there laid the foundation of a generous culture, which characterized him throughout his subsequent career. He came to the Pacific Coast from Edinburgh via Panama, in 1852, and was for a time in the employ of Breck & Ogden, Portland, Oregon. He entered the HBC service in 1854. He was stationed at different times at Fort Vancouver, on the Columbia River, Fort Hall, Utah, and at Fort Boise, Idaho. He was transferred to Victoria in 1858, and was subsequently in charge of Fort Hope, Fort Yale and Fort Kamloops, in BC. In 1874 he was made a chief factor, and was in charge of Victoria establishment. He is mentioned very kindly by Bancroft, both in his histories of BC and OR, as having contributed very largely to the data employed in these volumes. His name also appears frequently in old HBC correspondence which has been collected and preserved in the provincial library. About 1874 he was appointed inspecting chief factor of the western department, an important post, which included in its jurisdiction all the HBC establishments in and west of the Rocky Mountains. He retained that position until 1885, when he retired and resided permanently in Victoria.

Deceased was of HBC stock dating far back in the history of that remarkable organization. As has already been stated, his father was a chief factor before him, having been identified for years with the company's operations in Rupert's land. His name appears among the members of the HB councils, which may be properly regarded as fur-trading parliaments, at Red River, in 1835 and 1839, and again at Norway House in 1840, at the 1st of which Duncan Finlayson presided, and at the latter two of which Sir George Simpson himself was presiding officer. It is also stated that William Charles' grandmother was a daughter of one of the high officials at Fort York or Churchill, on Hudson's Bay, at the time of its invasion by the French, and who was taken prisoner to France, but subsequently released.

Although the deceased did not participate prominently in public affairs, and was comparatively unknown to many persons of more recent arrival, to those who knew him well in early days, and had social or business intercourse with him, he appealed most strongly, and the warm ties of friendship were never broken...He was a man of fine artistic tastes and many of his sketches portrayed not only promise of high accomplishments as an artist, but illustrated in a clever and original way many phases of fur-trading life in the West, which are unique and valuable as such. He was a close student and wide reader...

In talking of the hardships of reaching the Yukon, he used to laugh at the stories of 'tenderfeet.' On one occasion, while at Fort Vancouver, upon the arrival of a ship, he was ordered to report at Fort York, and on 4 days' notice undertook the journey, going up the Columbia River, and passing the site of Revelstoke of the present day, went up the Canoe River and through the Yellowhead Pass, out to the plains, whence he took the Saskatchewan River and on to his journey's end. These were the common and rather not uncommon experiences of HBC life which few men would undertake to undergo at the present day with greatly improved facilities of travel.

His wife, Mrs Charles, survives him, and his daughters, Mrs D M Eberts, wife of the Attorney-General and Mrs Worsfold, wife of C Worsfold, of Public Works dept, New Westminster, and a son, William B, chief clerk in the Registrar's office at Kamloops. PC. May 24, 5 - funeral... as chief mourners there were his son, William Burnie Charles, his 2 sons-in-law, Honourable D M Eberts and Cuthbert Worsfold, Harold, his grandson, John Work (b-i-l), James R Anderson, Alexander Anderson, J A Grahame Jr, and Captain James Gaudin, nephews and nephews by marriage. There were also present R P Rithet, E G Prior,

Mr Justice Irving, Edward Mohun, S Y Wootton, S H Matson, Beauchamp Tye, James K Worsfold, Ald G H Barnard and many others. Honourary pallbearers: Honourable J S Helmcken, Honourable Mr Justice Drake, Honourable Peter O'Reilly, Robert Edwin Jackson, KC, James A Grahame, Alexander Munro, C W R Thomson, Captain Herbert G Lewis. Active pallbearers: Honourable Edgar Dewdney, John A Mara, James Lawson Sr, E Crow Baker, Arthur W Jones, Frank S Barnard. B 097b098 E 31

Work/Died Jun, 1903 at San Diego, CA, Mr W D Snyder, an assayer, who studied and passed his examination in Victoria, aged 43 [burned by gasoline while engaged in his work]. When he was engaged at Alert Bay in assay work, he assayed a large boulder which had been lying in a residence for yrs, and found it to be rich in gold. A long search followed to endeavor to locate the property from which the ore had come, but none were successful.

Died Jun 5, 1903 at Victoria, BC, Joshua Davies, born in Sydney, Aus, in 1846. In the early 1850's the family left Aus for CA, being wrecked on the S coast nr Monterey, where Mr Davies' father engaged in business for some yrs. The family afterwards went to Sacramento, where they lost everything in a fire which consumed most of the city. Mr Davies spent his school days in San Francisco. He arrived in Victoria in 1864, where he soon afterwards became associated with his father in the auction business. On the death of his father he continued the business alone, and during his career conducted the principal auction sales in the city. Mr Davies was one of the pioneers of Kootenay, having been interested in many of the early enterprises in Kootenay...He was instrumental in inducing prominent capitalists to establish the first smelter in BC, at Pilot Bay...PC [Jun 6, 3] Buried - not in RBC records

Postal/June 11, 1903, 2 - An old resident, in the person of John Shields, arrived in Victoria on a visit after an absence of 17 yrs. Old-timers will be pleased to renew acquaintanceship with the man who nearly 2 decades ago handled the reins and brake on the trips which the Royal Mail coach made 4 times/day from Victoria to Esquimalt. Old associations are revered the most, and Mr Shields subordinated all other interests to his desire to find if there was anything left of the old coach which in the days gone by he drove along the then solitary rd to Esquimalt, for only a few wayside inns were encountered on the drive. After many enquiries among old-timers, he finally succeeded in locating the remnants of the old coach on a lot opposite the Commercial hotel. To John Shields, after an absence of 17 yrs, even the Parliament bldgs, the causeway, the post office, and the many other handsome edifices and improvements that have been constructed since his absence were not half so dear as the old battered and dilapidated remains of the coach he once drove. Most of the passengers who traveled to and fro on his mail coach have taken the final journey which sooner or later all mortals take. Mr Shields will spend a few days here before returning to his present home in Hamilton, ON. He will travel back via Portland, San Francisco and Mex.

Auto/Jun 14, 1903, 5 - T M Brayshaw, who has just completed the 1st automobile ever manufactured in BC, intends to give the vehicle a trial run over Victoria's streets this afternoon. The machine will be the largest ever seen in this city. It will accommodate 8 people. With an 8-hp engine, the machine will be capable of high speed, and altogether will be an attractive looking conveyance. The owner and maker is the 1st British Columbian, so far as known, to manufacture an automobile. The machine is finished in 1st class style, and reflects credit on the builder.

WmHx/Jun 14, 1903, 5 - A party of 13 young women from Eng brought over by Hon Mrs Joyce, who is at the head of a British emigration movement, have arrived in the province where they will in future make their home. Some of them have come out to join husbands and brothers already here, and a few are domestic servants. Speaking of the prospects of the movement, Miss Drake, who was in charge of the party on the trip West, said that the numbers brought out this yr would undoubtedly be far in advance of all previous yrs. Last yr the arrivals numbered 199, and at the rate they have begun this yr there should be between 250 and 350 brought out...

Died Jun 14, 1903 at Victoria, BC John Walsh, a pioneer of BC and Victoria. Deceased was 67, n/o Mein, Westmeath, Ire. He leaves 2 sisters, Mrs Godfrey, of Seattle, and Mrs J Doran, of Esquimalt, and 2 brothers, James and Patrick Walsh. Mr Walsh came to the province in 1862 from NZ. He was among the passengers of Alice Thorndyke, a vessel on which many Australians hearing of the mining excitement here, took passage. Ex-Chief of Police Sheppard was one of those who came on the same ship.

After a visit to the States, Mr Walsh made his way into the interior, and spent some time in mining operations in the Cassiar country. Returning, he settled in this city, and acquired an interest in the White Horse saloon. Pallbearers: N Cunningham, M McTiernan, B McGuire, P Everett, P Carr, J

Jun 18, 1903, 5 - T Seward, one of the oldest pioneers of BC, is at the Dominion Hotel. He prides himself on being a continuous subscriber of the Colonist since 1861. He remembers very well being asked to purchase a copy of the 1st issue of the British Colonist. He was standing in front of what was then Coonell Scott's saloon, but now the Windsor, opposite the Post Office, when handed the paper. Seward also referred to the 1st editorial, calling upon the home government, to build a drydock at Esquimalt. Seward landed in CA on Jun 4, 1850, and after mining there for 8 years, joined the rush of the 30,000 people who left in 1858 for the Fraser River. He was one of the discoverers of Cariboo, being among the 1st to visit Grouse, Keithley, Harvey and Last Chance Creeks. He afterwards returned to Victoria, and can recall to mind the exact words which James Douglas delivered in his speech in the old stockade grounds to the assembled miners. They were: 'Gentlemen, I deplore that you have left your quiet homes and come up here and haven't found the Fraser as rich as we anticipated. But I will advise you, one and all, to see the elephant, for I firmly believe the country is full of gold.' Seward prospected Quesnel River in 1860, and other remote portions of BC. He is full of interesting reminiscences of the early days of the province, remembering distinctly the names of the 1st business men of Victoria, and can describe old buildings which have long since disappeared in the march of progress. With such a stock of information, some effort should be made to induce Mr Seward to publish a book, recording his impressions, observations and memories of the pioneer days of the province. Died June, 1903 at Gibson's Landing, BC, 'Dr' Johnson, the oldest inhabitant of BC. He was born in 1786 or 115 yrs ago. He was the much-beloved and venerated chief of the Squamish tribe of Indians, and was so much liked and respected by the white settlers that every white man in the district turned out to pay their respects. 'Dr' Johnson's memory went far back to the time when the 1st white men settled in the country, and his description of historical events, and the faraway early days of BC were a never-ending source of interest to white settlers, who delighted to call on the aged chief. Deceased retained his faculties until the last.

Aug 8, 1903, 6 - Dr/Mrs Dickson, old res/o Victoria, but for the past 34 yrs res/o Portland, spent a few days here. Dr Dickson came here in 1859, when Victoria was an HBC post. Two large bastions stood at spots which enabled their 32 pounders to command the whole harbor, and each was surrounded by a high stockade, loop-holed for musketry, and guarded by sentries...His house and office was at the crnr of Government/Bastion sts, next the old office of the Colonist. Several medical men practiced in the town, but all save old Dr Helmcken have passed away; and so has every one of the old

HB officials. The late Amor de Cosmos was at that time a power in the land, and many a laughable and exciting time Dr Dickson saw during the political campaign of that restless and aspiring spirit. Dr Helmcken could not recognize in the clear-complexioned, stalwart man of 76 his old fellow-practitioner, Dr Dickson, but the 2 old doctors were none the less hearty in their greeting of one another. Dr Dickson could not see a very marked change in Dr Helmcken's features, and said he could recognize him at a glance anywhere... Poem/Sep 23, 1903, 4 - Lines on the Old Cemetery by Royland Tubbs -

It is a lonely spot of land o'er grown with trees and grass,
Man's pleasures last for but a day, how swift the glories pass
For here are laid the bones of those, who in their little day,
Did play their great or humble part, and then did pass away.

Did pass away, not to return to old familiar scenes,
Not to return, again to feel Life's vain and empty dreams
they rest beneath the waving grass, all toil and labor done.

Each petty trial, and bitter tear are perished every one.

They rest beneath the carven stone, who made our city stand,

Who built the primal trading post, and cleared the virgin land.

Who worked, and tolled from day to day,

with many a bitter pain,
When our late Queen was young and fair,
with many years to reign.

When all the din of modern life, was yet a thing to be,
Before the might ships of steam was found on every sea,
Before the engine's hiss and shriek, and broke the silent air,
Before the telegraph wire stretched endless everywhere.

We look upon the mossy stones and only read with care.

For many a storm and winter's wind have dimmed the writing there,

But still are dimly seen the names of noble men and strong,

Whose passage round the stormy cape was dangerous and long.

They came to build a little fort predestined to increase,

From yr to yr in strength and size, and never for to cease,

To bound a harbor for the ships on which the flag doth wave,

That ever shelters 'neath its folds the noble and the brave.

So when you feel you hear ... drive all such thoughts away,

As these brave traders slumber
now, so we must sleep some day,

But as they built Victoria up
so many years ago,
So weld it with the Empire
great that it may fear no foe.

Oct 11, 1903 - Sam White and Jimmy McLachlan have left Esquimalt for Eng. This announcement may not seem of such important moment to the general public, but it is a matter of great concern at the naval village, for the departure of the 2 old gentlemen removes 2 well known characters from Esquimalt. Old Sam White and 'Scotch Jimmy' were 2 of the pioneer boatmen, and both have accumulated considerable cash in their work at Esquimalt. Latterly they have often been heard to moan that 'there ain't the money in boatin' that there was,' and after many false starts both have at last retired from the boating business and gone to Eng to live comfortably on their savings for the balance of their days. 'Scotch Jimmy,' who won a reputation for being a saver of corn from away back, is said to have had quite a large amount of money.

Died Oct 28, 1903 at Victoria West, BC, Robert John Russell, n/o Edinburgh, Sct. Deceased was one of the best known of the little band of pioneers who assisted in establishing the city of Victoria, and was prominently identified with every forward step the city took from its inception.

A Scotsman by birth, he came here in 1852 in the service of HBC, and acquired from that body a large portion of the territory now known as Victoria W.

Possessing all the sterling attributes of his race he was indefatigable in his efforts at the advancement of all that concerned the welfare of Victoria. His large holdings in the western suburb as soon as the city commenced to expand, brought him a competence, and in later yrs of his life he was enabled to rest quietly and enjoy the fruits of an industrious early life.

He was aged 78, and had been married twice. A widow, son Robert John Russell and daughter Miss L E Russell, survive him.

From Hon J S Helmcken a Colonist reporter gleaned a few facts concerning the early career of Mr Russell. Deceased came to Victoria in Norman Morrison, which arrived from Eng in 1863. He came out in the employ of the Puget Sound Co, not HBC, as at first mentioned, and afterwards entered the employ of HBC. Mr Russell was given charge of the task of superintending the erection of a flour mill, the machinery of which came out on the Morrison. This mill was erected nr Craigflower bridge and the remains of the old structure are still in evidence.

By trade a blacksmith, after 10 yrs service with HBC, Mr Russell left their employ and acquired a large portion of the territory which is now known as Victoria W. Mr Russell originally owned the whole of Victoria W, with the exception of the Indian reservation. With tireless energy he went about the work of inducing population in that part of the city, but before many yrs the people needed no persuasion to settle there. About this time Mr Dunsmuir decided to build the E&N RR. Mr Russell divided his property into 2 lots, one of which he sold, keeping the other for himself, and calling it the Springfield Estate. Russell stn, the little depot about 1 mile from the Victoria terminus of the E&N RR, is called after him. That property was at one time included in Mr Russell's estate, and was disposed of by him in the transaction already referred to. Deceased served 2 yrs on the aldermanic board in 1869 and 1870. Nov 2, 1903 - Hallowe'en joke... 2 young ladies thought they would have a little joke on some ladies of their acquaintance, and they dressed a broomstick in hat, jacket and skirt, until the broomstick might have been mistaken for 'a rag, a bone and a hank of hair' in the darkness. Then they placed the dressed up broomstick at the front door of their friends' residence and rang the doorbell.

And all was still. The broom, with its frills and furbelows, stood against the door, ready to fall up against those opening the door - and there the joke was to explode.

But no one opened the door - and the ladies watched over a friendly fence. Then they saw something that caused them to utter a little squeak. Two small boys had quietly crept up to the door and appropriated the dressed broom - they need it for a Hallowe'en joke.

They grabbed it, hat, dress, jacket, collar, tie - the whole works - and fled. The ladies who had dressed it knew it had a certain value. So they gave chase to the youngsters, who were fleet of foot and soon distanced the ladies, who returned, disgusted to their homes.

An hr or 2 passed, and then the doorbell rang. They hurried to the door, and when it was opened a drunken woman staggered in and gave them such a fright that they screamed. But on a 2nd sight they recognized the staggering woman as the same old broom. The boys had had their joke and returned the dressed up broomstick.

Legal/Died Nov 4, 1903 at Victoria, BC Hugh Mackenzie Cleland, barrister-at-law, born 1869 at Collingwood, ON. Mr Cleland began the study of law in the office of Henry Robertson, KC, at Collingwood, and was easily the most brilliant of many capable young fellows who had read law in his office. Leaving Collingwood he took his final at Osgoode Hall. Then began his wandering, and he opened an office in Kansas City, built up a splendid practice, endeared himself to all who knew him, and thence to Chicago, where he repeated the same creditable record.

Indeed, wherever he went the brilliant young Canadian gained hosts of friends and the sincerest admiration... Five yrs ago he came to Victoria, and being duly admitted to the BC bar, laid the foundations of what was rapidly becoming one of the best general practices in the city.... Nowhere was the young barrister more popular than in Victoria, where he and his wife Mrs (Dr) Cleland, were the favorites of a very wide circle of friends... [Nov 5, 3] Pallbearers: D H Macdowall, G H Barnard, H H Rowley, A F Welby Solomon, A Robertson, G A Taylor, L Garnett, A S Dumbleton. A 029 E 28

Dec 1, 1903 - Letter to Ed - DWH's stories - The perusal of Mr Higgins' stories of old times in BC, which have been appearing in the pages of your paper, have afforded us old-timers the greatest delight, as no doubt they have many who are comparatively new to the country. I should very much like to hear of Mr Higgins publishing a book of these reminiscences. Will he not someday tell the story of how the word 'Scotty' got to be used by the Indians to designate a lunatic? The 1st person of unsound mind who was in Victoria (it was in 1860 I think) was an ex-engr named Scott, and seeing him in his harmless craziness about the streets, and knowing his name, the natives soon got to apply the word 'Scotty' to a person who was weak minded or foolish in any way. But the full story of Scott, of how he lost his reason through accident, of his Victoria life, and of his subsequent cure, would make a story of great interest, if handled by Mr Higgins in his masterly style. Signed W B Anderson.

V/Marine/Died Jan 8, 1904 in Straits of Juan de Fuca, Captain Livingston Thompson, n/o Kilquade House, Newtown, Mt Kennedy, Co Wicklow, Ire, late of 11th (Prince Albert's Own)

Hussars, being Captain and Adjutant [widow - Edith Mary Gillies Thompson]. He met his death in helping others in the wreck of Clallam. He lead a brigade of bailers, and worked like a Trojan. When Captain Roberts believed that the end had come and called the bailers up just before the steamer careened over and lay with her smokestack in the water and her masts away, Capt Thompson did his best to keep up the spirits of those who faced death with him. Brave man, as he was, he did all possible for others to the end. When called from below, Capt Thompson said, 'Let's give her another round for luck,' but none stayed. He joined the others in clambering up to the rail, and over on to the side of the overturned steamer. Lester David ran up with Thompson, and he says Thompson clambered over on to the steamer's side at the same time as he did. He believes that Thompson slid down and struck the guard, being precipitated into the sea, and he was not rescued as some of the other were.

Full military honours will be accorded the remains of Capt Thompson. The 5th Regt will march from the Drill hall. Three Captains of 5th and 3 Captains from the forces at Work Point barracks will be pallbearers, and the coffin will be borne on a gun carriage. A full attendance of members of the 5th Regt is expected owing to the great popularity of late Capt Thompson [also Orange Assn funeral]. Captain Thompson was very widely known here. His body was among those recovered from the upper works of the steamer and taken to Port Townsend. Mrs Thompson went over on Sun and accompanied the remains last evening. For about 6 years he has been a resident of Victoria. Of a cheerful disposition he was very popular with all who knew him. His brother was an officer in the same corps before him. Captain Thompson served in India in 1873-75. At Umballa, in India, he met Edith Mary Gillies, d/o late Colonel R C Tyler, of the East India Co's Bengal army, and was married to her at Simla. Since coming to Victoria he has followed the profession of land surveyor, and has been closely identified with several mining ventures on Vancouver Island. Funeral - The band and a firing party from the 5th Regt preceded the gun carriage on which the coffin was placed, following, Sgt R O Clarke, caretaker of the Drill hall, and an ex-member of the deceased's old Regt, the 11th Lancers, who led the horse of the deceased captain with his top boots and spurs turned wrong way in the stirrups. There were 2 sets of pallbearers, military and civilian. Military were officers of the RGA, Royal Engineers and 5th Regt. Captain McConnan, Adjutant, commanded the firing party. Died Feb 2, 1904 at Victoria, BC Jonas Freeman Norman,

aged 7, youngest s/o S Norman, janitor of the government bldgs. Deceased was accidentally shot in the abdomen by a pea rifle of the smallest calibre and as a result died within a few minutes.
Death was caused by careless handling of the rifle. Mr Dobson, who happened to be on the road, saw the accident and hastened to the boy's assistance, and finding him in a most serious condition, took him at once to the res/o Miss Miller, from which place Dr
Bolton was sent for.
Unfortunately the boy expired
before the doctor arrived.

There was no outside hemorrhage. The sad affair has cast a gloom over the whole neighborhood where the little fellow was a great favorite. Feb 4, 5 - Inquest -

SV/Feb 4, 1904, 5 - Tpr Robert Crowe, of S African Constabulary, returned home to Nanaimo after a 3 yr experience of the hardships of a soldier's life both in campaign service and duty in times of peace. He left Nanaimo in Feb, 1901, for the front, and immediately on the arrival there was sent forward in company with McLeod, Deveraux and Conrad, all Nanaimo men, with whom Crowe fought side by side during the closing battles of the war. Mr Crowe carries both the King's and Queen's medals, on which there are 5 bars. His pension will be 2s, 6p a day, and he has made application for further allowance on account of premature discharge from Netley hospital, which he believes did him great injury.

Feb 13, 1904, 6 - address by Rev Cornelius Bryant... arrived Feb 15, 1856. A friend of his had come to

Nanaimo w/party of Staffordshire miners, and it was his letters that had induced the speaker to come to the new country. He had no intention of coming out as a minister, but circumstances seemed to conspire to make him one. At the time of his arrival he was only 18. The colliers on VI had sent a request to HBC in London for a Methodist missionary, but the company had told them that none could be procured. The only minister in the country was Bishop Cridge... Bryant was going to Nanaimo as a school teacher... in those days it took a long time to get to Nanaimo. He waited 2 wks on Princess Royal before they could get away at all...

Work/Died as a result of injuries received at the powder works Mar 22, 1904 at Victoria, BC, Bertel Emil Olsen, 78, n/o Norway. Mr Olsen had proven himself one of the greatest inventors of powder and dynamite explosives. He followed that profession for over 60 years, and started this business when in boyhood days. He came to BC in the early 1860s, and joined in the rush to the goldfields. After a number of years in the goldfields he began to manufacture powder for the construction of the CPR. This was in the year 1880. About Jul, 1880, at Yale, Mr Olsen met with a misfortune, having lost $5,000 in a fire there which swept the whole city and along the mainline of the fire. He then came to Victoria and was for several years manager for the Giant Powder Works at 10-Mile Point. After serving a # of years at the works, he invented the drain pipes which are now used by the city for nearly the entire sewerage system. He and Tom Burnes Jr, s/o the well-known Tom Burnes of Victoria, were engaged at the old Lion Brewery manufacturing pipes, after which they agreed to sell for a neat little sum. He then turned his attention to coal mining. He and Mr Gabriol discovered coal on Tumbo Island, and after a few months' hard work, sold it to a fuel company, who worked it at a profit for a time. But Mr Olsen lost his share of the sale. Mr Olsen was very hard of hearing, and also was at a disadvantage of not having the use of the right arm, having been hurt in an explosion a few years previous. He lost his hearing and use of his right arm and he had to depend on a trusted friend. After this he mfg powder off Sehl's Point for Charles Hayward, who had a contract taking rock from the harbour. He then went to the Kootenay country with others for the manufacture of powder there, but just when nicely started his works and all its belongings were washed away by the large flood there, which caused so much loss all along the Kootenay River. Since then Mr Olsen has never been able to get a start to regain what he had lost through misfortune. Mr Olsen was a very quiet and useful man. He was always adding new points to mfg explosives, but never got the credit he should have. Deceased was born Sep, 1826. He leaves a wife and 9 children, 4 sons, 5 daughters. Pallbearers: A C Polhamns, W Smith, S Copeland, J Devine, J Clegg, R Raffelson. C 012 W 27

V/Died Jun 3, 1904 at Victoria, BC Robert Ross Monroe, n/o Bothwell, ON, aged 46, and educated at Bluecoat School, London, Eng. He came to Victoria many yrs ago and entered into employment of Messrs Findlay, Durham &

Brodie, subsequently joining the staff of R P Rithet, of which he was accountant. He was keenly interested in military matters and joined the 5th Reg, RGA, as a Gnr over 20 yrs ago, shortly after its organization, rising eventually to the command of the battalion with the rank of brevet Lt-Col. He was a recipient of the medal for long service and retired quite recently with rank of Maj.

Mr Monro was in his younger days a notable amateur athlete. He leaves a wife [nee Edith Franklin] and 1 daughter, his mother and 2 married sisters to mourn his death. Jun 5, 2 - will be accorded military honors... Jun 5 - Capt Currie recalls an incident of somewhat melancholy interest. About 2 yrs ago an Eng officer named Rochefort died in CA and as he had expressed a desire for a military funeral under the old flag, his body was sent up to Victoria. On that occasion Maj Monro made the rather curious remark to Currie that one thing he looked forward to was a military funeral. Jun 7, 5 - With Military Honors...PC. Bldg/Died suddenly Jun 15, 1904 at Victoria, BC Jacob Sehl, 70, born Nov 30, 1833 at Ediger, near Coblenz, Germany. In the passing of Jacob Sehl Victoria loses one of the most prominent figures in the remaining band of hardy pioneers who contributed to the early upbuilding of the city. When the news of the gold discoveries on the Pacific slope reached Europe, he, in company with his brother, Frank, was seized with 'the fever' and they embarked on a sailing vessel, via the Horn, and reached here in the spring of 1858. The brothers visited Cariboo, the scene of the gold excitement, and for a time engaged in mining. Returning to Victoria, Jacob Sehl spent some further time in mining at Sooke and on Leech River.

In 1860 he started in the furniture business in a small way in premises which then occupied the site of what is now the building in which Duff & Lawson have their law offices. Industrious, a good businessman, and of an enterprising character, the venture proved profitable and speedily grew into such dimensions that larger premises were required. So in 1886 a large brick factory was constructed at what became known as 'Sehl's Point,' James Bay, just where the harbour is narrowest, opposite the Indian reserve. Within a couple of years afterwards he erected also, on a beautiful site near the factory, one of the most palatial residences in the city, 3-storeys in height and of a style of architecture which was at once striking and attractive.

Some 10 years ago the 'streak of bad luck' which seems to pursue most men at one time or another in their career, overtook Mr Sehl. The fine residence was destroyed by fire one evening, the morning light disclosing only a heap of blackened ruins where once stood a splendid home. Fast on the heels of this disaster came business reverses. A period of hard times obtained in Victoria; the factory could not be profitably operated and it was closed. In an attempt to repair his waning fortunes Mr Sehl made several partnership ventures, the city end of the business being then transacted in the premises where his death occurred. These proved unsatisfactory and they were dissolved. Mr Sehl continuing alone up to the time of his death with varying success.

He married Elizabeth Van Allman, who died about 9 years ago. The surviving members of a large family are 2 sons: John J, of Tacoma and William, of Victoria, daughters, Mrs Sherwood, of NY, and Mrs Elizalde, Victoria. Frank Schiers is a nephew. The family of late Frank Sehl, deceased's brother, are all residents of this city.

He was one of the founders of the Pioneer Society and always took a great interest in the work of the organization. Of a musical turn, he organized the 1st German Liederkrantz in Victoria, and for a time served most acceptably in the Roman Catholic cathedral choir.

Jun 17, 1904 - Messrs Weiler have a poet on their staff. Yesterday their laureate stood at a SW factory window - gazing on the scene below. He had ceased work for the purpose of clearing his nose, when the following inspiration assisted him:

James Bay Mud Flats

When I survey the wondrous flat

I always stop and think,
And put my fingers to my nose
To guard away the stink.
But very soon it will be gone,
No more offensive smell.
And what will be the city's pride,
The CPR hotel. JL

Overlander/Died Jun 20, 1904 at Victoria, BC John Fannin, ex-curator of provincial museum. N/o Kemptville, ON, aged 67, born Jul 27, 1837. He was unmarried and has a brother and sister still living in the E. Accompanying him across the plains in 1862 were R B McMicking, J A Mara, John Bowron, G T Tunstall and many others now scattered over BC. Few men in BC were more widely known than 'Jack' Fannin. Crossing the plains in 1862, he plunged into the pioneer life of BC with its vicissitudes and its struggles with a cheery personality which soon won him the reputation of being one of the kindest and most cheery souls in the community. In common with all men at the period when he came to BC he followed mining with more or less success during 'the Cariboo excitement' but soon found his natural bent in leading hunting parties in various portions of the province. In this he gained an experience which served him in good stead, when during the regime of late John Robson's government he was appointed to the position of curator. This vocation suited him to a nicety, and to the intelligence and application which he brought to his task in the comparatively early days. BC owes it that she has now so splendid a museum.

As a taxidermist and historian his talents were recognized all over the continent. He was paid innumerable compliments by high authorities for the specimens he had secured and the skill and knowledge he had shown in their preparation for exhibition purposes. From an unpretentious nucleus of small birds, the museum grew under his supervision to its present magnificent proportions. Visiting representatives of NY museums and other noted institutions were loud in praise of his collection, asserting it was among the best of the kind they had ever seen. Notable amongst the types under his charge was the 'Ovis Fanini' a specie of goat in a class by itself, known only to the Yukon country in the vicinity of Dawson, being given that name because of its discovery and classification by Mr Fannin. There he contracted enteric fever, to which he succumbed, and to his memory his comrades erected a very pretty monument. The photo shows one of his former friends standing by the side of the monument, hat in hand. The inscription reads: 'In memory of Pte W Whitley, A Co, RCR, born at Victoria, BC, Canada, died at Johannesburg Jun 19, 1900, aged 23. Erected by his comrades.' Poor Willie! His friends will remember him as the bright young lad who used to carry off the prize for the best dressed Highland laddie at the Caledonia fetes held at Victoria.

Died Aug 15, 1904 at Victoria, BC, John A Peter, more popularly known as 'Old Chipps', one of the earliest pioneers of the province and quite a character in his way. He arrived here in 1860 on bark Grecian, the ship which brought the material for the lighthouse at Race Rocks and Esquimalt. 'Chipps,' who was a ship carpenter and in that way obtained his nickname, worked on the job of erecting the lighthouses and afterwards mined in Cassiar and Cariboo. In the excitement over Leech Rv in 1864 he joined in the rush to those rich placers. He was employed for yrs at his trade, in which he was an expert, by Hayward and Jenkinson and late H Tiedemann. He spent the latter yrs of his life in Victoria, and worked constantly on the James Bay retaining wall during the construction. He was 61.

Sep 18, 1904 - Herbert Albert, aged 5, only s/o H A Frederick, of the Windsor restaurant, was drowned in the hbr nr the old government wharf Sep 16. His body was found nr Jones' boathouse yesterday. Evidently the little fellow had fallen in while playing on the rocks nr the wharf. He appeared to delight in being nr the water and several times Mr Jones sent him away from his place as he feared that something would happen to him. His straw hat, which was held on his head by an elastic string, apparently kept him up, for the body was floating upright when found. An inquest was held yesterday by coroner Dr Hart, and verdict was returned of 'found drowned,' with a rider recommending property owners along the waterfront to prevent children from playing on their grounds. Funeral from the res, 151 Johnson st. There was a very large attendance of friends and many beautiful flowers. The children from the kindergarten school, Blanchard st, attended in a body at the res and sang a hymn entitled 'Gentle Jesus' around the little coffin of their deceased schoolmate. Med/Died Oct 10, 1904 at Victoria, BC, Henry Saunders. Victoria suffers a real loss in the passing away of this sturdy pioneer and leading merchant. No one had more faith in the great future of Victoria and VI than he, his efforts being constantly directed to advancing the interests of this section of BC.

Deceased, aged 67, n/o Stratford, Essex, Eng, and came to BC in 1862. Almost immediately on arrival he identified himself with the commercial life of the city, being placed in charge of P Manetta's grocery store on Johnson st. Some few yrs later he purchased the business and entered into a partnership with E Promis. A couple of yrs later Mr Promis retired and the business was continued under late Mr Saunders' proprietorship. After a long career amongst the most successful grocery concerns of the city, some 3 yrs ago the business was converted into a limited co with Mr Saunders as mgr.

Deceased served as a school trustee, was an active and esteemed mem/o Pioneer Soc and prominently identified with St John's church.

A widow, 5 children are left to mourn the passing of a kind husband and father, the children being Misses Ethel Saunders, a nurse at St Joseph's hosp; Elizabeth Saunders, Sidney, employed at the Ymir mines; Ernest, Victoria, and Kenneth, still attending school. Med/Dec 7, 1904 - A remarkable story of skin grafting comes from Pt Simpson. A boiler explosion occurred nr there recently when one man was killed. The survivor named Findleson, was so badly burned that the Dr decided that he must graft on skin, so he asked for volunteers, but none came forward. Then one woman heard of it, and others also came forward, and altogether 144 sq in of skin were grafted on the dying man's shoulders and arms. Dr Keegan ran out of material about this time, and heroically cut off a strip of his own skin from the shoulder to the elbow. Findleson may recover.

Med/Marine/Died Jan 1, 1905 at Victoria, BC, James Burgess Colvin, aged 51, n/o Shetland I, Sct, a res/o BC for upwards of 30 yrs and for many yrs prop of the Clyde shipyards in this city. Mr Colvin was a victim of that most horrible and little understood disease hydrophobia, caused by the bites of a wolf at Whitehorse 3 mos or so ago.

After long experience as a successful shipbuilder in Victoria, Colvin joined the migration to the Klondike in the excitement of 1897 and built the 1st of the river steamers plying upon the upper Yukon, the Ora, Flora and Nora. Every yr since that memorable period, while claiming Victoria as his permanent home, he has gone to the new N in the employ of the White Pass & Yukon Co, by whose officers he was held in the highest esteem and with whom he held an important and responsible position.

It was some time late in Sep last that Mr Colvin was the victim of the grim adventure that thus long since is the occasion of his fearful and untimely death. He and his wife were aroused by the pitiful howling of their little dog. Mr Colvin went outside to investigate the cause of its apparent distress, and was immediately set upon by a lone wolf, which fastened its fangs in one of his hands. Mr Colvin's cries brought 1st of all his wife, who bravely attacked the ferocious animal with a bit of wood. Afterwards several mem/o the NWMP joined in the rescue, and the brute made off, but not before Mr Colvin's hands had both been badly mangled.

The injured man was for several wks under the care of the res MD at Whitehorse, whence he returned to Victoria in early Nov. He was here attended by Dr Frank W Hall, under whose care his wounds healed even more rapidly than could at the outset have been hope for, and last mo he was able to undertake light manual work about his home, quite recently being engaged in the bldg of a fence about his residence, at the crnr Powderly/Dominion rd.

A few days after Christmas Mr Colvin complained of depression and illness, accentuating the fear he had persistently been tortured by - that hydrophobia would result from his unusual injuries. Last wk Dr Hall visited him, and symptoms of true hydrophobia presented themselves. The patient's 1st complaint was of severe pain in the throat and his crippled hands and arms. The case then had so developed itself that the MD ordered his removal to Jubilee hosp, where, less than 3 days later, after a series of contracted spasms, death mercifully terminated his tortures. Mr Colvin's last hrs were the more pitiable since he comprehended clearly the certainty of his awful fate, and retained possession of his mental faculties until a few short hrs before his dissolution... [description of disease/occurrence]...

The wolf by which the poor fellow was attacked was one which had been brought to Whitehorse from Cassiar by one of the police, was owned by the govt, and was allegedly being kept and partially tamed in order that experiments might be made as to the result of crosses for dog team work... [Colvin had considered suing]

Deceased leaves a widow, d/o Police Sgt Hawton, and 2 sons Walter, aged 12, James, aged 14. Pallbearers: M Maciver, D Stewart, E Mercer, J O Williams, T Whelan, W H Price. AOF and Ships Carpenters' Union. H 078b079 E 21

V/Jan 11, 1905, 5 - It may be news to many Victorians that the grandchildren of the inventor of the shrapnel shell which has been used with such terrible results in the Russo-Japan war are residents of Victoria, BC, and they are now endeavoring to have the British government make a tardy recognition of the services rendered by their ancestor, General Shrapnel, to the British Empire. The shell which has wrought so much slaughter in the present war takes its name from General Shrapnel, a General of the RA, who 100 years ago invented the shell which has slain its tens of thousands and won battles for his country.

Today the grandchildren of the inventor are by no means as affluent as they would have been had their grandfather not invented the terrible engine of war which bears his name.

General Shrapnel, son of Captain Shrapnel, his eldest surviving grandson, writes to the London Times from Victoria, ruined himself and his family by his continued experiments for the benefit of the British service. He spent £30,000 in this way, and in return he received from a grateful country a limited and inadequate pension for a few years prior to his death.

The General himself said: 'Commanding officers who have used my shells and whose written testimony admits that by their use many battles were gained for Great Britain, have titles, honours and rewards, while the inventor is unheard of.' The small pension actually involved him in loss, since it was a bar to promotion.

A petition to the House of Lords in 1868 asking for some recognition on account of the large sum expended by the General was utterly ignored.

Captain Shrapnel trusts that the people of the British Empire will not rest satisfied with the injustice under which his grandfather suffered. [W 002 E 45]

SV/Jan 17, 1905, 5 - Nelson McDonald, a well-known Victoria boy, in late Boer war, and his receipt of a medal to be treasured by himself and his descendants as a souvenir of that campaign. McDonald was made happy yesterday by the receipt through the mail of a S African war medal earned by him by his participation in the Boer war. The medal is of silver and hangs pendant from 3 clasps, signifying that the wearer took part in at least 3 engagements. On the obverse side is the head of her late Majesty the Queen, and on the reverse is depicted a battle scene. The name of the owner and his regiment are engraved on the edge.

Young McDonald enlisted at Victoria with the 2nd CMR under Lt-Col Evans, formerly stationed at Dawson in command of the Yukon Field Force, and saw 13 mos active service, participating in the battle of Hart R, that of Diamond Hill and the skirmishes of the Cape Colony, S African and Transvaal bars.

Nelson McDonald is s/o late Alexander McDonald and Mrs McDonald, who owned the Windsor hotel for a # of yrs. News/Feb 7, 1905 - 58th anniversary of marriage - ex-Sheriff and Mrs McMillan, which occurred at Oshawa, ON, 1847. He: n/o Oshawa, in which city he started the Oshawa Vindicator, a country paper still running, Mr McMillan has spent the greater part of his life in Victoria, having been one of the pioneer newspapermen and newspaper proprietors of BC, and for 14 years was sheriff of Victoria, retiring a few years ago.

'In 1858 or 1859, I was sub-editor of the Colonist, of which Amor de Cosmos was then editor and D W Higgins 'outside man.' I was a journeyman printer then, and Amor de Cosmos, when he started the Daily Colonist, knowing me to be a trained newspaperman - made me sub-editor. Later I became editor and remained until a deputation came from New Westminster, and in answer to their invitation I went there and founded the Columbian of that city.

'I never took part in the gold rushes. During the excitement in regard to the discoveries of gold on the Fraser River, in Cariboo and in Cassiar, I thought I wasn't cut out for a gold digger and decided to stick to the printing. John Robson, who was afterward Premier, was editor and manager of the Columbian, which I had agreed to take charge of for 12 months. At the end of the year I decided to come back to Victoria, although I was offered the management of the whole concern. I loaned Robson $500 with which he bought into the Columbian.

'Coming to Victoria, I met D W Higgins, and told him I was going back home to Oshawa, which, as we used to say then, was in Eastern Canada. Mr Higgins argued that I could do better here, which, of course, I could. Anyhow we decided to establish a newspaper, and we started the Chronicle. It was a good paper, and made money. I was editor; Higgins did the outdoor work. It was during the American civil war. A question arose, for discussion regarding the free port. I took the view that it should not be a free port. The taxation was unjust. The landowners paid high rates, but the business men, auctioneers and others paid nothing. I saw it would be ruinous to have Victoria continue as a free port, and Higgins thought as I did. I wrote a leading article which was like throwing a bombshell into Wharf street, which was filled with people who imported goods for sale.

'When Higgins went to Wharf street after that article appeared, they all pitched into him. He came back and said to me: 'They're mad as ___ on Wharf street.' I expected they would be. These men were making fortunes and paying no taxes... I wrote a 2nd article later which played old Harry on Wharf street. Higgins said stop, but I didn't want to, and we afterward did not agree and dissolved partnership.

'My family was still in Ontario when I left the Chronicle, but I had previously written to my wife and family, and they came here. Finally I made up my mind to get an office and start another newspaper after Higgins bought me out, and I started the News and went at the free port question again. The News, like the Chronicle, is now defunct. I became sheriff about 13 or 14 years ago. I have 5 sons and a daughter, 3 grandsons and 2 great-grandchildren. News/Died Feb 9, 1905 at Victoria, BC, William Denny, 75, a pioneer resident of Victoria, n/o Highwickham, England. He emigrated to this country in the early 1860s, joining that hardy company of voyageurs who turned their eyes toward the golden Cariboo, Mr J J Austin, of Victoria, being one of those who journeyed with him on the voyage around the Horn.

In Victoria Mr Denny engaged in mercantile pursuits, and in this connection established the 1st drygoods store in the city in a location where the Balmoral hotel is now situated. He afterwards formed a partnership with David Spencer in the same line. In the course of his commercial enterprises he accumulated considerable property, and retired from active business about 12 years ago. Deceased leaves a wife, 6 daughters, 2 sons to mourn their loss. George Denny, formerly of the Colonist, and now correspondent for the Associated Press in Russia, has distinguished himself in the journalistic field. James Denny, Vancouver; Mrs F Bailey, Port Townsend, Mrs McKenzie, Mrs Walter Powell, Mrs William Gordon, Victoria. There are 2 unmarried daughters living at home. Word was received from George Denny from Moscow a few days ago, that he was on his way home, having been apprised of his father's illness. It is supposed that the difficulties of travel in that war-troubled country have prevented his arrival as soon as he had expected. Feb 11 - J J Austin recalls that the vessel on which these adventurous spirits embarked left Southampton, England, Apr, 1862. They went as far as St Thomas, West Indies, and from there made their way to Colon and thence across the Isthmus of Panama. Steamer Origara carried Messrs Denny and Austin to San Francisco, where they stayed for a short time before sailing for Victoria on their way to the goldfields of Cariboo. Mr Denny reached Vancouver Island late in the summer of 1862 and joined the rush to the gold mines. As a miner, however, he did not meet with much success, and after working on the construction of roads for some months, returned to Victoria and opened a grocery on Johnson street. This was the commencement of the successful career which has already been related. Pallbearers: David Spencer Sr, C E Redfern, D E Campbell, James Forman, George Jay, J S Yates. Feb 18, 1905, 8 - Visiting Victoria - Henry Woolcock, a veteran miner of CA and Cariboo. Mr Woolcock joined the gold seeking rush to CA in the early days, and after spending a good number of years in the mining camps of that state, came north and packed in over the old trail to Barkerville. This was in 1855, and from that time to the present visit Mr Woolcock has not had sight of the ocean, and has not courted the scenes of civilization... One year after his arrival in the great camp, he was joined there by Harry Jones, another pioneer of the district, and its present representative of BC. An acquaintance sprung up between the 2 men, and together and with others they engaged in various ventures after the hidden riches of the country... en route to his old home in England...

JwHx/Died Mar 14, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Isador Braverman, 75, n/o Pilcheu, Germany. Deceased came to Victoria several years before the gold excitement in Cariboo and the subsequent rush of miners into the interior. He witnessed the growth and development of Victoria from a small HBC post to the capital of BC. Arriving here in 1858 he immediately established a wholesale and retail tobacco business, which speedily assumed large proportions.

The gold excitement occurring in 1862, he decided to try his luck and joined the crowd which passed through Victoria to the northern mines. Not meeting with much success, Mr Braverman returned to Victoria, resuming his business connections already established. This venture thrived exceedingly, and making lucky speculations in property, he speedily amassed considerable wealth.

Some 10 years ago Mr Braverman was enabled to retire from active commercial pursuits, though his identification with all matters which tended towards civic progress was always most marked.

Deceased was in recent years particularly interested in charitable movements, evincing special interest in hospital affairs. When the Royal French hospital was established at the head of Pandora street, Mr Braverman was one of the 1st subscribers. He was a prominent director, and when this old time institution was absorbed by the Royal Jubilee hospital, he was 1 of 3 members of the board of directors of the institution. Since then, until failing health prevented, he has taken a great interest in the management of hospital affairs. Mar 18, 5 - Hospital board pass resolution deploring demise of Braverman...

that have long been occupied by the historic bldgs.

The house was erected by late William Giles Bowman 40 years ago, and for many years was maintained as a high class boarding house by Mrs Bowman. The establishment was noted for the excellence of its cuisine, which was far and away ahead of that of any other house in Victoria, except that provided by M Hartnagel at the Driard, who has never had a peer in BC.

Guests at the Bowman were chiefly young American bachelors who were employed by various interests represented here at the time; and a jolly houseful they were. Three or 4 times in each year the house was thrown open to friends, and there were music, dancing, cards and pretty matrons and lovely girls for partners.

At midnight the doors of the dining hall were thrown open and there would be provided the daintiest of suppers, with Mrs Bowman presiding, assisted by the aforesaid pretty matrons and lovely girls. The memory of those feasts still tickle the palates of the bon vivants who enjoyed them and who love to recall their gastronomic experiences beneath that hospitable roof with pleasurable emotions.

When Mrs Bowman died, 25 years ago, the house passed into the hands of Japanese, and is now in a state of dilapidation and filth, quite the antithesis of its condition when it occupied the proud position of the leading place of accommodation in Victoria. Died Mar 21, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Donald Mackay, 78, n/o Portnalick, Scotland. Deceased came to Victoria in 1862, and shortly after arrival was like almost all of the men who came here in the early days, speedily fascinated by the reports of the gold discoveries in Cariboo and joined in the stampede to 'the creeks.' Dame Fortune did not smile on Mr Mackay, and he soon returned to Victoria, joining the employ of HBC; and it is a testimonial to the sterling qualities of his character to mention that he remained in the employ for 25 years.

During the latter years of his business career he was a valued servant of CPN Co. Deceased was an ardent Scotsman, and a prominent member of all Scottish societies. He will be remembered as officiating as piper at all the society functions - making quite a picturesque figure in his kilts and tartans.

Marine/Died Mar 30, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Capt Henry George Lewis, shipping master of the port of Victoria and the last of the pioneer shipmasters of HBC service. He came to Victoria, then an HBC factory, with bastions, stockades, etc, in 1847, in HBC bark Cowlitz. He was a pioneer of pioneers, as was his late wife (nee Mary Langford), who preceded him by a few yrs to the last port of all mariners. His wife's brother was the 1st native son of BC.

Capt Lewis was 77, n/o Aspenden, Hertfordshire, Eng, s/o Edward Lewis Esq, gentleman farmer, and in his youth attended Cheltenham college, in the W of Eng. The late Lord Salisbury, Britain's former minister, was also born in Aspenden, and as a boy played with late Capt Lewis in the old English lanes. There was about 1 yr difference in the ages of the two, and both were boon companions until Capt Lewis joined HBC and 'went to the colonies.'

Having a craving for the sea, Capt Lewis joined the service of shippers trading to the Indies, and made several voyages to India, and China as a boy. In 1847 he joined HBC and came to Ft Victoria, arriving the same year. The Fort, known as Ft Camosun, had been established but 4 years before. Cowlitz in which he voyaged here was one of 3 vessels which made yearly voyages, bringing outfits for a yr. The 1st of the vessels to enter this port direct from Eng was the Vancouver, which came 2 yrs before late Capt landed. In that yr, where Victoria now stands, a fine crop of pease and potatoes was being grown, and wheat, 40 bushels to the acre, being raised for export to Sitka. Two Russian vessels came and took N 5,000 bushels of wheat, besides beef and mutton, to AK, paying with bills of exchange on St Petersburg. It became the fur depot and was also considered a whaling stn, although this feature was attended with insignificant success. It was not until 1850 that the seeds of a city were sown, with new trades and new jargons, with a cash trade for goods as well as a fur trade, where merchandise was sold for money by those who theretofore knew not what money was. That was Victoria when Capt Lewis came.

Then the watchman stood at the gates of the fort and cried hourly, 'All's well!' Sir James Douglas was Governor, and recognizing the sterling worth of the just passed pioneer, he stationed him at Ft Simpson, where a fort with stockades, bastions, culverins, etc, similar to Ft Camosun, held the factory. He had many stirring experiences when at the northern factory. For 16 yrs he was engaged in the HBC service, serving on steamers Beaver, Otter, Labouchere, Enterprise, and Princess Louise, this being his last command, vacated in 1886, to join the service of marine and fisheries dept.

Before taking up his work at Ft Simpson late Capt Lewis made a trip home to Eng. This trip concerns the Capt's love story. He had fallen in love with Miss Mary Langford, d/o Edward Langford, whose estate comprised the Langford Plains. Unfortunately for Capt Lewis, the young lady's parents did not acquiesce in the match, but, nothing daunted, the young man followed them to Eng, where he overcame all obstacles and married her in 1852. They came again to Ft Victoria together on the ship Norman Morrison, and lived happily together in BC from that date. To show how highly HBC estimated the Capt's services, he was given charge of the whole of the fur trade in Russian territory, which was considerable before the acquisition of the territory by the US government.

He soon secured a vast knowledge of the waterways of the BC coast, and an entry in the log of the old steamer Beaver, wrecked nr Vancouver, shows that in 1856 he went on board the US man-of-war Massachusetts and piloted her up the Fraser Rv. Moreover, Capt Lewis had the honour of being the 1st man to pilot a steamer through Plumper Pass, now known as Active Pass. He took HMS Plumper through this channel, which received its name as a result of the incident.

In 1883 he started his shore service, and acted as agent in Victoria for the marine and fisheries dept. Later he became shipping master for this port and occupied that berth until he passed away. He never used spectacles to aid his vision. He was a member of IOOF. His friends are numerous, and many of them recall that late Capt had a favorite song. On festive occasions he was ever ready to sing 'God Bless King Bill, Our Sailor King.' His passing will be keenly regretted, though it comes with the fullness of yrs. Bldg/Died Apr 4, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Edward Mallandaine, 78, a pioneer resident of this city since 1858. Born in Singapore, Straits Settlements, of English parents [son of late Colonel John Mallandaine, of the Honourable EICS], he received his early training in London; in 1853 he was attracted to Australia by the gold excitement in the colony, and spent 2 years there with indifferent success. In 1856 he returned to London and delivered a course of lectures dealing with the goldfields of Australia. In 1858 he came to BC, being attracted thither by the Fraser River gold excitement. He had many exciting adventures in the wilds of BC, one time captured by the Indians, who robbed him of all his belongings. Making several fruitless attempts to reach Cariboo, he ultimately returned to Victoria and engaged in the practice of his profession, that of architect, being the 1st to practice that vocation in BC. He designed a large number of residences and public buildings in the early days and issued the 1st BC directory published on the Pacific coast.

In 1859 deceased established a night school for miners in a building on Broad street, which stood on the site of the present Colonist structure. This was well patronized and proved a real boon to the miners, many of whom were wintering in Victoria. He was amongst the 1st to pre-empt land on Salt Spring Island, the price paid being $1/acre. A party of 14 chartered a schooner and went to the Island, and out of that party of 14 only 2 are alive today - Mr Martin, of Ganges Harbour and Mr Sampson, of the E coast of VI.

In 1867 deceased married Louisa Townsend, of Victoria, at St John's church. Mallandaine was one of the few who remained with Bishop Hills as a member of the his flock.

Deceased was one of the 1st members of the HB Rifles, afterwards known as the Victoria Rifles, occupying for years the position of Captain and paymaster. He superintended the construction of the old drill hall. A friend of the deceased recalls the interesting fact that he placed in position in 1860 the 1st street signs used in Victoria, one of which may yet be seen at the corner of Wharf & Fort streets. Before construction of the CPR, deceased was draughtsman on surveys with Messrs Wilmot, Gamble and a number of others.

An event which cast a gloom over his later years was the death of his 2nd son, Fred, the well-known oarsman and athlete, who succumbed from exposure in an open boat off Macaulay Point 10 years ago. Pallbearers: J Pierson, A J Joule, G Jay, E Welch, F G D Simpson, C E Redfern. B 068 W 37

Died Apr 13, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Jeremiah 'Jerry' Griffiths, 67, n/o Llanelly, Wales, a most popular and highly respected pioneer resident. Deceased was for many years employed as wharfinger for CPN Co, and in that capacity was brought in contact with most of the business men of BC. Coming from England in 1864 on Robert Lowe, he found upon arrival the city in great excitement owing to the influx of a horde of miners from CA and Australia, bound to the Cariboo gold diggings. Mr Griffiths speedily caught the fever and was one of the 1st part to reach Williams' Creek, where the original strike had been made a year or so before. Not meeting with the success he anticipated, he set out for the Omineca country, which he reached after many hardships. He located on Slate Creek, the prospects appearing very good, and for several years he operated this claim with good results. Ultimately becoming tired of the life of a miner, he returned to Victoria and entered the employ of HBC, for many years acting as their wharfinger. When CPN Co obtained control of the shipping of this port, he was transferred to its staff, and was again appointed wharfinger when CPR took over the business. Died May 9, 1905 at Victoria, BC, John Camp, 62, proprietor of the Prairie hotel, Saanich district, born at Chesterfield, Derbyshire, England. He came to Victoria in 1863, having been attracted by the gold excitement in Cariboo. He mined there for a number of years and was fairly successful. On his return to the coast he went out with several survey parties and accompanied the surveyors who laid out Vancouver. On giving up that vocation he took over the Royal Oak hotel, which he conducted for 13 years. Sixteen years ago he sold out the Royal Oak and removed to Saanich, becoming proprietor of the Prairie tavern. A widow and daughter, Miss Marion Camp, are left to mourn. May 14, 1905, 16 - photo text - 50th wedding anniversary of James Kent, of Ealing, Eng & Ellen, youngest d/o Samuel Jones. Early in his married life, Mr Kent decided to seek a new home in the new world, arriving in Victoria in 1862. Mr Kent was not successful as a gold miner, and returning to Victoria took up his residence here, earning his 1st dollar in this city by copying music. He was joined here in 1862 by his wife and their young son, Herbert, who made the long and trying journey from Eng by way of the Isthmus. In partnership with a Mr Frost, Mr Kent established himself in the hardware business in the mid-1860s, at a site on Fort st where the office of Messrs Pemberton & Sons stands today, the firm's being the 1st store erected on this now important business thoroughfare. Mr Kent subsequently identifying himself with the house of late Edgar Marvin, and afterwards being engaged for a period of 17 yrs with Marvin & Tilton, whom he left to accept the city treasurership in 1887. Mr/Mrs Kent, the latter of whom holds, as does her husband, a high place in the respect and esteem of the hosts of friends, and who in a distinctly womanly and unostentatious way has borne her part in the many charitable and philanthropic efforts inseparable from the evolution of Victoria from a humble wilderness settlement to modern city; and who, being the possessor of a rich soprano voice, was especially prominent in the musical life of the young city....

Died May 15, 1905 at Victoria, BC, William Ralph, 73, a pioneer resident of Victoria and BC, and a highly respected member of civil engineers and land surveyors. Deceased was born at London, Ontario. He came to BC in 1862 and joined in the rush to the gold regions. Five or six years were spent in the diggings and he returned to Victoria with his well-earned savings. He was perhaps the best informed man on the topographical features of Vancouver Island in BC. He was at the head of most of the notable surveying parties which went out on exploratory work on the Island during the last 25 years and laid out the original lines for E&N Railway and the trunk road from Victoria to Nanaimo, pronounced by experts to be engineering feats of a very exceptional order. His skill as a surveyor at once gained for him a wide reputation and his services were much in demand for all classes of work in his line. Possessing the commercial instinct to a marked degree, he amassed a considerable fortune, having made several very lucky investments in Vancouver real estate when that city was in its early stages of development. For the last 15 or 20 years he has been almost continually in the employ of the Esquimalt Waterworks Co. He was always very careful and methodical, the result of this is shown by the large number of field notes that he has among his possessions.

He was of a reticent and retiring disposition and for this reason did not possess the wide range of acquaintances which he would otherwise have done. He leaves a brother in Ontario, 2 nephews, 1 niece in BC, to whom the major portion of his estate will go. Pallbearers: Andrew Tolmie, John Robertson, E B McKay, T S Gore, James Muirhead, John Hepburn. B 079 E 37

LogHx/Died May 19, 1905 at San Francisco, CA, Mr W E Baines, an old-timer of BC. He was a bookkeeper for Victoria Times, under late Mr J C McLagan in 1885-86. He was n/o Ottawa, ON. He won fame on this coast by being the 1st to try to tow a large log raft from the Columbia Rv to San Francisco. Though Mr Baines was at that time without means, his reputation for pluck was so well established that he obtained the backing of the Crocker-Woolworth bank. Within 4 months he had constructed the 1st gigantic raft that ever ventured upon the ocean. When the voyage had been ½ accomplished a storm was encountered which demolished the raft. It is related as a striking instance of his coolness and foresight that for hrs he sat, axe in hand, beside the lashings that secured the end of the 800T chain, that encased the raft to the towing bits. No one else had foreseen what would happen to the laboring tug when the great chain finally dropped from the doomed raft, and it was a timely blow from Mr Baines' axe at the critical moment that prevented the tug and its crew from being carried to the bottom of the sea. In spite of this the bank again staked him, and with the result that his next venture came through safely, the business finally netting Mr

Baines a comfortable fortune.

Oh the pits, jolly pits, the Spring Ridge pretty pits,
How they double up the aldermen in apoplectic fits!
For Hanna's now in trouble
As he wanders thro' the stubble
Of the pits, sandy pits - oh,
those horrid, horrid pits.

For the pits, gravelly pits, the Spring Ridge pretty pits...

For the pits, gravelly pits, the rutted, jagged pits,
Fullerton waxes eloquent as calm the mayor sits:
For the Ridge's fighting

people

Have him boosted to the steeple

'Gainst the pits, private pits, the caving, falling pits.

SV/Jul 2, 1905, 8 - Land scrip granted by BC government to volunteers of S African war lapsed [Jul 1]. The scrip was granted by legislature of 1901 to men who went from this province to S Africa to fight. The men of all 3 contingents, in all about 350, were entitled to scrip, which carried with it a crown grant title to any unoccupied land the holder might choose, free from taxation for a term of 10 yrs and free of all fees and dues in recording. As a basis of acquiring land, S African scrip has been counted one of the best and surest titles in BC, and quite a bit of speculation in these securities naturally resulted. Two months ago the scrip was selling as high as $260 for 1/4 section, but during the past 60 days has been gradually dropping til it was as low as $100. Not much of the land taken up was located by the men who actually earned the scrip by their bravery.

Died Jul 3, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Crispin Taylor, 86, born at Yorkshire, England. The discovery of gold in CA caused Mr Taylor to try his fortunes at the new goldfields. He worked there as a miner from 1849 for several years, and then sailed for Australia. Meeting with little success there, he returned to US for a short time, and some months later joined the rush to BC in 1862. After travelling as far as Cariboo and operating on the creeks of that locality for several years, he established himself on the Fraser River. About 36 years ago he left the mainland and took up his residence at Victoria. Pallbearers: E John, A Graham, C Pardoe, G Wynne, B Dobson, W Beaumont. B 084 W 37

Died Jul 17, 1905 at Victoria, BC, James Deans, one of those who came to Victoria in 1853 on Norman Morison, in employ of HBC, n/o Haddingtonshire, Sct. While at Ft Victoria Mr Deans, a scholar, devoted much time to a study of the dialects and languages of the BC Indians. He was a poet, geologist, ethnologist and anthropologist. He was one of the few men able to translate and interpret the totem marks and crests of the N Indian tribes. Mr Deans, or 'Jimmie' Deans prepared an anthropological exhibit for the 1892 Chicago World's Fair, which consisted of one of the ancient lodges and a totem taken from Skidegate and he reproduced a Haidah village, with specimens of the utensils, implements, dress, etc, of the people. This exhibit still attracts much attention at the Field's museum there. An interesting volume 'Tales From Totems of the Haidery' was issued by Mr Deans, in the preface of which he wished to print the legends for the purpose of preserving them for prosperity... Died Nov 6, 1905 at Victoria, BC, James 'Jimmy' Orr, one of the oldest residents of BC and a pioneer who had a remarkable and interesting record. He was easily the best known of the old-timers and having spent later years of his life in Victoria, was a familiar figure on the streets, infirmities of age, while preventing him from engaging in any active occupation, permitting him to stroll about greeting his old friends. He was employed in the service of the BC government during 1901-3, and subsequently received a pension. Deceased leaves a wife resident in Vancouver. The latter's sister was wife of late Dan McGillvray, and another sister is Mrs D G Marshall.

The late Mr Orr, was n/o Liverpool, England, but spent some time of his early youth on the Isle of Man. He left England for America in 1835. The passage to NY took 8 weeks and NY was a comparatively small place in those days. On arrival to the US he proceeded to Chilcothie on the Siota River, and at Kingston, Ohio, he bought a place, but 2 years later he gave it up and came to Canada in 1837, the time of the McKenzie rebellion, eventually settling in Stratford, Ontario, where he was engaged in commercial pursuits for some years. The country was then nearly all bush. There were no roads and few settlers, and the mails were carried on horseback, but being a beautiful country and good land it began to fill up fast after the rebellion of 1838-1840.

In 1858, upset by family considerations and impelled by a roving spirit, he developed the idea of penetrating to BC, a project of no mean proportions at that time, the route being via Panama. He remained about 8 months in CA, and upon reaching BC, then a Crown colony, he engaged in mining interests, and was subsequently elected as the representative in the Legislative council for Cariboo East, with the title of Honourable, a position he held from 1863 to 1865. Sir Henry Crease was the Speaker of the legislative body, and of the 12 members who composed it Mr Orr was the only one that remained. From 1882 to 1890 he was member of the provincial legislative assembly for New Westminster before the constituency was divided into its present form.

During the period of his sojourn in BC he travelled throughout the entire province, including Atlin and the Queen Charlotte Islands, and many varied were his remarkable experiences. He was engaged upon the Marcus Smith survey, the object being to find a pass through the mountains other than the Fraser valley [and Thompson River]. Mr Michaud was operating at Bute Inlet, but Mr Orr was away up at Gardiner's Inlet. The survey with estimates was duly completed and sent to Ottawa, but the documents were nearly all destroyed in a fire which occurred in an annex of the those buildings. The foregoing facts respecting Mr Orr's life were gleaned in conversation with him by a Colonist reporter a few days ago... 'You ask me what I have done,' he said mournfully. 'Well, I have been at everything. I have lived at various periods all over BC, everywhere, always wandering, an Ishmael on the land.' He was the youngest son of Reverend Dean Orr, and came to North America when he was 6. He was educated in the US and ON. At an early age he was engaged in various enterprises and occupied a number of different official positions. Among such he was clerk, assessor and collector for New Westminster, and also clerk of the police court there. For 3 years he was an assistant paymaster of CPR construction, and at one time he was also manager of a fishery on Queen Charlotte Islands. Mr Orr located lots in what is now Vancouver and in the celebrated arbitration on what was known as the 'squatters claims,' Mr Orr was awarded 2 lots on the north side of Cordova street, between Cambie and Abbott. SV/Died Nov 9, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Frank Cookson, b/o C M Cookson, aged 23, n/o Whittingham, Lancashire, Eng. He was formerly a Sapper in the Royal Engineers, and was for some time stationed at South Africa. He served through the South African campaign, serving in Cape Colony, the Orange Free State, Transvaal and South Africa, 1901-02, for which he had a medal with 5 bars. Mr Cookson arrived here a few months ago. He leaves besides his brother here, a mother and sisters in the old land to mourn his loss. He was a member of the 12 Co, RE, and during his service contracted enteric fever. He was one of the selected troops at late Queen's funeral. Not regaining his health, he was ordered change of climate and came to Victoria last year. During his residence here he was one of the enthusiastic members of the 5th Regt. With full military honours Frank Cookson was laid at rest. There was a large attendance of members of No 2 Co, 5th Regt, of which deceased was a member, while a detachment from Co's 44 and 48, RE, Work Point barracks, was also present. From the parlors to the church and from there to Ross Bay cemetery the casket was carried on a gun carriage wrapped in a Union Jack. It was escorted by the RE, with Sgt Edwards in command, and Cpl Stokes, Sapper Delgan, Sapper Jones, Sapper Goldsmith and Sapper Richardson acting as pallbearers. At the head of the procession were the local militia under Capt Winsby, a firing party under Sgt Nesbitt, and the band. The soldiers walked with arms reversed and to the time of the dead march. At the graveside 3 volleys were fired and the last post sounded by a mem/o the Bugle band. B 003 W 32

V/Dec 10, 1905, 7 - letter to ed - Military funerals - Sir - regarding military funerals, kindly allow me a little space to vent my grief. Like all old soldiers, I have always felt with pride at the way all military funerals have been conducted in Victoria in the past. The respect shown to a departed comrade has always been of the highest. Yesterday there was - well, shall I call it a military funeral? No, no; I will not tell a lie; I wept. Perhaps it was that I wept too soon, and my eyes deceived me. At Christ Church cathedral there stood the gun carriage for sure; but did the driver, with his lovely blue tweed overcoat, have a fur busby on? No; it was a silk top hat. He drove 2 of the most dirty, ill-matched horses ever seen with harness. Now, Mr Editor, will someone kindly inform me: 1st, was this a military funeral? 2nd, if not, why not? The deceased was one of the oldest members in the 5th Reg, and entitled to full military honors. If it was, then please inform me when the next one takes place, and I will stay at home. Signed, An Old Member of the 5th. [?]

Died Dec 11, 1905 at Victoria, BC, Daniel Fowler Adams, 75, another pioneer of BC. Mr Adams died of heart disease at his home, Gorge Road, and leaves to mourn his loss, a widow, 4 sons, Charles, Frederick, John, George and daughter, Mrs Davidson, of Vancouver. Deceased born at Greenwich, King's County, New Brunswick.

One of the Argonauts of CA, he left the comforts of his boyhood home in the 1850s for the hardships and strenuous life of CA and later BC. He reached San Francisco in 1852, and was a member of the Vigilantes who took it upon themselves to make life and property safe throughout the west. Two years later Mr Adams reached Victoria, and from Apr 1858 had been associated with the history and making of BC. For a time he engaged in his trade, that of building and contracting, but the excitement of the Cariboo rush found him following the streams of goldseekers who invaded that district in 1862.

When in the N, he built a mill at Soda Creek.

When gold was discovered in the sand of the Columbia River in Big Bend, in 1866 he was one of the 1st to make locations on McCullough Creek. Here it was that he nearly came to a violent end, when 16 of his comrades perished by the overturning of an HBC boat in the icy waters of Death's Rapids. The boat contained 21 persons. From the Big Bend he returned to Victoria to take up his permanent residence.

He resumed his old business. Mr Adams had to his credit the construction of several public works and bridges in several sections of BC. At different periods he owned large investments in local realty. Funeral at Colwood cemetery. Pallbearers: A L Belyea, KC, C J Legge, F Hewling, E Hewling, G Munro, F McLennan.

V/LogHx/Jan 1, 1906, 9 - The 21 Russians who were delayed here because of eye trouble have been released and go to Vancouver to join those who preceded them of the party which arrived by Kanagawa Maru 2 wks ago. Nearly all who came here from Japan on the last steamer have found work in logging camps up the coast. They were POW while in Japan, some of them being captured over 1 ½ yrs ago. They say that there are still over 70,000 Russian war prisoners in Japan, and although peace has been declared the Russian govt is not making any move to bring them home for fear they would join the revolutionists. Some of the mem/o the party hold farms in Russia, but they have no desire to return while the present state of affairs exists. They are a hardy, intelligent looking lot of men, who are likely to be good woodsmen, as many of them have had previous experience in Russia. [May 11, 1916, 3 - Benofs, who came from a logging camp, affected w/leprosy. His wife/family residing in Russia.

Died Jan, 1906 at Langley Prairie, BC, Brazil Brosseau, who was probably one of the oldest pioneers in BC, having lived at the historic HBC fort at Langley long before the famous gold rush to the Fraser River in 1858. He had been 62 years in BC. Brosseau was an old servant of the company, having been practically born in its service, as his father was working for the company at the time, and he was born within the walls of the rude fort which still stand on Fort hill at Langley. As soon as he was able to work he took a commission from HBC and continued in its service until 1894, when the company disposed of its branch at Langley. He retired in 1894, and had been living since then with his family on the old homestead at Langley Prairie, adjoining the old HBC farm, which has long since been divided and sold. He leaves several grownup sons and daughters.

Died Jan, 1906 at Nanaimo, BC, William Hunter, a pioneer, who ran the 1st locomotive on VI. He was the oldest living native son in BC, having been born at Ft Rupert, VI, Mar 9, 1862. Nine months later the family came to Nanaimo in brig Recovery, that vessel being towed to this port by noted steamer Beaver. On the same boat which brought the Hunter family was the machinery for the old shaft which was sunk where the Nanaimo Hotel now stands, the said machinery being the 1st to be used in Nanaimo, and which was installed by Mr Hunter's father, Andrew Hunter.

With the exception of 9 months' residence at Ft Rupert and 3 months at Wellington, Mr Hunter had in all his 53 yrs never been off VI, and had only been as far as Victoria 3 times.

He had a rare knowledge of pioneer days. Ever since he was a young boy he had worked continuously for the coal company at Nanaimo. [Jan 31, 10; Feb 2, 4]

Marine/Feb 9, 1906 - the 5 unidentified bodies of Valencia wreck victims were interred in Ross bay cemetery, the cortege leaving the local undertakers' establishments and comprising separate coffins and hearses. The official mourners were W M Allan, agent of Pacific Coast SS Co, Capt Paterson, the company's post captain at Seattle, and A Heathorn, Vancouver agent; Supt of Prov Police Hussey, Sgt Murray and 2 provincial constables. On reaching the graves Bishop Perrin received the bodies and conducted the solemn funeral service. One of the bodies was that of a young woman, which will be known henceforth as No 12. There are a # of clues to her identity, one being the initial 'Dr H M' engraved on the padlock of a chain bracelet about the R arm. Feb 13, 6 - 10 more bodies were buried at Ross Bay, and one of them was identified shortly before interment as Mabel Rowland, aged 18, of Los Angeles. With the identification by her father, H L Rowland it is known that 3 more were drowned when Valencia was lost than originally stated - Mabel Rowland; her sister Lulu, aged 16, and Roy Hazard, aged 21, a young tile-layer of Los Angeles. There is an element of mystery in the sad story unearthed yesterday because of the identification of the drowned girl. The trio were not mentioned in the passenger list of Valencia. It is supposed they were travelling under assumed names. They left Los Angeles together surreptitiously, young Hazard giving his name as 'West' when taking passage at San Francisco, and the 2 girls as 'Misses Martin and Simpson.' In the hands of a friend of Hazard, which was to have been posted after they sailed, but the custodian it seems forgot to mail it until Jan 27, several days after the disaster occurred, and the sorrowing parents then learned for the 1st time that their missing children were victims of Valencia. Why the trio should have given assumed names is not known; and why they left without telling their parents of their going is not clear. When the letter, long delayed, told of their departure and the despatches told the parents the tale of disaster that had befallen, the two fathers started together for Victoria, and are now registered at the Dominion Hotel. Yesterday morning they went to Hayward's parlors and there identified the body of Mabel Rowland, which was shortly afterwards interred with 9 other victims. The sister, Lulu, is described as a slender girl, about 100#, light complexion and light hair, with a vaccination mark on the L arm; blue-eyed and with 1 tooth decayed. With the knowledge that the 3 were passengers on the ill-fated steamer, the total # of victims reaches 132, of which 41 bodies have been recovered from the sea. Feb 13, 7 - the 10 victims were unidentified and to mark their resting place a number was placed over each grave to correspond with that on a list held by Supt Hussey, of the provincial police. Fifteen graves of unknown victims run N and S of the cemetery plot, with a simple # over each. Feb 23, 5 - another unidentified body has been identified through the systematic work of Supt F S Hussey, whose comprehensive work in securing all available particulars for purposes of description has aided in identifying many of the victims. Body # 13, that of a man 5' 11", weighing 200#, has been identified as that of Henry Helgman, a 1st class passenger, from description furnished to relatives. The body was one of those brought to Victoria by US revenue cutter Perry and was sent to Ross Bay Feb 12 for interment. The remains will be exhumed at once and shipped to San Francisco for interment there. N 040/041/042/043 W K

Apr 13 - E L Hazard, who came to Victoria with W Rowland at the time of the Valencia disaster, seeking the body of his son, Roy Hazard, who in company with the Rowland girls, Lulu and Mabel, who were induced to run away from Los Angeles so that they would not be available to give evidence against the elder Hazard who was charged with assault on Lulu Rowland, aged 16, was found guilty by a jury in the Los Angeles superior court. The penalty for the offence is from 5 yrs to life imprisonment. Hazard was convicted largely on the evidence of the dead girl, given at the preliminary hearing several months ago. Mabel, a str/o Lulu and a few yrs older than the latter, and Roy Hazard, a s/othe defendant, were also lost in the Valencia wreck. It was charged by the prosecution in the present case that young Hazard was attempting, at the instigation of his father, to spirit the Rowland girls out of the country to prevent their testifying against him, at the time they boarded Valencia at San Francisco, on its voyage. The bodies of one of the girls and that of young Hazard were recovered.

Died suddenly, Feb 13, 1906 at Victoria, BC, Gilbert Hector Shaw Sproat, supt engr, White

Pass & Yukon RR Div, aged 37, s/o Gilbert Malcolm Sproat. Masonic funeral. Deceased was n/o Sct and received his early education as an engineer in that country, he was unmarried. It had been his custom to spend his winters in Victoria and Seattle, returning N in time for the opening of navigation. He was one of the most successful engineers of sternwheel craft on the coast. As a result of his investigations the engines of one of the steamers which ply on northern waters are now being compounded in a local establishment, and if the experiments being carried out prove as anticipated the effect will be the application of the same improvement on nearly every steamer in WP&Y Co fleet. Since taking charge of the northern business Mr Sproat practically revolutionized it, and has brought it up to a standard of efficiency previously not attained. Prior to taking charge of the northern service Mr Sproat was connected with the Columbia & Kootenay Navigation Co at a time when Mr Marrow, of Victoria, BC, was pres and Capt Troup was manager. Died Feb 24, 1906 at Victoria, BC, Mrs Jessie Cameron, 84, born at Ceres, Fifeshire, Scotland. In her early womanhood she left the old world to make a home for a brother, a miner in the Sacramento goldfields. Here she was married and it was here that her eldest son, W G Cameron, MPP was born, her 2nd son C N Cameron and her eldest daughter (Mrs R A Brown). In Feb, 1860 the mother, father and their young family removed to Victoria. It was the height of the Fraser River gold excitement, and Mr Cameron joined the rush to the Cariboo mines. A few days after their arrival in Victoria the Cameron's bought a piece of land in the James Bay district and built a home. This is where late Mrs Cameron has lived for 46 years, a more modern house some years ago supplanting the original little cottage home. Hers was a strong character that always rang true, and though a long and eventful lifetime with its full share of trials or sorrow she never allowed. Mrs Cameron had the somewhat unusual experience of having all her children and grandchildren living within a stone's throw of her. Five children survive her: W G Cameron, MPP, C N Cameron, Mrs R A Brown, Miss Jessie Cameron and Miss Agnes Deans Cameron, also 13 grandchildren. H 073 W 27

Apr 13, 1906 - Yesterday the body [#5] of Valencia was exhumed and prepared for shipment to Minn. The body was identified as that of Miss Mildred Cole, an actress. Mrs C Clausen, an aunt of deceased, arrived yesterday, and after a careful examination of some of the clothing and trinkets, identified them as belonging to her niece. This body was known as No 5. After the ID was complete, Mrs Clausen took immediate steps to have the body exhumed. It was found to be in fair condition, and was easily recognized, completing in every detail the ID of the unfortunate young lady. Arrangements were made to enclose the body in a metallic-lined burial case, with glass front and forward it to the bereaved widowed mother. It is expected that there will be no difficulty for her mother to fully identify her daughter, and also satisfy the agents for the insurance companies in with the deceased carried a very heavy policy.

It was never missed, although each yr the circle of old-timers became smaller. He has had his last reunion. He was a typical pioneer, as he was among the few, who, after yrs of ups and downs, amassed a competence, and who in his own way did a great deal of good for his fellow men among his own circle of friends. He was essentially a friend of the miner, and for yrs there were a # of them in the vicinity of Keithley Ck depended upon him for assistance when assistance was required. Died May 3, 1906 at Victoria, BC, William McGillivray Munsie, aged 57, eldest s/o John F Munsie, Pictou Co, NS. Deceased had a remarkably successful business career in Victoria, being a conspicuous example of the 'self-made man.' He was very shrewd and careful in his commercial ventures and his advice will be much missed by his business associates; and his death is generally regarded as a distinct loss to the community.

He was born and educated in Pictou Co, NS. He 1st embarked in the foundry business and in 1874 he located in San Francisco, CA, where he remained until 1878, when he came to BC, and settled in Victoria, where he established a foundry business for late Joseph Spratt of the Albion Iron Works. Since then he has been associated with the business enterprise of the city to a large extent, being at the time of his demise VP of the Victoria Sealing and Trading Co; president of Shawnigan Lk, Ladysmith and Nanaimo Lumber co; and one of the owners of the Empire Cannery at Esquimalt. He, in conjunction with Charles F Todd took the initiative in successfully establishing fish traps at Sooke hbr. He was a successful business man, a good friend, and philanthropic to a degree. He is survived by his wife, 2 sons and 8 daughters.

Deceased captain previous to coming to Victoria in 1864 was for some time in the employ of a SS company which operated a line of stmr on the S American coast, he being master of one of the company's steamers running from Chile to Panama. In 1864 he came to Victoria and was given command of stmr Thames, which vessel Capt Devereaux took to Honolulu, from there to San Francisco, and thence to Nagasaki, Japan, where she was sold. He then returned to Victoria and was next in command of DGS Sir James Douglas, succeeding Capts Pamphlet and Morrison. He ran her in the Puget Snd postal service for a short time in 1878 until the Stars placed the old Isabel, the hull of which is now a barge at Esquimalt, on the route. In 1883 the Douglas was lengthened 20', and on taking the water again ran in the govt service in charge of Capt Devereaux until 1887. After leaving the govt stmr he became supt of the Esquimalt graving dock, in which position he remained until his death... PC. May 27, 3 - Inquest, plus story... PC! Died Jun 24, 1906 at Alberni, BC, Harry Guillod, n/o London, Eng, aged 68, lately Indian agent of WCVI. He arrived here by way of Panama and San Francisco in Jul, 1862 in company with P T Johnston, Charles Kent, Hon J H Turner and others. He tried mining in Cariboo and after other pursuits settled in Victoria and became a Catechist of the Anglican church under late Bishop Hills, and was for several yrs doing missionary work among the Indians of the reserve at Victoria, and also at Alberni and Comox with Rev J X Willemar. He finally settled in Alberni and married Miss Munro, str/o late Maj Ross Munro. His musical talents were much appreciated wherever he went, and were used to great advantage in playing the organ in church and in teaching singing in the choir, as well as in social entertainments. He was a jolly fellow, good natured, and true hearted. His vocation was that of a druggist, he having served his apprenticeship as such in a good firm in Eng, his knowledge of medicine was of great use in his work among the Indians. Besides his widow he leaves 3 daughters, all residing in Alberni.

V/Jul 8, 1906, 18 - Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew CP Haggard, DSO, one famous in the literary field and a strong champion of the charms and attractions of BC has returned to Victoria with the determination of taking up his residence here.

‘There is a great field here for one who tries to reach real life in his work. The old saying that ‘truth is stranger than fiction’ applies to nowhere more than this province. Many historical events in the early history are worthy of treatment by a master of fiction, and the everyday life of a large number of citizens would read like romance, I hope to be able to do some work upon these lines, and that is why I intend in future to make BC my home.’

‘You ask why I am choosing Victoria? Well, I can only say this, A man, when seeking a home, wants the best. Beautiful surroundings help a literary man even when his writings call forth recollections of an active life in the past. In my historical romances and work dealing to some extent with old military incidents I have found the quiet of the woods most useful. And by making my home in Victoria, I will be in touch with the centres of civilization, while within a few hours journey of some of the best fishing and sporting grounds in the world. It will be necessary to spend two or three months each year on the other side of the Atlantic, but you can write me down a Victoria after this.’

Fifth son of late WM Rider Haggard he was born in 1854 and received his education at the famous school of Westminster. Entering the army in 1873, when aged 19, as subaltern in the King’s Own Borderers he remained actively with the service until a few years ago, and now holds a majority in the Royal Scotch Reserve.

Foreign service claimed him almost from the first. He served in India and at Eden for several years, and finally became a member of the staff in Egypt in 1882. The Egyptian army then claimed his services, and he became a valued member of the number of British officers acting under Sir Evelyn Wood, VC. In 1884 he saw special service on the Red Sea littoral being especially mentioned in naval despatches.

During the same year he saw his first battle; Tami, where again personal bravery and ability called for mention in official despatches. But the investment of Suakim by Osman Digna formed the most unique feature of his military career. He was in command of the first battalion of the Egyptian army during the whole period, lasting well into 1885, and, with his men, was 155 times under fire. For this service he received the Osmanien decoration of the 4th class. After other services in unimportant expeditions he commanded the Egyptian troops on the frontier, again being mentioned in despatches. His distinguished conduct during this campaign earned Haggard the coveted DSO, the 3rd class medjidieh; the medal and several clasps. As early as 1886 he became interested in Canada, and made a trip over the CPR on one of the first transcontinental trains. This resulted in a series of articles in Blackwood's that attracted much attention.

He arrived in Victoria in 1865 aboard ship Ann Adamson, which had to be sailed into the harbor by a few male and female passengers on account of practically the entire crew being dead or dying of scurvy. When the ship docked at Ft Victoria most of her crew were dead and the rest were lying aboard helpless owing to the ravages of the dread disease, and only the health and pluck of a few men and the women among the passengers enabled her to reach port at all.

This was not the only unpleasant experience encountered on the voyage. Mr Townsend and his wife started from England on Mindoro, which was wrecked before she got out of the English Channel, and the passengers who escaped were landed at Dover with scarcely clothing enough to cover them...; Jul 28, 9 - Funeral [Victoria?]. V/Poem/Jul 29, 1906, 19 -
Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,
As his corpse to the rampart was hurried.
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero we buried.

We buried him darkly at dead of night,
The sods with our bayonets turning;
By the struggling moonbeams' misty light
With lanterns dimly burning.

No useless coffin enclosed his breast,
Not in sheet or in shroud we wound him.
But he lay like a warrior taking his rest,
With his martial cloak around him.

Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow.
But we steadfastly gazed on the face of the dead,

And we bitterly thought of the morrow.

We thought as we hollowed his narrow bed
And smoothed down his lonely pillow
That the foe and the stranger would tread o'er his head
And we far away on the billow.

Lightly they'll talk of the spirit that's gone,
And o'er his cold ashes upbraid him,
But little he'll care, if they let him sleep on
In the grave where a Briton had laid him.

But half our heavy task was done,
When the clock struck the hour of retiring,
And we heard the distant and random gun
That the foe was suddenly firing.

Slowly and sadly we laid him down,
From the field of his fame fresh and gory,
We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone
But we left him alone with his glory.

Aug 23, 1906, 5 - Seattle P-I says Chief Louis Good of Nanaimo has invited William G Stewart, hd of an operating company playing at Seattle to accompany his party and the Indians of Spokane, Colville, Yakima and Nez Perce tribes in an expedition into the interior of VI in an endeavor to find the source of the yellow metal from which his forefathers shaped the golden bullets used in the muskets supplied them by HBC. Chief Good, who is well educated, became acquainted with Mr Stewart through association on the football fields of a prominent Eastern college team. Both being hardy athletes, a fast friendship sprung up between them.
According to Mr Stewart, Chief
Good will meet the Indians at Nanaimo and leave for interior of VI Aug 27. There will be 23 in the party, with pack horses
and supplies [for 3 mo]

V/Died Oct 8, 1906 at Victoria, BC, Charles Albert Vernon, 66, (late HM XX Regt), 2nd s/o late J E V Vernon Esq, JP, DL of Clontarf Castle, Co Dublin, Ireland. Deceased was one of Victoria's oldest, most prominent and highly respected citizens. During the term of his military career served with his Regiment under Colonel Radcliffe, and during 5 years' special service was quartered in different parts of South Ireland.

A soldier at heart, he loved the profession of arms, but a taste for adventure eventually took him abroad, and, in company with his brother Forbes G Vernon, and the late Colonel Houghton, he came to Canada and, crossing the Rocky mountains, ultimately settled in the Okanagan valley, where they engaged in stock ranching, an occupation which he followed with success for some 15 years prior to his coming to settle in Victoria, where he married the eldest daughter of Duncan McTavish of Islay, Sct.

Once established here, he immediately commenced to identify himself with the interests and welfare of the city, and later filled the various appointments of Gold Commissioner, Acting/Land Commissioner and JP...

He leaves a widow and 3 children, Albert A, Charles HT and Violet, wife of Capt Blandy, Royal Engineer. B 097 E 34

Died Oct 23, 1906 at Victoria, BC, Mercy Thain, 82, relict of late Captain John M Thain, n/o Saint John, NB. Deceased was on board her husband's ship which left Saint John, where both were born, in 1849, bound for San Francisco with lumber and general cargo. The passage around Cape Horn occupied 9 months, and San Francisco was reached early in 1850, at the height of the gold excitement. The crew deserted the vessel as soon as the anchor was down and hastened to join in the mad rush for gold, leaving Captain Thain to unload his vessel as best he could. As it was impossible to secure a new crew, and as it was equally impossible to obtain a house there, the ship was anchored up the bay, and Captain and Mrs Thain with the son, the late E J Thain, lived on board for 18 months, when the ship was sold. Removing to Victoria in 1858, at the beginning of the Fraser River gold rush, a home was built at the corner Fisguard & Blanshard streets, in which the family have resided ever since.

At Victoria Captain Thain engaged in stevedoring and shipping, while his brother, James, afterwards followed a similar pursuit at Moodyville on the establishment of lumber mills at that point. From their youth they had been chums as well as brothers, and it is a remarkable and melancholy incident that Captain John died in Victoria on Feb 19, 1881, and his brother Captain James died at Moodyville within an hour. They were buried on the same day, and at the same time in Victoria, so that in death they were not divided.

The late Mrs Thain was a good mother and a good citizen, and took an active part in the early social and religious life of Victoria. She lived to see children to the 3rd generation. Happily she was spared the sorrow of knowing the death of her eldest son, late E J Thain, who died at Atlin in Jan last, as it was never disclosed to her. Her last years were passed in gradually failing faculties, physical and mental, and were brightened and comforted by the constant devotion of her 2 surviving daughters, and by the equal care and devotion of her nurse, Mrs J Neill.

Her surviving children are Joseph Thain, at Nevada, Mrs J F Engelhardt, of Victoria, and Miss Anita Thain... Pallbearers: J S Yates, E White, E H Hiscock, J A Anderson, W H Ellis, G Grimason. A 072 E 31

Med/Died Nov 1, 1906 at Victoria, BC, Catherine Charlotte (Kate) Finlaison, aged 28, eldest d/o Mrs Jane Finlaison. Deceased, who was very popular was a nurse at St Joseph's hospital, and in the course of her duties, attended a patient suffering from typhoid fever. She contracted the dread malady, and despite the very best care and attention succumbed, the demise being doubly regrettable in that she was stricken down while exerting every personal effort to save another from the fate which ultimately proved her own. She was of a particularly bright and cheery disposition. Attending at funeral were mem/o the nursing staff: Miss M Green, Miss L Dodd, Miss N Locke, Miss A McLean, Miss A Tingle, Miss M Mellon, Miss D Cooper, Miss O Peckenham, Miss M Madigan, Miss E Saunders. Wearing the regulation uniform of their profession, on the conclusion of the brief preliminary service at the res, they acted as honorary pallbearers and walked behind the hearse to St James church. Pallbearers: D B McConnan, D O Sullivan, H B Young, A R Wolfenden, W A Lawson, R W Clark. As the cortege wended its way along Humboldt st, en route to Ross Bay, a pathetic incident was observed - those mem/o the staff who were unable to attend the funeral of their late comrade assembled on the rear porch to take 'one last, long, lingering look.'. V/Med/Died Dec 12, 1906 at Victoria, BC, George H

Duncan, MD, CM, n/o
Russell, [Duncanville - named after his father] ON, aged 44,
s/o John Duncan, educated in the E. The cause of death dates back c 1 yr, when he received severe injuries in a carriage accident. He was driving with the young d/o

Thomas Booz, when both were thrown out of the rig.

As a young man he was active in military circles, having been a mem/o the Gov-Gen's Foot Guards and the Pr Louise Dragoons. During this period
he taught school in Ottawa. In 1892 he graduated with the degree of MD at McGill, and almost immediately came W.
With his brother, the late Dr
John A Duncan, who was drowned in the Islander disaster, he engaged in his practice, being appointed city medical officer in 1893. Upon the death of Dr Macnaughton
Jones, Dominion quarantine officer, he assumed this position, which he retained
until the appt of the present
incumbent, Dr A M Watt. Dr Duncan made a special study of conditions at the lazaretto on Darcy I, and was the author of several valuable contributions on leprosy to medical literature.
During the course of the China-Japan war, he went to the latter country, intending to offer his services as an army surgeon,
but returned to Victoria shortly afterwards.

He remained in Victoria, until 1898, when, on the outbreak of the Klondike excitement, he went N and located in Dawson.
He was recalled from that place
by the death of his brother, and resumed medical work here, which he continued until the accident mentioned above.
Before going N he became identified with the BC Rifle Assn, his brother at that time being surgeon to C Battery, of the Cdn artillery, and was prominent in rifle shooting. A brother and sister survive him.
The former, Rev W Duncan, of

Sault Ste Marie, ON, came to Victoria as soon as it was known deceased could not recover. The sister, Mrs A Carson, resides on the family homestead at Duncanville.

- V/Apr 17, 1907, 3 - Letter to Editor - The funeral of late James Lawrence Kirby took place yesterday, and not a shot was fired nor a single officer or soldier true followed the remains to the grave! Now, I claim this is a standing disgrace to every private in this lad's company, and if I were a volunteer and the son of a poor man or a rich one, the officer in charge of this company would have my resignation, as I call them a mighty poor lot of British soldiers. For if it came down to a fight to defend our land, who is it that takes part as a whole, the rich man's son or father's boys like the lad who was buried yesterday? If he had been one of a class that I might mention he would have a military funeral that was in honor due the deceased, as the boy was a lad among lads, and was one of the most honest and upright lads that lives in this city, a true boy to his poor mother. The memory of our volunteer boys in S Africa from Victoria, BC has died away. Signed, Russ Humber. Aged 19, n/o Brandon, MB. O 083 W N

Died Apr 17, 1907 at Victoria, BC, William Frederick McCulloch, 69, another of the 1858 pioneers. Deceased had an eventful career. N/o Tyrone, Ireland, born in 1838, he accompanied his family to Canada 9 years later. His father located near Stratford, ON, and here the son remained until he reached manhood. At the time of the CA gold fever he, however, was seized with it and journeyed to the field of promised wealth by way of Panama. From CA he came to BC in the early days of mining in this province. For the past 23 years he has been a resident of Victoria and for several years has been in the employ of the provincial government as assayer and also as mining recorder at Atlin. Mrs McCulloch and 2 daughters survive. R 075 W N

It was the practice to fire a cannon when rounding the Race... they went below to get a charge of powder and it is believed they dropped a candle. An explosion blew out the skylight of the saloon and caused considerable damage. Seamen bravely rescued Mrs Sears, whose son was then an infant in arms and 2 men who had been injured. A signal for a doctor was then flown and quick time was made by a medical man from Esquimalt, but his skill was unavailing, for both succumbed.

Bldg/Died Jun 24, 1907 at Victoria, BC Mrs Sarah

Williams, 92, another of BC's pioneers, n/o Bradford, Yorkshire, England. Her 1st place of residence in North America was at New Orleans, LA, where her husband was engaged as a sugar planter. Mr Williams shortly afterwards removed, via Panama, to CA, and for some time conducted a quartz mill at Yreka, which was then, as it is now, a famous gold producing district. In 1858 Mr & Mrs Williams, attracted by the excitement of the rush to the gold fields of this province, came to Victoria on a sailing vessel, the trip from San Francisco occupying 3 weeks. Immediately they constructed a hotel called the 'What Cheer' house which occupied the site of the present Dominion hotel. This building was one of the 1st wooden buildings in Victoria and was made of lumber brought from San Francisco, lumber being held at fabulous prices in Victoria at that time. Mrs Williams conducted the What Cheer house successfully for some years. Her husband suffered a paralytic stroke shortly after their arrival here, and remained so afflicted until his death in 1871. Mrs Williams was also a pioneer of Cowichan Valley, having removed there after her husband's affliction in the hope of benefitting his health. She lived on the 'flats' for many years, the present owner of her old homestead being Clermont Livingston, manager of Tye Copper Co. Here Mrs Williams for some years conducted a summer boarding house, there being no hotel in that valley at that time, and the fine attractions of the district caused many from Victoria and elsewhere then as now to spend their holidays there. In 1890 Mrs Williams removed to Victoria, where she has resided ever since. She outlived her entire family of 10 children, the last surviving member of which, Mrs A Dods, died in 1900. She leaves 7 grandchildren, 6 great-grandchildren and a host of friends...; Funeral - Jun 26 - Pallbearers: H Cathcart Sr, Thomas Clyde, W Drysdale, J S Stannard, W A Robertson, O C Hastings. Jul 31, 1907, 3 - Gavin Hamilton, former HBC factor, who left the service 23 years ago, after spending many years at Fort Langley, and Fort St James, returned to Victoria... Mr Hamilton is a pioneer of this country. He landed in Victoria from ship Norman Morison, Jan 5, 1853, and served in the local fort of HBC as an apprentice clerk. In 1857 he went with Chief Trader Ogden to New Caledonia, where he remained as factor until his retirement. He was never a chief trader, his promotion to factor having come without that step. At one time he had 3 chief traders, Messrs Child, Moffat, Manson, on his staff... Speaking of the discovery of gold in BC Mr Hamilton said the 1st find took place at Quequehala River near Fort Hope. There McLean washed some sand, which showed specks of gold. The gold was sent down to the governor's secretary, and was reported to have been sent to CA to be minted. In 1857 there were many miners who came to Fraser District from CA and in the fall of that year a big rush took place. There were numbers of murders. Many a man who was going to the goldfields with a pack on his back was killed by Indians, who seemed to waylay the mushers [?] and leave horsemen go by.

Died at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Feb, 1908, Mrs Power, widow of late Capt William Power, of Moodyville, BC. Deceased was well-known in Victoria, BC. Mar 10, 5 - Mr & Mrs Power came to this country in summer of 1858. The writer [Higgins] met them on board Captain Thomas Wright's stern wheel steamer Enterprise, while that vessel was ascending Fraser River in Aug of that year. They settled at Yale where they opened an hotel and were successful in securing a large share of the custom. Both husband and wife were exceedingly nice, and proved wise counsellors for the young men of the day who had left behind them home influences to try their fortunes in the province and stood in need of good advice.

Mr Power, after a visit to the Argentine republic, returned to BC and opened an hotel at Moodyville. When the 1st Vancouver boom occurred Mr Power was very successful, and after a visit to London, where, I think he died, some 10 years ago, his widow returned to Philadelphia. In my book 'Mystic Spring' there is a story entitled 'Regeneration of Jem McLaughlin'... BC never had more valuable residents than Mr & Mrs Power. When he died his widow caused a handsome memorial window to be placed in the Roman Cathedral cathedral at Victoria, as a mark of his devotion to the church and appreciation of the kind ministrations he had enjoyed at the hands of the clergy.

LogHx/Jun 12, 1908, 11 - Shot for Bear...Mistaken for a bear while he was crawling up a steep slope on his hands and knees last Sun morning. Richard Grummett, a logger, was shot and fatally wounded by B F Blakeslee, his partner, at Bear bay, at the head of Bute Inlet. News of the fatality was brought to Vancouver today by Blakeslee, who accompanied the body of the dead man to Victoria on steamer Cassiar.

A slight rustling of the bushes through which Grummett was crawling was responsible for the shot which caused his death, according to the story told by Blakeslee on his arrival here. Noticing the bushes waving, and seeing some dark form indistinctly through the underbrush. Blakeslee fired, thinking that his aim was centered on a bear.

Immediately following the shot Blakeslee says he heard his name called by Grummett, and on running to the clump of bushes into which he had shot he was horrified to find his partner lying on the ground with blood streaming from a wound in his left arm. As quickly as possible he made a bandage with a handkerchief and some shoelaces and bound the arm above the wound. Then commenced a 4-mile trip to camp over rough ground down the valley of Bear Ck, the wounded man walking, with frequent rests, to within ½ mile of camp. At that point Blakeslee went ahead and secured the assistance of some of the loggers and the wounded man was carried to the beach. There his wound was again dressed.

At 6 pm a start was made for Rock Bay hospital, distant 60 miles, with the wounded man. The trip was made in a gasoline launch, and the hospital was reached at 3:30 am. The surgeon at the hospital stated that there was small chance of saving Grummett's life, and although every effort was made to do so he died at 7:30am - just 24 hrs after he was shot.

Deceased was interested with Blakeslee and another man in hand-logging operations at Bear bay. It is probable that an inquest will be ordered. The body of late Richard Grummett reached Victoria on the Princess Royal. Deceased, who was a b/o Mrs Clarke, wife of Robert W Clarke, of Bond & Clarke, met his death in a shooting accident at Bear Bay, Bute Inlet, on Sun. The late gentleman was n/o ON, and was 30 yrs of age. A brother will arrive from Kelowna to attend the funeral. O 084 E F

Died at Nelson, BC, Jul 29, 1908, Arthur Stanhope Farwell, well-known Dominion and provincial land surveyor, was found dead in his bed at his residence by his friend, Mr Selous...Deceased was greatly respected in Nelson, where he had resided during the summer months for the past 12 or 14 yrs. He 3 times was candidate for provincial legislature, but was not successful. He surveyed the town of Farwell, now city of Revelstoke, and in one way or another was instrumental in surveying large portions of the Kootenay's. He was s/o a Devonshire man. In the early 1880's he acted for the government in surveying RR in the Kootenays.

Mr Farwell leaves no relatives in this country but a brother, and Mr Justice Farwell in Eng is said to be a cousin. Throughout the entire province the news of his death will be received with sincere regret. The funeral takes place here tomorrow [buried at RBC, Victoria].

Funeral will take place from res/o Mrs M B Ella, 1156 Fort st, Victoria.

Funeral - there were 2 services, 1 being conducted at res of Mrs Ella, and another at Reformed Episcopal church... Bishop

Cridge. Pallbearers: F S Barnard, Frank O'Reilly, Byron H T Drake, A M F Griffith, Sydney Robertson, J A Mara. There was a large attendance of Mr Farwell's Victoria friends and many floral offerings, among the latter being a beautiful wreath from the Lands & Works, a testimonial of the esteem and respect in which he was held by employees of that dept. SV/Oct 11, 1908, 3 - Some time ago a Montreal weekly paper published an account of a recently patented device for sending a rope ashore from a wrecked vessel by shooting an anchor, with a rope attached, from a gun. Capt J C Anderson of Sechart, Barkley Snd, calls attention to the fact that he is the inventor of this device, although he did not patent it. When the S African Boer war broke out Capt Anderson drew plans of apparatus for bridging unfavorable rivers by inflated canvas bridges...the plans were submitted to the war office, where they were copied and returned to Capt Anderson...

Marine/WmHx/Oct 14, 1908 - Letters to Editor - Sir - I have had forwarded to me by my friend, Alexander Munro, a copy of the Colonist, in which under caption '40 Yrs Ago' there is a reference to myself as marrying John Boyd. About that time there arrived off the entrance to Puget Snd a vessel on which all the crew, captain included, were laid down with scurvy. The only person able to do anything was a woman, Mrs Campbell. She had the helm and took directions from the captain, who was laid on a mattress on deck. A sail was flapping, and the movements of the vessel were so peculiar that she was boarded by a pilot and brought in. I saw Mrs Campbell after. She was nearly as dark as a Negro; and I have often tried to recall the name of the vessel. In your scanning the files of 40 yrs ago, if you come upon this, it is worth while reprinting, and if you do, send me a copy. I had the greatest pleasure in reading the 'Mystic Spring' by Mr Higgins, and in all that concerns the early times. Signed, Thomas Somerville, Blackfriar's Parish, Glasgow, Sct.

Note: Dr Somerville's letter was referred to Mr Higgins. He says the name of the vessel was Ann Adamson. She was 275 days on the voyage and all the crew were down with scurvy. Mr Somerville is slightly in error when he says the Capt was ill. The Capt and 1st and 2nd mates (who were his sons) and the cook were the only well men on board. It appeared that they had lime juice and vegetables on board, while the crew had none. Several of the crew died on the voyage. Editor

Oct 14, 1908 - Letter to Editor - Sir - I always read with pleasure Mr Higgins' sketches of early life in Victoria, and can vouch for the authenticity of many I was so well acquainted with many of the characters, in fact was connected with some of the incidents mentioned in some of the stories. Well, when I commenced to read about the naughty prince who became an emperor, I could not understand what it could have to do with colonial life in Victoria, but still I read on until I came to the mention of Rev W F Clarke, Congregational minister, and his church on Church Hill. Then I pricked up my ears and was all attention, for I went to school in this building twice, once under Mr Clarke and again later under Archdeacon Woods, and well remember Mr Vincent, our drawing master, for as such he was better known, although he also taught Fr. He spoke very good English for a Frenchman, and strange to say his R hand lacked 2 fingers, and I can well remember wondering how he drew so well, as he looked awkward with only a thumb and 1st and 2nd finger on the hand he held his pencil with. It was after I left the collegiate school in 1862 that he changed his name from English to French and often I wondered at it. It is not generally known also that he married the sister of a well-known professional man in Victoria, whom he left a widow with an only son and I think well provided for. He resided over James Bay while a res/o this city, keeping a private school. I might mention that I had for years, and until quite lately a drawing book with sketches which Mr Vincent touched up for me after I had finished them as his pupil. So ends another reminiscence of the past. Edgar Fawcett.

Oct 30, 1908 - The funeral of Mrs Dan McDougall, wife of chief of the fire brigade at Fernie, who died in St Joseph's hospital Oct 28, will take place from her mother's residence, N Park st. Deceased was one of 17 patients who were under treatment in hospital at Fernie at the time when it was utterly destroyed by the forest fire in Aug, and as it was found impossible to move the sick to a place of safety, which was ultimately provided in the shape of a box car, until sometime after the building was in flames, it is believed that her death was hastened - if it were not wholly due - to the terrible shock which was sustained in the course of these events. As soon the patients were placed upon this car they were hastened to Cranbrook, where Mrs McDougall remained for the 12 days preceding her transference to Victoria, BC and St Joseph's hospital. In addition to 4 children and her mother, the deceased leaves 2 unmarried sisters, 2 married, 1 of whom lives in Seattle and the other in the East, and 2 brothers.

Nov 27, 1908 - Died at Seattle, WA, Nov, 1908, Capt Abel Douglas, a well known sealer. He has been living at Seattle for 2 yrs where he moved from Victoria and Salt Spring I, where surviving members of his family have their home. One of his sons was shot and killed at Salt Spring I by Alfred Williams. Four children live at SSI, George and Abel Douglas, Mary Ellen Douglas and Mrs R J Cubiler.

Capt Douglas, who was a pioneer of the sealing and fishing business, and pioneer trader of BC coast, was born in MA in 1841 and came to Victoria in 1868 soon after taking command of sch Kate, which lay, a wreck in the inner harbor until a yr or 2 ago, with which he engaged in whaling. Afterward he built the sch Triumph, afterward a sealing sch, and for 15 yrs engaged in general trading on WCVI, in fishing, and in govt service. He was in Triumph for 13 yrs and then he bought a 2/3 interest in sealing sch Challenge, which was fitted out as a sealer...

Died at Victoria, BC Dec 28, 1908, Mrs Annie Gray. Born at Weldon, Eng, 1814, she came to BC via Cape Horn in Mar, 1850 with Hon J S Helmcken and 80 other immigrants in Norman Morison, Capt Wishart. She was then a married woman, aged 36, and was accompanied by her husband, Mr Parsons, a millwright. Upon arrival they went up to HBC's grist, or flouring mill, which was at that time situated upon what was then known as Rose stream and now as Mill stream, a short distance above Parson's bridge; so named in commemoration of these very immigrants. They lived at that place for 5 yrs and after leaving the service, the mill, to borrow the expressive phrase of a pioneer, 'went to the devil,' while they opened a public house, at the approach to Parson's bridge, which was for a long period a favorite place of resort by residents of Victoria. Sometime subsequently, however, Parsons, who was a millstone cutter, went down to the Columbia Rv to follow his trade, his wife remaining here, and died there. While not long afterwards his wdw married William Gray, a carpenter, and an old friend, as he came out to this country with them on Norman Morison. They removed to Esquimalt, where her 2nd husband possessed considerable property... All the immigrants who came to Esquimalt in 1850 upon Norman Morison were employees of HBC, with a single exception, a Highlander, somewhat advanced in years, whose mission it was to teach the intricacies as well as the transcendent beauties of the Gaelic language to Capt Grant's young people at Sooke, but this immigrant died during the trip and was buried at sea. And there were found some on board ill-natured enough to say that he was sent away from Sct for the purpose of saving the expense of interring him at home. This gentleman presented 2 small and interesting pictures to the ship's surgeon, Dr Helmcken, and these somewhat ancient relics of a past age are still in existence.

By many of the older res/o Victoria, BC Mrs Gray was supposed to have been the 1st white woman to arrive in this province, but it appears that is not the case, as one Mrs Muir, not long previously, preceded her. Nor was Mrs Parsons, the only woman in the company as some have imagined, 3 or 4 others being fellow immigrants. A 69 E 33

Jan 23, 1909 - John Muir Sr, the sole survivor of a group of pioneers who settled at Sooke over 60 yrs ago, passed away at Woodside Jan 21. Ever since arriving here he has been looked on as one of the leading residents of the district and the grief of his neighbours and friends is deep and sincere. He was 81 and leaves a widow and several sons. The late Mr Muir came to Sooke in 1849 with his 2 brothers, Robert and Michael. He had previously been north in the employ of HBC. Taking a contract to furnish piles for harbor work at San Francisco, the Muir's bought out Capt Grant's interests and set to work. The machinery from a sunken steamer was bought by him and it provided the motive power of the 1st sawmill of the district. Soon quite a little fleet of sailing craft and wood scows was owned by the family and a steamer, Woodside, purchased.

The industry, sawmill and tan bark, run by Mr Muir, and his 2 brother's, was the chief one in the section of the island for many yrs, giving employment to between 40 and 50 men. It was maintained for yrs. Later on it was removed from its bay site and brought nearer home, some hundreds yds in front of which is now late John Muir's stately country house. Here it was run by water from dams at Springside and Milne's cedar slough. Having been burned in 1875 it was rebuilt and operated this time by both steam and water power after which it was removed to its final location nr the present government wharf in the winter of 1878-79...; photo Feb 14, 3 - Passing of BC's Oldest White Settler...

Marine/RNV/Jan 24, 1909, sup pg 5 - Forty yrs ago, when the Pacific was a more lonely ocean by far than at present, John Davy, of Walker st, Victoria W, came to Esquimalt in HMS Satellite. Fresh from the Abyssinian campaign Satellite had been ordered around the world to Esquimalt and John Davy was an ordinary seaman on the voyage. Not many vessels propelled by canvas make better time than did Satellite on that run from Hakodate in the winter of 1868 when she fought her way across the Pacific, with her crew battened down part of the time, in 21 days. It was a cold, wintery, hard wx trip, with frozen rigging, and breaking seas and spray that soon became ice, that HMS Satellite made.

Mr Davy remembers his voyage of 40 yrs ago well. He has been out of the navy for 19 yrs and made many other cruises in his 25 yrs of service under the colors. He said: 'We spent our Christmas day at Hakodate, where the Shogun's men were holding the big castle on the hilltop against the Emperor's men, and started out for Esquimalt on Dec 29, 1868. There weren't any steamships running across the N Pacific to Victoria and Puget Sound then. We sailed across and had a very rough voyage. We were battened down part of the time. The ropes were frozen and we couldn't get our main yds down. Much water came inboard as we rolled and the spray froze on the deck. We lost 4 boats, only the boats lashed inboard escaping being smashed. There was no steam steering gear then as now and 4 men were told off at the wheel, and when the relieving tackles broke away they had a trying time as the wheel jammed and jumped, shaking them about. The rudder ropes carried away and we had quite a time fixing them. The saddest feature of the voyage, though, was the killing of the coxswain's mate when the relieving tackle gave way. The tiller gave a lurch and caught his head between it and the side of the ship, cutting the top of his head off. We buried him at sea. He was sewn up in a hammock with shot at his feet, and while as many of the 276 men of our complement were watching as could be spared we watched the chaplain read the burial service and saw them slide him overside.

'When we got into Esquimalt, where we found Sparrowhawk, Boxer and Forward, as well as a French frigate we lost 73 of our men. They got the gold excitement and skipped out. It was a tight lookout for the rest, the officers being constantly on the watch. We remained at Esquimalt for 9 months and then went to Mex to get silver which we carried to Panama, and then went S to Valparaiso, where we met the flying squadron, consisting of HMS Bristol, Liffy, Phoebe, Endymion and Charybdis. We joined the squadron and went on around the Horn with them, homebound.

‘I was a ship’s boy of the 1st class when I left Eng to join Satellite, which had been ordered to the Red Sea owing to the war with Abyssinia. There were about 100 ships at Annesley bay then working hundreds of boats and lighters landing supplies with were sent forward to the troops in the field. We went to Suez and took the train across - there was no canal then. After the war Satellite was the last warship to leave Annesley bay, and she was ordered to Singapore and thence to Hongkong to dock.

‘It was a different Hongkong, that of 40 yrs ago, to the great seaport of today. Where the praya has the surf breaking today there was sand then, and there were no stately bldgs and fine residences comparable with those of today. There were no docks and not a large settlement. Satellite went into the Alexander dock and refitted and we were then ordered to Esquimalt.

‘There was war in Japan then. When we got to Yokohama, though, most of the fighting in the S was over. The Shogun’s men had been defeated at Fushimi and Uyeno and had given up Aidzu castle after a hard fight, that at Hakodate alone holding out. Yokohama at this time was planning to be a great port. Forty yrs ago the workmen were bldg the breakwater there, soon after throwing the port open to foreign commerce. The present Emperor had just come to the throne and foreign influence was just beginning to make itself felt. The Shogun’s people were opposed to the Westerners, while the Emperor was in favor of inviting trade from across the Pacific.

‘We went N to where the fighting was taking place and anchored at Hakodate. The Japanese fighting man of that day wore the quaint whalebone and iron armor with big shoulder guards and heavy helmets with mask-like visor. Japan’s 1st and only republic had just been founded on the N island. The late Admiral Enomoto, who died a few months ago, was the founder of this republic, and he was one of the chief movers in the army of the Shoguns. He had been sent to Holland to bring out a corvette, the Kuiyo-maru, built at Amsterdam for the shogun Tokagawa..?’

Mar 13, 1909 - ...a party consisting of Charles Baker, James McCurdy, William Spittal and A Henderson left Barkerville on Dec 29, 1908 bound for Tete Jeune Cache on the south fork of the Fraser River. The quartette had an inadequate supply of provisions... On Feb 24 last 3 dog-teamsters, John Goldie, Frank Aiken and Russell Peden came into Barkerville with the news that the frozen bodies of Baker and McCurdy had been discovered by them near the headwaters of the Goat Rv, 65 miles from Barkerville. The teamsters, who were on their return to Barkerville after freighting in supplies for a timber-cruising outfit, ran across the bodies of the 2 men... it would appear that Baker and McCurdy had succumbed on or about Feb 12, after having become exhausted through lack of sufficient nourishment. Evidently the 2 were making an attempt to get back to Barkerville, but were unable, in their weakness... Csts Randall, dog-teamers John Goldie, Frank Allen and Russell Peden [sworn in as special Cst] proceeded to the spot where the bodies were found and made a careful examination of the remains with order if there were any signs of violence to bring the bodies to Barkerville; if there was nothing, to bury the bodies and bring the effects to Barkerville. Peden was also instructed to find some trace of Spittal and Henderson from whom no word has been received.

Marine/Mar 18, 1909 - Capt H F Siewerd, one time a well known sealer, now the proprietor of a general store at Stettler, AB, is in the city renewing acquaintances, and his friends are recalling the once celebrated hoax perpetrated by the Capt and his old friend, Capt Balcom, mgr of Pacific Whaling Co, on a local newspaper reporter. Many yrs ago, when the sealing captains were having difficulties in securing Indian hunters an energetic reporter was in search of news, and he met the doughty ex-sealer on Wharf st.

'Did you hear the news?' asked Capt Siewerd; 'Capt Balcom's going back east next week to bring out Micmacs for the sealing fleet.'

Then with serious mien Capt Siewerd told the reporter the whole store. Away back in Labrador where rolls the Atlantic the beaches were inhabited by splendid hunters, the Micmac Indians. If anyone could induce their queen, the celebrated Molly Cope, to come west, the whole tribe would follow like bees following the queen bee, and Capt Balcom was going east to get Molly Cope to emigrate to the Pacific coast, where the young Micmacs would sign as hunters on sealing schooners and the difficulty encountered yearly of getting sufficient Indian hunters to man the schooners would be ended.

The reporter met Capt Balcom and asked for confirmation.

'Who told you that', asked the whaler, 'Siewerd' 'Well, if Siewerd said so, I guess it must be right.'

Next day the whole tale was given, with all the glare of printer's ink to the world at large, and another newspaper poked fun at the story.

The reporter went to Capt Siewerd's house on Fort st to seek confirmation. In a back room sat Capt Balcom, and leaving the reporter in the drawing room, Capt Siewerd went to hold a council of war.

'Well, why don't you confirm the story for him, anyhow?' asked Capt Balcom.

'He wants a letter,' said Capt

Siewerd.

The reporter got the letter, but it was an unconvincing letter. And no one went to bring Molly Cope or the Micmacs to BC.

Mar 20, 1909, 6 - Died Mar 19, 1909 at Rocklands, 1750 Rockland Av, Victoria, BC, Henry Dumbleton, aged 88, b Aug 12, 1821 at Shirley House, nr Southampton, Eng, eldest s/o Henry Dumbleton, of the Indian civil service, and of Thornhill Park, nr Southampton, and sometime judge at Baretty in India.

Educated successfully at Marlborough, and at Oxford, where he received both a scholarship and his degree, he made an extensive trip through the S dists of S Africa, where he most successfully hunted big game, a # of his finest trophies having eventually been brought to this city and used for the embellishment of his residence.

He married Clara Marianne Garcia in 1845, d/o Maurice Garcia, who filled the offices of both civil comm and magistrate in Cape Colony, and the diamond anniversary of this most interesting event in his long life was fittingly celebrated in 1906.

Sometime subsequently he entered into residence at Hall Grove, Bagshot, which had been bequeathed him by his uncle, Thomas Dumbleton, of the E Indian navy, and after an interval of several yrs he again went down to what is perhaps in some respects one of the most attractive countries in the whole world, S Africa, where he lived for 12 yrs at Wynberg, which is situated not far from Cape Town.

Coming back to Eng, he resided alternately, at Hall Grove and at Brownwylfa, at Exmouth, in Devonshire, and finally in 1886 he paid a visit to this city, its principal attraction being found in climate and environment, but also the wonderfully good fishing and shooting.

So satisfied did he become with these varied and striking advantages that he speedily decided to become a permanent resident, building a delightful home for himself and his family and naming it 'The Rocklands.'

Among his many remarkable experiences in the course of a lengthy as well as diversified career, may well be included the fact that he was one of the passengers who came across the continent upon the 1st through train, which traversed the tracks of CPR.

Mr Dumbleton is survived by 4 daughters, Miss Dumbleton, Mrs Ashdown H Green, Mrs (Maj) H D Gerrard and Mrs Cuthbert Holmes, of India, and by 4 sons, Henry Maurice, Charles Douglas, Louis Garcia and Alan Southey. V/Mar 23, 1909 - Dr and Mrs Foot are in Victoria, having arrived from Ymir with the remains of their 2nd son, late Leonard F Foot, aged 26, n/o Wellington, NZ [May 24, 1883]. News of the decease of late Len Foot has been received with utmost regret. He was widely and popularly known in social and other circles. In the 5th Reg he served as a Cpl and Signaller; he was an enthusiastic and capable athlete, being a mem/o JBAA and having for some time captained a local football team; he took a frequent and prominent part in amateur theatricals, and he sang in the Christ Church Cathedral choir. In all circles and among all his acquaintances his cheerful disposition, attractive personality and kindly ways caused him to be generally and sincerely well liked.

He came with his parents to Victoria 19 yrs ago and lived for the most part here and Duncan since then. After leaving school he entered the shipping office of Mr Dunsmuir, and during his engagement was up and down the coast, Victoria to Nome, a good deal. Subsequently, he was appointed to the office of the A-G where his services were highly appreciated and his prospects bright. Unfortunately, abt 2 yrs ago, he contracted a severe cold and thus lingering he fell victim to TB. This dread disease he fought with great courage and persistency. After spending many months at Kamloops and Denver, CO, he went to Ymir, where Dr Foot was in charge of the hospital and there remained until his death the other day. His last wishes were to be buried in Victoria and to be remembered to old friends to whom he sent farewell messages. Throughout a long illness he was always brave and always patient. Pallbearers: PC... T 077 W 43

Work/Mar 25, 1909, 7 - George Kent, the victim of the accident at the Pacific Transfer stables, Fort st, died yesterday. Investigations have established the fact that the cause of the accident was the bursting of the bomb of an old harpoon with which the deceased was stirring a fire. Scattered about the city are a number of ancient but dangerous harpoons similar to that which exploded at the Pacific Transfer Co office on Tues. They are relics of the old-time coast whalers who worked from this city with these weapons in pursuit of the whales off the local coastline before the advent of Orion and St Lawrence with the modern harpoon guns invented by Sven Foyn.

The harpoon which did the damage was one used for a Greener gun fired from the shoulder. Capt Nelson, who is an experienced Arctic whaler, saw some of the harpoons yesterday and stated that he was of opinion they were part of an outfit used by Capt Abel Douglas, who went whaling from Victoria in the schooner Kate in the early days, making his first cruise 40 yrs ago. Capt Nelson met Douglas in the Arctic and in conversation was told about the whaling exploits from this city in Kate.

The last whaling expeditions of this nature were those of steamer Alexander outfitted for a whaling cruise from this port and steamer Thistle, which afterward became Hon James Dunsmuir's yacht.

As far as can be learned the harpoon was one of a number, probably 50, packed in a box which was placed in the back of the Board of Trade bldg. The caretaker of the bldg had several which he kept as curios, but has now shown a quick disinclination to retain the things. The harpoons were found by Mr Kent and some other young men in the vacant lot adjoining the bldg of the Pacific Transfer Co some time ago, and not knowing the dangerous nature of the things, they used them as javelins to throw at a nearby telegraph post and at a target placed on an empty packing case.

One man secured several of the harpoons with an idea of selling them to a curio dealer, but this idea was abandoned.

A number were carried away,

and where these are scattered is not known.

Mar 26, 7 - That George Kent came to his death from the effects of wounds caused by the explosion of a whaling bomb was the verdict rendered. Dr George Hall, who attended late Mr Kent, testified that the explosion had shattered the L kneecap...and muscles of the legs... Deceased lived c 20 hrs from the time he was injured. Death was due to shock following the explosion. Pieces of metal found in the wounds were portions of the stove which had been shattered by the force of the explosion.

Arthur Kent, mgr of Pacific Transfer Co, and brother of deceased, stated that at the time of the explosion he was absent from the office. He had seen the whaling bomb lying about the lot to the rear of the company's premises. There had been 4 of them. One had been brought in and was in his office. He had had no idea that the bombs were explosive. Children and some of the company's employees had thrown them about not knowing that they were dangerous.

Charles Stratton, an employee of the Co, told of having left the deceased in the office a minute or 2 before the explosion. Stratton was standing at the entrance to the stable when the explosion took place. He was knocked down. Rushing into the office he found Mr Kent lying underneath the window. The room was full of yellow smoke.

Arthur Tubb, caretaker of the board of trade bldg stated that c 4 yrs ago he found a box containing 5 or 6 whaling bombs similar to the one produced. The box was lying against the bldg occupied by Dr Davies, while the whaling gun and 4 bombs were found lying at the rear of the Board of Trade bldg. He kept the gun and bombs as a curiosity not knowing that the bombs were explosive. It was not until some time later that he found that one of the bombs contained an explosive. He stood it in a corner and he threw 3 of them into the bay. The others were left lying about in the vacant lot where they were evidently found by children. The Giant Powder Co's premises used to open onto the back of the Transfer Co's premises and the bombs may have come from there.

Jury verdict - Police authorities have taken charge of the gun and 2 bombs which were found and an effort will be made to gather together the others. Jury - William Lenfesty, Henry B Young, George Barber, H Thomas, W J Bittancourt and L S Eaton.

Mar 28, 7 ...about 100 members of the 2 city lodges of Sons of Eng, Alexander and the Pride of the I, attended, and followed the hearse to the graveside. The employees of Mr Kent were also present in a body, and the general attendance was larger than has been observed upon such an occasion for many months. Mar 28, 1909, sup pg 2 - George Dutnall - Victoria's Oldest Pioneer - In the spring of 1850 7 young men came out from England on the HBC ship Cowlitz, and landed at Fort Victoria. A few weeks ago one of them, Rutland, died at Port Simpson, and now but one remains, George Dutnall, of Metchosin. He is the oldest Victoria pioneer now living.

The tale of the beginnings of Victoria and of BC, as related by this venerable pioneer, is full of interest to those of this generation. Many of the events that we know only from the pages of our history books, George Dutnall describes from memory. Although he is partially crippled from the fact that his ankles were broken in an accident, he is seen quite frequently about the streets of the city, and his mind is almost as clear as it was when he landed here, a boy of 20, 50 years ago.

Born at St Mary's, Kent, England, Jan 20, 1830, he was son of Abraham Dutnall and Charlotte Price. His boyhood days were spent on the estate of Baring Brothers, the well-known bankers, where he acted as farmhand and gamekeeper. He was just 20 when he heard the call to the Colonies. His elder brother, John, was engaged by HBC to come out to Victoria as bailiff on one of the great farms of the company. Unwilling to venture into the unknown West alone, John asked his younger brother to come with him, and the spirit of adventure inspired some of the other boys of the village, and the little company soon swelled to 8, all bound to HBC for 5 years.

‘There were 8 of us. My brother John and myself, Chapman, Ribbon, Rutland, Blundell, Ed Parrot and one other whose name has escaped me just now. Rutland was my companion in this country for many years afterwards, and died quite recently at Port Simpson. Parrot was drowned during the voyage out, at Honolulu.

‘We embarked at Gravesend on board Cowlitz, which was on its way to Victoria with merchandise for HBC. The ship had a figurehead that represented a woman, supposed to be the Queen of the Sandwich Islands. Captain Wenton was in command, with Chief Mate Miller and 2nd Mate Swanson. I later sailed with Swanson when he was 1st mate of Beaver, and he was later still Captain in the Pacific waters.

‘We left Gravesend Aug 4, 1849, in the middle of summer, you see. Well, when we reached Cape Horn we struck terrific weather, and for 7 weeks were in the teeth of one gale, that drove us many hundreds of miles out of our course, south into the country of ice. It was dismally cold, and one man had his fingers frozen off. I may as well add here that we struck summer again in the South Pacific, and had just become accustomed to the warmth, when we reached the Straits of Georgia, and encountered bitter weather again. The sudden changes were killing to us.

‘The 1st place we struck land was at the island of Juan Fernandez, Robinson Crusoe’s island. There was one white man living on the island, and he spoke English very well. That island has wonderful vegetation. There I saw the biggest rhubarb I ever came across, the stalks as big as a man’s arm. The people live on goats and fish for the most part. ‘We stopped at the Sandwich Islands next for 3 weeks, 4 days, unloading cargo for the HBC station at Honolulu, and taking on sugar and other supplies for Victoria. A number of our sailors deserted there, leaving us very shorthanded. There, too, poor Parrot was drowned.

‘He and Blundell were the most venturesome young fellows I ever saw. While at Honolulu, one day 5 or 6 of us decided to go inland looking for a famous waterfall and go bathing, on Sunday. On the way a tremendous rainstorm came on, and all but Blundell and Parrot took shelter in a Kanaka house to wait for better weather. The two went on, found the fall, and went in bathing. Neither could swim, and Parrot was drowned.

‘From Honolulu to Victoria we had very bad weather again. Leaving the Sandwich Islands the last week in Jan, 1850, we were 6 weeks on the rest of the voyage, reaching Victoria early in Mar. When we reached Cape Flattery, at the mouth of the Straits, we found the rocks and trees covered with snow, and it was pretty hard on us, just coming from the tropics, I tell you. The head wind was so bad that we had to lay over in San Juan Bay 3 days waiting for fair weather. Then the wind chopped around to the West and we shook out our sails, by this time frozen stiff. It was cruel work getting those sails out for us, who were softened by tropical weather. I heard one man cry from the cold.

‘I go into all these details to show you how different things were in those days. Coming up the Straits that night I was at the wheel, and the sails were set square. I could not keep the ship steady, and it kept rolling every way. The officer told me that it was because we were too near the rocks for the compass to work. He pointed out a star for me to steer by, and after that everything went splendidly. But by daylight we found we had overrun our distance, and were away up above Port Townsend. We had to ‘bout ship back, and it was Saturday evening before we cast anchor at what is now the Outer Wharf. Next morning, Sunday it was, a HBC batteaux, manned by French-Canadians and half-breeds, came out and towed us in to the harbour by rowing.

‘Victoria was not a homelike place to us at that time. To begin with, the ground was covered with snow, and the forest came down to the edge of the water. The old Scotch carpenter turned to me and said: ‘Well, George, and what do you think of this for a 5 year's destination?' 'We've seen some nice countries, but, by Jove! This looks kind of tough!' said I.

'You young fellows can never imagine what this place looked like in the spring of 1850. James Bay district was heavily timbered, and many a cord of wood I cut there. From Government street to the present site of the Central school was the HB farm, bounded on the sides by what is now Johnson street on one side, and what is now Fort street on the other. This land was not all cultivated, as there was a big marsh in the centre of the farm, where we used to shoot ducks. A road up Fort street led to the company's barns and stables, ½ way up the farm, and the dairy, which had about 100 cows, was under the ridge of rock near where Christ Church cathedral stands.

'Everybody lived in the fort, Governor Douglas and all, for fear of the Indians, who were real Indians in those days, very fierce and dangerous. Of course, Governor Douglas was only HB Governor in those days, his real governorship coming later. The fort ran from Wharf to Government streets, and from Fort to Bastion streets. There were high bastions at the corner Fort & Wharf streets, fitted with big guns. A wall ran around the enclosure, with a gallery above it for the watchmen. This will give you some idea of the way we had to live.

'A day or two after the ship arrived we came ashore, and the company gave us a week's holiday to get rested before going to work. We spent the time in shooting game in the woods about the fort. I was always fond of sport and this fact caught the eye of Mr Niven, one of the HB managers. When it came time to go to work, Mr Niven took me over to the store and gave me a rope, for a lasso. He said my duty was to go out into the plains about the city and catch wild colts, which would afterwards be broken in by others. You may be sure that this looked like sport to me, as I had always been fond of horses, although I had never seen a lasso before.

'All the same, I had difficulties, and one of them was in finding my way about at first. Mr Niven told me to go up to the company's dairy, which was in charge of Mr McPhail, a Scotchman, who had charge of that department, and that Mr McPhail would give me a horse and take me out hunting cows and calves, so that I would have a chance to learn the country. It being spring, the cows were just having their calves in the woods about the fort, and these had to be hunted up.

'I remembered having seen the company's barns up Fort street, so I headed for these, thinking that was the dairy. Up at the barns I met a French-Canadian on horseback leading a wild colt, and thinking he was McPhail, I asked him if that was my horse. 'Non; it ees my horse,' said the Frenchman. 'What is your name?' I asked. 'My name is Dupuis,' said the other.

'Then I knew I had made a mistake and I got him to direct me to the dairy. There I was informed by a half-breed woman that Mr McPhail was out riding. This was before breakfast, for we started in to work at 6 am, and had breakfast at 8. So I went back to the fort for breakfast. After the meal I went back to the dairy and waited for McPhail, and it was almost dinner time when he returned only to tell me that he had not time to catch a horse for me. I had never learned to smoke before that, but while I was waiting about the dairy I started in and had a good smoke. When I reported to Mr Niven, he sent me back to tell McPhail that I was to have Mr Niven's saddle mare, that was running on Beacon Hill. I was to ride that until I caught a wild colt and broke it in for myself.

'I had a great deal of fun catching wild horses after that, and soon learned to use my lasso very well. I went from one thing to another, working for the company about the fort until the end of Jun, acting as farm labourer, cutting wood, etc. Then Rutland, who had come over with me on the boat, told me that the company had asked him to get another man and come on the Beaver, the new steamboat, and trade up the coast with the Indians. I thought I might as well put in my 5 years in that way as any other, so I joined the ship.

'For 4 years I traded with Beaver up and down the coast of BC, and in that time I learned more about the country than very many men know today. We went up every river, looking for Indian villages, and trading with them. The Indians were very hostile, and we had a number of close calls. However, we took great precautions. We had a netting rigged about the ship so that the Indians could not board us, and in trading we only admitted 3 or 4 Indians at once. Then the Captain had a way of inviting the chiefs and their families aboard, and keeping them as hostages while trading was going on. That acted as a safeguard.

‘We went to Alaska and Sitka the 1st trip, going up all the rivers on the Coast. We had repairs made to the ship at Sitka, and lay there until near Christmas, then came down, trading up all the rivers again on the way. At Bella Coola on that trip, just a week after New Year’s Day, 1851, I had the coldest time in my experience. It was so cold that the Indians could not come aboard to trade, and all the men on Beaver could do nothing but cut wood for the cook for 3 or 4 days. On the return trip we called at Fort Rupert, on Vancouver Island, and the Captain was given a letter to deliver at Nanaimo. When we had started north there was nothing at Nanaimo but an Indian encampment. So I tell you of the letter to show what developments were then taking place.

‘But first of all I must tell you that on our 1st trip north we found a vessel, England, of Liverpool, loading coal at Fort Rupert. There was a company of Scotch coal miners at work there, brought out by the HBC. While we were north the Indians killed several men who tried to escape to the ship to go south to CA. In the meantime, while we were away, news came of the discovery of coal at Nanaimo, and so when we called at Fort Rupert on our return voyage, there was a letter waiting there for us to take to old Mr Muir, the head of the miners, who had been sent to Nanaimo in the meantime by canoe. ‘At Nanaimo we found that a cabin had been built, and the HB ship Cadboro was at anchor in the harbour, protecting the men who were at work on shore. Governor Douglas had ordered Muir from Fort Rupert to prospect the coal measures. We reached there in the evening, and I went ashore that night with the letter for Muir. He was in bed in the cabin, and I was surprised to find him an old man, as grey as I am now.

‘We came to Victoria then, and traded in the Sound until spring, when we were sent north with the ship Recovery in tow, to move the miners and their machinery from Fort Rupert to Nanaimo. We brought some of the miners down on board Beaver, and among them was Robert Dunsmuir, as well as some of the Muirs, Hunter, McGregor and others.

‘As I said before, I made 4 trips north, each voyage lasting about 9 months, while we spent the other 3 months of the year trading about the Sound. In that time I had many adventures, some of which I will tell you.

‘In 1852, a Boston vessel called Susan Sturgis was taken by the Indians on the north end of the Island, and her crew taken as slaves. They were stripped of their clothing, and dressed in dirty blankets, and made to pack wood and water for the Indians. The vessel was broken up and its cargo divided. The HBC intervened, and we were sent to Fort Simpson to get the survivors. We got them all but one, and brought them to Victoria. What happened to the missing man has never been found out. Captain Roland, of Susan Sturgis, was among the survivors, and Lang [Laing?], the ship’s carpenter, who afterwards had a shipyard here.

‘Another year we picked up a boat’s crew that belonged to a whaler, and had got adrift. We brought them down here. One of the men was a stonecutter, and was employed to build a magazine inside the fort for the company. Another was Davis, a cooper, who afterwards started a shop here. ‘Once I was in a boat with 8 others going ashore for water, when we were fired upon by the Indians, and a bullet went through my shirt under my arm. It was a close call. I afterwards found out that one of the Indians had had a dispute with the Captain over trading and had sworn to kill somebody. I came near being that somebody.

‘Another time the new clipper-built brig Vancouver came North with supplies for Fort Simpson and for Beaver, and was wrecked on the long bar off Fort Simpson. Captain Swanson, who had come over from England on Cowlitz with me, was pilot, but he had gone to bed, leaving instructions for the officers, which they did not carry out. We happened to be laying over at the fort, and we hurried out to the scene of the wreck to get off what cargo we could.

'An amusing incident happened there when a big canoe, as long as the vessel and 10' wide, came alongside, with 40 Indians on board. We had 2 interpreters of another tribe, and at night when we left the ship to return to Beaver until morning, we left the 2 Indians on the Vancouver. The 40 in the canoe then boarded the brig, leaving only 2 women in the canoe. Our interpreters became afraid and slipped down into the canoe, intending to row to Beaver. But the wind was against them, and they were being carried away when we heard their shouts, and went to the rescue. The canoe was tied to the side of Beaver, but during the night it split from end to end.

'In the morning we saw the 40 men on board the brig, rolling up packs of blankets and making bundles of all sorts of supplies. At low tide the bar was out of water, although it must have been 80 yds to shore. We set fire to the wreck, leaving the Indians to run ashore with their packs before high tide.

'Within 4 months of the end of my 4th trip N, my time expired, and I engaged with my brother, who was a bailiff on the HB farm, to work for a yr. Later I worked in logging camps, sawmills, mines, and, in fact, everything that a man can do in this country.

'I went to Cariboo in 1861 at the time of the gold excitement and had a hard time there. There were no supplies to be bought for money. Then I returned to Victoria.

'In 1858 I had taken up a place of my own at Albert Hd, Metchosin, and I live there today.'

This is the modest life story of one of the men who, through labor and manifold sufferings, laid the foundations of this province. Mr Dutnall had 2 daughters, Mrs Walker, deceased, and Mrs Battersby, who now lives on the Craigflower rd. O 063 E G

Apr 18, 1909 - Charles Leavock was drowned yesterday in Gordon Rv. He started from Pt Renfrew in a canoe bound for his ranch, which is situated a few miles inland. Early Sat morning the upturned boat, with blankets, were found by a party of prospectors and further investigation disclosed

Leavock's body washed on the banks of the stream. The unfortunate man had just returned after a sojourn of several yrs in the old country. Previously he had spent some time on the West Coast, during which period he acquired property and erected a comfortable house. He was on his way back to make preparations for the reception of his wife and family when the accident occurred... He will be mourned by a widow and 2 small children, at present in Ire, awaiting word to proceed to Canada. Deceased was c 49, n/o Ire. It is probable that arrangements will be made by the provincial police, who have been communicated with, for the transportation of the remains to Victoria. Apr 20 - Tees returned to port yesterday from Clayoquot and way ports of WC with 15 passengers. She brought a part cargo of whale oil and fertilizer from Sechart. WmHx/Apr 18, 1909 - Pioneer Women of BC - Mrs Ella

In the hope of obtaining a glimpse of the home life of the people of Victoria in the early days, before the makers of these homes have passed away, this series of sketches of the lives of pioneer women is begun. It is fitting, too, that a record, however brief, should be preserved of those who helped to found the city we all love.

Among the pioneers of Victoria none are more beloved or more respected than Mrs Ella. Her home on the brow of the hill on Fort st, nearly opposite Linden av, although built nearly 50 yrs ago, does not compare unfavorably with its more modern neighbors. Within, it is a model of comfort.

No one would think that the bright active lady who opens the door of her hospitable home to her visitors was one of the 1st of English women to arrive in Victoria. Yet it is almost 50 yrs since Mrs Ella, then Miss Cheney 1st saw Victoria. Her mother lived in the village of Sutton, in Northampshire, and still she remembers the green meadows where as a child she gathered cowslips in spring, and the hedges with their autumn store of crimson and black berries.

In the yr 1850, Mr Blenkinsop, the husband of Miss Cheney's aunt, accepted a position a farmer to Mr Cooper, of Metchosin, one of the few independent settlers of VI.

Her aunt, whom she dearly loved, persuaded her parents to allow the young girl to accompany her and her husband to their new home and on Nov 7, 1859 the party left Gravesend in the good ship Tory, bound for Ft Victoria. Mrs Ella retains none but pleasant memories of the long voyage of more than 6 months. The Langford family, Miss Cameron and a number of young HBC clerks were among the passengers. The wife of Capt Duncan was very kind and allowed the young people the use of her piano, so that music and dancing helped to while away the time. The members of the little company grew very intimate and life-long friendships were formed among them. It was May when Tory arrived in Victoria and Beacon Hill was beautiful in its spring dress of green grass, intermingled with wild flowers. A high pole still bore the barrel-shaped beacon from which the park took its name.

But, beautiful as Victoria was, the Blenkinsop's and their niece were not welcome arrivals at the fort and no house had been built for them at Metchosin. If it had not been for the kindness of the school mistress, Mrs Staines, Mrs Blenkinsop and her niece would have fared badly. But that good lady took them into her own quarters in the fort. The young girl attended her school and still feels the warmest gratitude to the memory of her kind hostess, teacher and friend.

In due time the log house was built at the farm and the family moved out. To the English lady and her young niece the work must have been very hard. But youth will find time for pleasure under almost any circumstances. The Skinners lived at Esquimalt, the Langfords at Colwood. At the fort were the Governor's daughters and young ladies from the forts on the Sound or those in the upper country. At Esquimalt there were always numbers of naval officers and the HBC kept a staff of clerks at the fort and had frequent visitors.

Miss Cheney often joined the riding parties that spent the afternoon in a long canter across the open country and met at one of the houses to take tea and perhaps close the evening with a dance.

So, 4 happy yrs passed away till Capt Ella came to woo and win the winsome girl of 19. There was a grand wedding party on a day in 1855. Gov Douglas and his daughters, as well as most of the HBC officials, came out for the wedding. Miss Langford was bridesmaid. Dean Cridge performed the ceremony, while his young wife was one of the guests.

During the day a squadron was seen to enter the harbor of Esquimalt and soon a ship's boat rowed over to the farm with a dispatch for the Governor. What was the delight of the party to learn that the Crimean war was over. The ships had been dispatched from Petropaulovski to carry the news to the naval stn at Esquimalt.

The young couple came to live in a house at the crnr Fort/Broad sts. The next yr Mr Blenkinsop died and very soon the gold rush began, transforming the quiet place to a great mining camp. Before this, Mrs Ella was a mother. Her eldest child was born in part of a house where Mr Barr kept a school, nr the site of the present Central school.

The effect of the rush of miners was to raise prices.

Lumber, from $10, rose to $100/1,000. Eggs were $3/doz and other necessaries equally high. Even water had to be bought and with all the care possible often cost $20/mo. As Mr Ella was then in the employ of the Company and wages did not increase, the little family might have found it hard to live but that there was great demand for the land which Capt Ella, like most of the Company's people, had obtained. In 1863 he built the home in which the family still resides. The yrs that followed were quiet and very busy ones for the wife and mother. The care of her house and children and the occasional visit of friends and neighbors left little time or thought for the outside world. Then the 1st great grief of her life came. Her husband was drowned at Burrard Inlet in 1873. Mrs Ella was left a widow with 7 children, the eldest of whom was a boy of 15 and the youngest a little girl of 3. Of her work and her trials in the yrs that followed, Mrs Ella does not tell. In them all she had the help and sympathy of her dearly loved aunt and foster mother, Mrs Blenkinsop, who lived with her till she passed away at the age of 80, nearly 25 yrs ago. She lost 1 child, a daughter, at aged 18. This was a great sorrow, of which it is hard, even yet, to speak. The other children are living. They are Mrs Dodds, of Victoria; Mrs Nisbet, Vancouver, and Miss Ella, at home. Of the 3 sons, Mr J R Ella has his home in Vancouver, and Messrs Harry and F W Ella live in this city.

Surrounded with every comfort, Mrs Ella spends the happy evening of her days among friends, old and new. [Photo included].

Jun 13, 1909, 8 - Pioneer Women of BC - Mrs Mary Ann [Alfred] Hollins -

On Pembroke st, nr the Fernwood rd, there is a garden which all who pass in these Jun days linger to admire. Roses in great profusion fill the narrow border which separates from the st the cottage where an old couple live who have seen Victoria grow from an HBC trading post and tent-covered field into a lovely city, many of whose sts can be measured by miles. The cottage is the home of Mr/Mrs Alfred Hollins, and both are ready to talk of the times and of those who, like them, have passed away.

Mrs Hollins was born in Birkenhead. Her father Thomas Quinn, and his brother John were master builders, and there are houses still standing to tell of the excellence of their work. The family was a large one, and Mrs Hollins, who was one of the younger children, fell in love with Thomas Sully, a painter, married young, and went to live in Dublin. The old lady speaks with great admiration of the beauty of the fine city where she spent the happy yrs of young married life. But news of the gold discoveries in CA reached Dublin. The husband grew discontented, and the young wife crossed the channel to her girlhood home with her baby, while he took passage for the west, of which such wonderful stories were told. Some yrs after Mrs Sully left Eng in the sailing ship Himalaya bound for Victoria with a cargo of goods. Among the passengers were Mrs Jackson, wife of Dr Jackson, and her child. The ship was 5 mo and 3 days at sea, and the Capt was very kind to the women and children on board. All, as Mrs Hollins thinks, are gone except her.

On landing at Esquimalt she was met by her husband. To the city bred woman the scattered houses and the tents which were still to be seen in some places, looked poor and mean, and she still laughs at the 'wooden slates' and the 'calico houses' to which she soon grew accustomed.

She went to live in a new cottage on Moss st, nr Fort. It was at first bare and rude enough, but gradually she was able to make it neat and comfortable. As time went on the mother found that she must depend upon her own exertions for the support of her boys and herself.

Dr Helmcken discovered her need. He helped her, and Mrs Helmcken employed her to make clothing for her children. Mrs Hollins speaks with the greatest gratitude of the kindness received from this family.

At this time Sir James Douglas was in Eng, where he had gone to receive the honor of knighthood. Gov Kennedy succeeded him. One day as Miss Kennedy and her father were passing the cottage on Moss st, the little boys attracted the attention of the Gov, who stopped to speak to them. The young lady talked to the mother, who was known to the family as the 'woman in white.' She looked at the sewing which Mrs Sully was doing and asked her father if she could not engage her to put the linen at Government House in order. When the mother objected that she could not leave her children, the Governor said, 'Bring them with you.' From that time there was no want of employment.

Whether darning or making dainty dresses for the young ladies to wear at balls, the young Englishwoman was able to please her kind employers. She was well paid for her work, but she remembers with still more pleasure the affection and confidence of the ladies.

The Seymours came to Carey Castle when the Kennedys went home. There were no young people at Government House then, but there were balls, and Mrs Seymour was glad to engage the help of one who had before waited on the guests. The very sad death of Gov Seymour at sea, and all the incidents connected with it are well remembered by the old lady. Mrs Seymour is spoken of as having been very kind and good to everyone.

When Sir Anthony Musgrave came to Government House, his sisters Miss Fanny and Miss Susan, needed the services of the needlewoman, who was now well known. Gov Musgrave was at that time a widower with one son.

One morning as the Gov was mounting for a ride, the spirited horse grew restive, and the Gov fell, injuring his leg badly. The groom tried to pull off the long riding boot, but Mrs Sully, who was working in an upper room, called to him to stop. She rushed down and with her scissors cut the leather to find that the leg was bleeding terribly. By the time Dr Powell arrived the Gov had been carried into the house by the help of the leaf of the dining room table and a hearthrug which the ready-witted woman had sent for.

Not long after Gov Musgrave went to San Francisco to be married to Miss Fields, a NY heiress, to whom he had been for some time engaged. Miss Susan Musgrave married John Trutch, and shortly afterwards the couple went to Eng. The new mistress of Government House is spoken of as being a 'fine, good woman.'

But in the meantime the boys had grown up and their father was dead. Both lads learned trades. The eldest went to San Francisco and after he had grown to manhood died. The other is still living in Seattle and he and his children are frequent visitors to his mother's home in Victoria. It is 37 yrs since Rev Dr McGregor of St Andrew's church, married Mrs Sully to Alfred Hollins, who came here from Aus in 1858. For many yrs Mr/Mrs Hollins lived on a fine farm on Salt Spring I, where Mr Hollins' father was one of the 1st settlers. Since selling the farm they have resided in Victoria, and it is not likely they will again leave a place endeared to them by so many associations. [Ph included]

V/WmHx/Jun 27, 1909, 8 - Pioneer Women of BC - Mrs Sophia Rudlin [nee Hill], father was John Hill, Duke of Kent 73rd Reg to Aus as Armory-Sgt...PC; Jul 4, 8 - Pioneer Women of BC - Mrs Sophie Rudlin w/photos: Mrs Sophia Rudlin, the bride of more than 50 yrs ago, is not known to many of the younger generation of Victorians. She has lived a quiet busy life, and still in her 79th yr, occupies herself with the care of the home in which she lives alone.

The groom was among the most popular of our citizens till but 5 yrs ago he was suddenly called away. As Capt of Charmer, many experienced his kindness, for he was always ready with help and advice for any passenger who needed it, while all travellers were treated with a hearty, friendly courtesy.

But though Mrs Rudlin lives alone, it must not be thought that she has lost interest in the outside world. She is still a diligent reader of the newspapers, and keeps in touch with what is going on in the city. On the day of the pound party at the orphans' home, she was found lamenting the mistake that the grocer had made in not delivering a # of large parcels at the orphanage at the proper time.

Not having any children of her own, the welfare of her nieces and other young friends occupies her thoughts; and though she prefers to live alone, she likes to receive visits, and entertains her guests very kindly.

A very tiny dog is Mrs Rudlin's constant companion, and the little creature manifests towards its mistress the greatest affection; yet no jealousy is manifested towards pussy when she claims her share of the attention of the lady who is so great a lover of pets.

It must be more than 100 yrs since Mrs Rudlin's father, John Hill, of Birmingham, went with the Duke of Kent's Reg, the 73rd, to Aus as Armory-Sgt. There he met her mother, Anna Urch. The 2 were married, and at Ceylon a baby boy was born. Mr Hill, hearing that a fortune had been left him, procured his discharge, and with his wife and child returned home on the ship of the admiral, Sir Charles Wetherall. The Admiral's lady fell ill, and Mrs Hill left her baby boy in charge of her husband to wait on her. The soldiers of the Reg made a pet of the little fellow, and enlisted him among their number. When he came of age young Hill, himself confirmed their action, and he, too, became Armorer-Sgt.

But on his return, a great disappointment awaited Mr Hill. As happened, in many cases in those days, the fortune to which he believed himself entitled fell into Chancery, and he was forced to seek a livelihood for himself and his family. He prospered, however, and girls and boys grew up around him. One of these married a widower, James Wilcox. During the gold excitement in CA, Mr/Mrs Wilcox came to

San Francisco, and were among the many drawn by the news of the discoveries in 1858. In that yr Mr Wilcox built the Royal Hotel, on Wharf st, nr the crnr Johnson st, and 2 yrs later Mrs Wilcox sent for her sister, Miss Sophia Hill.

Leaving Birmingham by the Stafford train, Miss Hill took passage at Liverpool by City of Washington, for NY. From that city the passage was made by way of the Isthmus to San Francisco. An 8 days' trip by steamer Oregon brought the tired traveller to her destination. At the same time arrived George Mason and his wife, who made their home on a block of 5 acres in what is fast becoming the centre of the business portion of the city. Mrs Mason still lives, and Mason st preserves the name of these old time residents.

When the news of fortunes to be made in Cariboo came to Victoria, Mr Wilcox was one of those who went north to try his fortune, and the family lived in a house on Fort st. He, however, did not succeed. During the dull times which followed, Miss Hill assisted her sister in the work of the hotel. Help was hard to get. It was during this time that Capt Rudlin came to the Royal, with an injured arm and it was while she waited on him that the attachment was formed which 5 months after, on Apr 28, 1858, ended in marriage.

The next yr a house was built on the hill to the S of Pandora st. A block of land, now occupied by houses, was cultivated, and soon a fine garden and orchard was, by the industry of Mrs Rudlin, turned into a source of profit. In this way she occupied herself during the long summer days, when the Capt was on board his ship. But as the yrs went on the land was needed for homes, and now the orchard and garden are occupied by houses, while here and there the spreading branches of an old cherry or apple tree affords a pleasant shade to a group of frolicsome children. Mrs Rudlin was able 20 yrs ago to visit her girlhood home in Eng. Three of her sisters were living still, and she enjoyed meeting them. But the place itself, with its thick walls and dark sts, had no attractions for the woman who had spent an outdoor life in the bright sunshine and clear air of her western home. She was saddened too, to find that even the houses where some of her dearest friends had lived had disappeared, and that she could find no trace of them. One place she visited with mournful interest. This was St Philip's Church, where she was confirmed, and where in the old churchyard she found her father's grave. Among her treasures, Mrs Rudlin cherishes a sampler, on which in the yr of her confirmation she worked a hymn.

And so, in the home where she has lived for 40 yrs, the old lady of 79 spends, amid memories of the past the long quiet summer days. [ph/Capt/Mrs Rudlin - see Jul 4, 1909, 8. P 090/091 W F]

WmHx/Apr 28, 1909, 8 - Women Pioneers - Mrs Lucy [Hamilton] Moffatt.

Mrs Moffatt, the subject of this sketch, has seen the growth of Victoria from the time the 1st timber was cut for Ft Camosun till the last pretty bungalow was finished on what was then an impenetrable forest.

As a very little girl her father, Capt McNeill took her from her home at Nisqually, to see the place where the new fort was to be built. Her memories of that 1st visit are very indistinct. A few yrs after, however, Capt McNeill went to Eng with his sailing ship Cowlitz, and his wife and children came over in the HBC steamer on their way to Ft Simpson. The 1st factor in charge, Mr Ross, had died, but Mrs Moffat remembers seeing Mrs Ross. After leaving supplies for the new fort the steamer left for Ft Simpson. Many months must have passed away before Capt McNeill arrived from Eng for the northern outpost, bringing with him everything needed at the fort for the next yr. With her load of furs and with the Capt's family as passengers the good ship was soon again on her way south. This time her destination was Ft Vancouver on the Columbia. Here she was loaded with wheat and other produce from the farms in the fertile Columbia valley, and sailed for the Russian post of Sitka, calling at Ft Simpson on her way. The ship was sent to Eng, but Capt McNeill remained in Sitka as an agent of the company. His wife and children, of course, stayed with him. The children spent a very pleasant winter in their northern home. The Russian officials were very kind, and the boys found playmates among their sons. The girls were not allowed so much freedom, but recollections of the grand balls at the hospitable home of the Russian governor are still cherished by the little girl of long ago. Monsieur Papoff she still remembers as a friend of her father.

The next 4 yrs were spent in the cased fort of Stickeen. This was an anxious period. The Indians were not too friendly, and when orders came that the HBC were to abandon the fort they were terribly enraged. They armed and painted themselves, and all Capt McNeill's diplomacy scarcely availed to prevail upon them to allow the little company to embark unmolested. In war paint, with daggers and guns, the men formed into lines from the gate of the fort to the shore. Not a word was spoken as the terrified women and children hastened fearfully between their ranks to the ship. However, no attack was made, and the passage to Rupert's rv, on the N coast of Vancouver I, where coal had been discovered, and Capt McNeill had been ordered to build a fort, was safely made. Here the young people watched the men from Victoria as well as those who had come from Stickeen, clearing the space for the new post, building fires to burn the rubbish and smoothing the logs for the stockade. Mrs Moffatt has a faint recollection of a visit from Gov Blanchard, but whether at this or a later time, she is not sure.

Miss McNeill and her sisters were sent to Victoria to school to Mrs Staines, where, like all the other pupils of that good lady, she spent a very pleasant and profitable time. It was, however, all too brief. Capt McNeill arranged to take a post at the Sandwich Islands, and took her with him to prepare a home for the family, who would follow at a later time. Mrs Moffatt was then a girl of about 16. Mr McTavish, whose place Capt McNeill was to take, had, however, changed his mind, and after a very pleasant visit, father and daughter returned to Victoria. The beauty of the islands, the kindness of the people and the customs of the natives made a deep impression on the girl, whose life had been spent in such different scenes. Beautiful as the tropical islands were, father and daughter were greatly delighted to reach the rocks at the bottom of what is now Fort st, one beautiful Sun afternoon. The place was so quiet it seemed deserted, but the travellers had scarcely reached the gate, when Gov Douglas, who had seen them coming, hurried out saying: 'Well, Capt McNeill, back again! I am glad to see you.' He and Mrs Douglas greeted the young girl kindly, and soon the children came in from Sun school, welcoming back their old schoolmate with a delight in which the decorum of Sunday was forgotten.

It was not long after this that Mr Moffatt, a handsome young Irish gentleman, one of the company's clerks began to admire the young girl, now blossoming into womanhood. She, however did not remain long at Victoria. Capt McNeill made arrangements for the education of the younger children, sending some to Eng, where a dearly loved brother died, and a young sister went to board with Miss Langford at Colwood, who taught a school for young ladies.

With her mother and father

Miss McNeill went to Ft Rupert, of which Capt McNeill was made factor. There, she remembers meeting Mrs Muir and Mrs Dunsmuir as well as others of the old timers, who have since passed away. With needlework and household duties, the days of their stay in this retired place passed away pleasantly. Mr Moffatt was transferred to Ft Rupert, and the young people soon became lovers. The happiness of the weeks and months that sped away before, with the consent of her parents, the young lady was engaged, can be imagined by hundreds of young couples in our city today, who with youth, health and beauty, look forward to a lifetime to be spent together.

Mr Moffatt was promoted to the charge of Ft Rupert, and Capt McNeill when to Ft Simpson to relieve Mr Work. The voyage up the coast was made in steamer Labouchere. The life at these coast forts was not lonely, Mrs Moffatt says. The factor's wife had plenty of servants. Vessels from Eng arrived at intervals with stores, and visitors from the forts on the coast came during the summer. The winters, indeed, were long, but when was ever a prospective bride short of occupation?

The wedding took place in due course. Capt McNeill was relieved of his post at Ft Simpson and the family came to Victoria. Mr Moffatt was already there and very soon there was a grand wedding. The bride's trousseau came from Honolulu. Her bonnet was of white shirred satin with a rich bridal veil. The dress itself was of finest muslin tucked and embroidered in the most exquisite style of that bygone time.

Bishop Cridge performed the ceremony and Miss Jane Douglas and Miss Margaret Work were bridesmaids. The best men were Benjamin Pearce and Capt Swanson. Gov Douglas, with all the HBC people were present as honored guests. How few are left! The reverend clergyman to whose congregation Mrs Moffatt has ever since belonged, still lives, honored and beloved. Groom and groomsmen are no more. On Easter Sun, Mrs Dallas, then Miss Douglas, one of the bridesmaids, passed away and Miss Work, who, as Mrs Jackson lived long in Victoria, died some yrs since.

But there were no melancholy reflections to dampen the spirits of the happy young couple who then began life's journey together. The life of the officials of the HBC was a wandering one. Mr Moffatt was placed in charge of Kamloops. From there the long journey by stage and boat took them to Stuart's Lk. Here, at Ft St James, they lived 4 yrs. The scenery was very beautiful. In summer the varied foliage and blossoms of the trees, and in autumn, the berries and bright tints of the leaves, were very different from the fir-clad heights nr the coast. In winter the deep snow was a never ceasing source of wonder. The ice-covered lake was often pierced with holes where the Indians watched for the fish which, frozen and raised on high platforms among the trees, formed a large part of the store of winter food, both for the people at the fort and the neighbouring Indian tribes. At the fort itself there was no want of company. Chief Lacbe Ogden, who was in charge, had 4 daughters and there was an unusually large number of clerks. Mrs Ogden, though very quiet, was a motherly woman and was good to the young matron from the coast.

There were, merrymakings, too. The 1st dance was an occasion never to be forgotten. The young ladies of the fort sat on one side of the long room, the men on the other. Mr Ogden, though an old gentleman who played the part of chief musician, sat on a raised platform. Then, very ceremoniously, the young gentlemen approached the lady of his choice and, with a low bow, requested the honour of a dance. Soon, the 4 were on the floor and the feet were flying in time to the music. Seeing that Mrs Moffatt was shy, Mr Ogden himself resigned his fiddle and insisted that she should be his partner. But, gay and kind as they were, the people of this fort spoke the French-Canadian tongue, and for the 1st time in her life, the young wife was lonesome. She missed the music of the waves and the kiss of the sea-breezes. When the last long winter was over and the boat came to the edge of the frozen lake, she could scarcely wait to say goodbye. But she was not to go without receiving a proof of Mrs Ogden's kindness. Mr Ogden, himself, had died during their stay. The mistress of the fort would not let her guest walk across the lake. She bade her son take out the carriage. The dogs in bright harness and jingling bells were brought out and soon were proudly galloping across the smooth ice, carrying the western woman in the fur-lined sleigh. So, Mrs Moffatt left forever her home in the interior. But the journey was long and tedious. Day after day Capt McNeill came to the wharf to await the arrival of his daughter and her husband in Enterprise, and as often returned disappointed. At last they arrived and whether the old father or the young couple were the more rejoiced, it would be hard to tell. The old sailor, trader and factor had made his home at his beautiful tract of land at Shoal bay. He had sent to his sister in Boston for the furniture and there in ease and comfort he spent his declining years.

Mrs Moffatt was again among friends and relatives. Sisters and old schoolmates welcomed her. Mr Moffatt receiving a position in the Indian agency and the couple made their home nr the waterfront of James bay. But death divides the nearest and dearest. It is 20 yrs since Capt McNeill passed away. Almost to the last he was active and his hair was but slightly tinged with grey. It is 12 yrs since Mr Moffatt died. Of him it might be said, many yrs of his life were spent in the wilderness.

'And thus he bore without abuse

The grand old name of gentleman.'

Though she has many kind friends and kind relatives Mrs Moffatt lives alone, dwelling much on memories of the past. Yet a keen observer of the world around her. Appeals to her charity are seldom unanswered and she is to be met at many gatherings where women are engaged in working for the cause of the helpless or afflicted. But, perhaps, nothing gives her more pleasure than to meet once more a survivor of the little band of girl friends who attended school at Ft Victoria nearly 60 yrs ago. [Ph included]

WmHx/May 9, 1909 - Mrs Frederick Carne:

'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with they might,' might have been the motto of the lady who, very kindly spent a morning hour in telling the story of her life to the writer.

For all her 76 years, Mrs Frederick Carne of the Angel hotel, still manages the business of one of the oldest houses of entertainment in the city, and passes from room to room with an activity which many a younger woman might envy.

Mrs Carne, whose maiden name was Harriet Richards, was born at Redruth, Cornwall, England, in 1833. She was the eldest child and when the 2nd came her grandmother took her to her home, a mining village on the banks of the Tamar in Devonshire. When the time came for her return the grandmother felt that she could not part with her and the little one remained to take the place of the children who had gone from the home to do the world's work. Both Mrs Carne's father and grandfather were miners, occupying the position of foremen. Like so many people in that part of England, the families were Methodists, and Mrs Carne's earliest recollections are of accompanying her elders to the chapel 1 ½ miles distant. The old people had many stories to tell of the early Methodist preachers and their holy lives. Mrs Carne came out to America in the early 1850's. Here she married and with her husband, went to live at Lake Superior. News of the gold discoveries in CA reached the young Englishman and his wife and he determined to seek his fortune in the gold diggings. But it was felt by both that the young wife, whose baby was not yet 2 years old, would be safer and better in her English home until one had been made for her on the shores of the Pacific. So husband and wife parted in NY in 1855, hoping to meet again the following year. But scarcely had Mr Carne reached CA when news of the gold discoveries on the Fraser River drew him to Victoria. Like others he followed the prospectors to Cariboo and it was 9 years before the family were reunited. In 1864 Mrs Carne again left Eng. This time she had 2 children, the eldest now 9 and the other about 7. During the passage Mrs Carne experienced great kindness from her fellow passengers, especially from Mr & Mrs Philip Smith who like herself, were coming to Victoria. Mrs Smith was the grand daughter of an Admiral and a very gentle and estimable lady. From CA the party came up in the old Brother Jonathan and landed at Esquimalt where Mr Carne met his wife and children. The little city was larger than Mrs Carne had been led to expect and the conditions of living were more comfortable. At the outset, however, she was compelled to make a decision, which is a hard one for any woman. Her husband's work was in Cariboo, which at that time was not a place where a little girl and boy could receive an education. The mother felt that her children needed her most, so she stayed in Victoria with them, making a home to which her husband could return each year at the close of the season. The little girl was sent to Madame Petticrew's school and the boy, now the well-known grocer, Fred Carne, took his 1st lessons from Mr Barr. Mrs Carne then lived in a house on Fort street, near Mrs Ella, and, in what has, since been known as the old Fell place, on View street her fellow passengers, Mr & Mrs Smith, made their home. Mrs Carne's life in Victoria was a happy and prosperous one. A house was soon built on North Park street, where the family lived until about 1879. The only regret Mrs Carne had was that her husband was obliged to work alone during the long summer season and when an opportunity presented itself to put an end to this way of living, it was eagerly embraced.

Charles Morton, the proprietor of the Angel hotel, on Bastion Square, was about to leave the city and wanted to dispose of the property. Mrs Carne believed that it was possible to conduct a hotel without a bar. She and her husband were in the prime of life. By her advice and in spite of the warnings of many friends, the place was bought. By industry and economy success was gained. More than once strong inducements were offered to the new proprietress to open a bar in their hotel, but to this Mrs Carne refused her consent and her husband acquiesced in her judgement. 'No one ever presented a bill that we were not able to pay,' the hostess declares with pardonable pride. A brick block has been added to the original wooden building which still stands, a model of homely comfort.

After coming to Victoria 3 daughters were born. One of them died while still a little girl. The other members of the family are Mrs J L Crimp, Fred Carne, Mrs John Grant, and Mrs Whittier, all of whom live in Victoria. As was to have been expected Mrs Carne joined the Methodist church when she came to Victoria. The old church had been built and Dr Evans was pastor when she arrived. She did what a very busy woman could to help in the work in which the women of that denomination were engaged in the early days. When Francis Willard, more than 25 years ago, visited Victoria, Mrs Carne became one of the charter members of the WCTU, and has ever since worn the white ribbon of the order. When, at a later time, prosperity brought more leisure, Mrs Carne was touched by the needs of those of her own sex who were, in their old age, left without any one to care for them. With Mrs Gould, Mrs Goodacre and Mrs William Grant, she, 11 years ago, united to found the Aged Women's Home. The claims of the sick were again recognized by Mrs Carne when she became a charter member of the Rebekahs, the women's branch of the IOOF. She is very proud of the veteran's jewel of that order which she received 6 months ago. No claim of her family was neglected for this outside work. All these years Mrs Carne has kept up a regular correspondence with her sisters in Eng. Twenty years ago she visited her old home and though she enjoyed the reunion and the sight of the old familiar scenes, no place is so dear to her as Victoria. Of late years Mrs Carne has allowed herself a 2 weeks' holiday at Harrison Hot Springs. How busy her life during the rest of the year is, can easily be seen by anyone who pays an unexpected visit during the morning and sees the mistress of the house transacting business with tradespeople or making arrangements for the comfort of her guests. During the quieter afternoons the still busy fingers are at work making warm slippers or other articles for the old ladies whose needs Mrs Carne never forgets.

It is 5 years since Mr Carne died and a short time ago his widow celebrated her 76th birthday. Unconscious that she had done anything worthy of note, this pioneer of Victoria is a type of the cheerful perseverance, the unflinching industry, the active charity and the simple faith that have done so much to build up our country. Police/May 15, 1909 - Active and alert, despite the more than 70 years which have passed over his head, Henry Sheppard, gaoler at the police station, yesterday celebrated his 74th birthday, completing nearly 35 years of service on the local force. He was the recipient of hearty congratulations from his fellow members on the force to whom he is affectionately known as 'Dad.'

In Jun, 1862, Mr Sheppard arrived in Victoria on Alice Thorndyke after a quick passage from New Zealand. The tales of the rich gold finds in the Cariboo district proved the lure which called him and scores of other Antipodeans to this country. Victoria then was crowded with miners all anxious to set off for the north, and the time was one of excitement. Victoria was a mere straggling village with but a few scattered buildings surrounded by scrub and bush to within a stone's throw of Government st. Shortly after his arrival Mr Sheppard set out for the Cariboo, where he remained until the summer of 1864, when he returned to Victoria, and for 18 months was a member of the local police force under Sgt McBride, father of Premier McBride. By the decease of late Mr McBride a few days ago Mr Sheppard is the last living member of the police force of that time.

Late in 1865 Mr Sheppard again went to the Cariboo district, where he remained until 1875, when he returned to

Victoria and made a 6 month trip to his New Zealand home. On his return to this city he joined the police force again and has been a member ever since. About 18 months ago Mr Sheppard was stricken with a serious illness, which forced him to give up his police duties until a short time ago, but he once more went back at the desk in the police station, fully recovered and ever ready to tell of the stirring days in the early history of the city when the gold fever prevailed. News/Died May 21, 1909 at Victoria, BC, Robert Holloway, one of the best known pioneers of Cariboo and BC. The late Mr Holloway was s/o an English barrister, and was n/o

Norwich, Eng, aged 75. He came to this country in the early 1850's with the rest of the family and settled at Ft Garry, now Winnipeg. From there he came to Victoria in Dec, 1863, by the overland route in a Red River cart hauled by ox-team, striking the Fraser Rv at Tete Jaune Cache. He came on to Victoria but left for Cariboo in 1865.

After spending the winter in Victoria, in 1867, he went again to Cariboo, in 1868, and bought out the Cariboo Sentinel from Messrs Wallace and Dearburg, printing that paper for 8 yrs, until the fire which burnt out Barkerville. Having saved his plant he resumed publication at Richfield, where he published until the end of boom days. Leaving there he came to Victoria and worked with The Colonist, then published by its founder, Amor de Cosmos, continuing in its service when the paper was purchased by D W Higgins. Later he was employed as asst editor and reporter on the Standard under Mr de Cosmos and later was employed by the times. At the time of his death he was in the service of the provincial government in its printing office. He only left off work there last week.

Mr Holloway was a charter member of Victoria Typographical union and was at one time president. He is survived by a widow, 1 son and 5 daughters: Mrs G R Robinson, Esquimalt; Mrs W B Anderson, Oak Bay; Mrs Lloyd of Everett; Mrs McLeod and Miss Holloway of Spokane.

WmHx/May 23, 1909 - Mrs Walter Sims -

Just at the ft of the rocks at the top of Pandora st there has stood for more than 40 yrs a low old-fashioned house. Its ivy covered porches, the roses trained along the wall and the little garden full of old-fashioned shrubs and flowers as well as the fuschias and geraniums in the window tell of the care, the neatness and the taste of the mistress of the home. This yr the flowers except in the borders have given place to potatoes, for the city has planned to widen the narrow st, and this will take away the greater part of the garden. Yet even in the interval the sight of a weed grown patch of ground is not be borne by the thrifty old lady who still busies herself in her garden and who keeps every room in the house in a state of exquisite neatness.

It is 56 yrs since Mrs Sims, as a little girl of 10, came out on the 3rd trip of Norman Morison. Her mother was Mrs Thomas Reid, and her stepfather, Mr Vine, is still living.

Her childhood home was Greenhythe on the Thames, but her recollections of the old land have faded away. Perhaps it was natural that the impressions of the voyage and of life in the new home should have overshadowed those of the quieter past. It was more than 5 months after Norman Morison left Gravesend before, in Jan of 1853, she came to Victoria. The trip though long, was very pleasant. The ship was crowded with immigrants for the HBC farms at Craigflower and Esquimalt. Mr McKenzie, himself, being one of the passengers.

Many of the farmers had their children with them, and so far from feeling the confinement, the young people made the voyage one long playtime. As usual in rounding the Horn, the sea was somewhat rough, and in one of their many romps a party of the children fell into the hold. Mrs Sims still remembers her sensations, when on recovering from the insensibility which she had fallen, she found herself dressed in her Sun frock, and wondered why she was wearing it.

When the vessel arrived, the newcomers were forced to occupy very crowded quarters indeed in the company's houses within the fort. Mrs Sims remembers that Mrs Yates, who occupied one of the very few houses beyond its walls, was very kind to the strangers. But homes were soon built for the laborers at the farms and Mr Reid, who was a carpenter went to work for Mr Longford at Colwood, removing after about a yr to

Mr Skinner's farm at Esquimalt. Mrs Reid, who was an excellent needlewoman, was often employed by Mrs Douglas and the other ladies at the fort. Mrs Sims, however, did not long remain at homes. When only 16, she in 1859, just 50 yrs ago, married Mr Walter Sims. The couple went to live on the Fernwood rd, which was then really a road, for to the east where large ...? nr his work, for he was a butcher, and was employed by Mr Harris, the 1st mayor of Victoria.

On May 4, 1866, the family removed to their present home, and there they have lived ever since. Mrs Sims, though bright and happy, has spent very few days outside of her own home. She had a large family, and in caring for her husband and children led an active busy life. Her daughters all but the youngest have married and settled either in Victoria or on Vancouver I.

Mrs Thomas Parker lives at Rocky Point, and Mrs Whitty at Duncans, Mrs Gandy, Mrs Nicolas, Mrs Rutledge, Mrs Jewell and Mrs Colter have their homes in the city. There was 1 son who died a few yrs ago. As may be imagined, the old house has many visitors. Children, grandchildren and gt-grandchildren look upon it as home. If Mrs Sims could gather her descendants together they would number half a score. The sight of young faces, the sound of children's prattle and the merry jests of youths and maidens keep the hearts of this pioneer couple from growing old. Mrs Sims has lived a very busy but contented life, and still she devotes herself to the care of her husband, and takes an interest in the affairs of all whom she loves. [ph/Mr/Mrs Sims included]. [F 032 E 18]

He was finally pulled away from the engine room by his companions, but not before he had sustained injuries which led to his death. He was a strong manly sort of a lad, broad shouldered, well muscled and had the long lean head of a fighter. The boys all liked him, as he was a 1st rate fellow in every way. His manner, however, was more like that of a boy of 10 in company with high school lads. He took his place in the lineup he was told to take.

'When the school term closed in 1896 Black, who was older than most of the boys, was most anxious to pass at the exams. When the class assembled and marched in to music to hear the promotion list read. Black had failed to pass. He marched out as bravely as any of the class, his shoulders well set, and his head carried as proudly as ever, but his face was pale and set hard.

WmHx/Jun 11, 1909 - Mrs E C Johnson -

In the great city of London [Eng], about half a century ago, a very pretty brown-eyed girl helped her mother teach a private school. The two were all in all to each other, for the mother, Mrs Basan, was a widow, and the daughter by a former marriage, Miss Evans, was her only child.

The mother was very delicate and as the yrs went on, the work grew too hard for her. Miss Evans was not old enough, either in yrs of experience, to carry on the school alone. She was obliged to leave home with its modest comfort and the household treasures which English gentlewomen gather around them and seek for work.

Two aunts living in Brighton offered their assistance, but the situation obtained proved a very unhappy one and the young governess was obliged to look for another.

At that time there was much talk among those in the Old Land who took an interest in church and colonial affairs of the far-away colony of Vancouver I, where Bishop Hills had gone to preside over the infant church. The story of the gifts of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts was published in the newspapers and an exaggerated idea of the need of teachers in Victoria, the capital of the new colony, was formed.

Understanding that Bishop Hills would give her employment in a church school in the little city Miss Evans' aunts persuaded her to leave Eng, where there were so many, like herself, who were seeking positions as governesses and come to a land where, if reports were to be trusted, gold was plentiful and teachers scarce.

The voyage was a very long and disagreeable one to the gently nurtured girl, but it was over at last and when the ship arrived in Victoria, Archdeacon Wright met the lonely young girl and cared for her with great kindness. There was not any position available for her in Victoria. The Archdeacon told her, however, that a school was to be opened in Yale and advised her to accept it. The Rev Henry Reeve was the incumbent of the parish and she could live with him. Eagerly embracing the offer, Miss Evans set out on another voyage and was soon in the village that but a short time before had been the site of a busy mining camp. There were now but few families left and the little school did not number more than 12 children of all ages and embracing many nationalities and denominations. True to her home training the young Englishwoman taught the children the catechism and endeavored to create in them a love of goodness. She devoted Sat to religious instruction, and as this was the Sabbath day of the Jews, this teaching did not offend the consciences of her Jewish pupils. A happy yr was spent for the parents were liberal and Mr/Mrs Reeves were very kind to their young charge. Miss Evans, however, did not long remain in their home. When the mining season closed in Cariboo, to which the gold seekers had gone after the bars on the Fraser had been robbed of most of their treasure, many of the miners returned to Yale to spend the winter. Among them was a tall, handsome gentleman, Cody Johnson, who wooed and won the English girl. Mr/Mrs Johnson were the 1st couple married in the Episcopal church at Yale and the old couple still cherish the Bible bearing on the flyleaf this inscription: 'Presented to Mr/Mrs Edward Johnson on the day of their marriage, Nov 28, 1863, in Yale church, by Henry Reeve, incumbent.' For another yr Mrs Johnson kept her school while her husband returned to Cariboo. Then a baby boy came to the little home on the hill and the people of Yale had to look for another teacher. Among Mrs Johnson's recollections of her 1st home in BC is the completion of the road round Yale Bluff by the [Royal] Engrs. Gov Douglas came up to open the road which he did with much ceremony. Everyone turned out to see and hear him and to listen to the music of the band. After a few yrs Mr Johnson gave up his search for gold and came to Victoria. Mrs Johnson then had 2 little boys and a daughter. Since that 3 children have been born and the mother has lost 3. Grief has been no stranger to this pioneer couple who for 30 yrs have lived in the cottage on John st, Rock Bay. Twenty yrs ago 2 beautiful children were snatched away by diphtheria, and Mrs Johnson still cherishes the pictures of her darlings. Sadder still was the death of an older boy who was accidentally drowned nr Olympia where the family lived for a short time. But Time, the great healer, has brought comfort though not forgetfulness. There are 3 children living still. Messrs Arthur and Edward Johnson in Victoria, and Mrs F G Ellis, of Calgary. Mrs Johnson has always been a staunch member of the Church of England. She belonged to St John's congregation, but often attended the neighbouring church of St Saviour's, and is one of the many who remember the Rev Mr Barber with love and gratitude. Her infirmities prevent Mrs Johnson from attending church now, but she is happy in the possession of a little circle of dear friends who come often to see her and her husband and to listen to their stories of the early days. 'I'm very old you know, but I've much to be thankful for,' said the dear old lady as she parted with the visitor to whom she so kindly gave the story of her life in BC.

WmHx/Jun 11, 1909, 8 - Pioneer Women of BC - Mrs Henry Edward Wilby

There are many who will look tenderly upon the picture reproduced in this morning's paper. Mrs Wilby is a welcome visitor wherever there is grief or pain or want. Although she is 83 yrs of age her familiar figure is often seen on our busy sts going to and fro on kindly errands. Her earnest but unobtrusive piety makes itself felt by all who come in contact with her. It is to Mrs Wilby's unwillingness to refuse a request that the writer is indebted for the following reminiscences penned by her own hand. The firmness, neatness and legibility of the writing would put that of many a young woman to shame. In early days Mrs Wilby led a very busy life and it is only at a time when most women are content to rest that she has found leisure and opportunity to engage in work for those outside her family circle. Our city is indeed the better for her 50 yrs of residence here. The following is an account of the voyage and of the incidents that impressed themselves most strongly upon the young woman whose girlhood had been spent in very different scenes:

“Early in May, 1853, a party of 4 of us sailed from Liverpool on SS Africa on our way to CA. The accommodation and fare were splendid, and the vessel was not overcrowded with passengers, which made it pleasant, and we had a safe passage of 12 days to NY, which at that time was considered a good medium passage. When we arrived at NY we were disappointed to find that the steamer which was to leave next day for Aspinwall, and by which we hoped to have gone, had all the berths engaged with the exception of 1 or 2, and as we needed 4 we had to wait for the next boat, which would oblige us to remain in NY over a wk. We put up at the Astor House. We were very comfortable, and as we had friends in the city the time passed quite pleasantly until the time for the next boat to leave, when we sailed on Crescent City, and after a 9 days’ voyage reached Aspenwall. As it was late in the evening when we arrived we remained on board all night. In the morning we took the train as far as it went, which I think, was about 25 miles. We went very slowly, which gave us the opportunity of seeing the beautiful trees through which we passed. When we left the train we had to travel in a boat on a lake or river, I am not sure which, pulled by scantily clothed native, who took it very easy, not at all inclined to hurry, sometimes stopping to chat with their friends whom they saw on the banks of the river, so that it was getting nearly dark when we reached the place where we were to stop all night. I think this place was called Gorgona. The hotel certainly was a primitive affair; the boards forming the partition in our room were so shrunk that we could see into the next room.

In the morning we started on mules for the rest of our journey to Panama. The mules had men’s saddles, as they told us the roads were so bad it was safer for the women to ride on men’s saddles. However, my sister-in-law and I objected, and got them to change the saddles on our mules, as we assured them we were used to riding on horseback. Certainly the roads were bad indeed. I thought I had seen bad roads, but I had never seen anything to compare with these. In some places it was like going down steep stairs with a wall of rock on each side, so that if the mule fell there was no room to get away, but you would have to roll right down with the mule. Then there was what they called the Corduroy rd, which were trees cut down and laid across swamps! Some of the passengers rode over them, but we preferred walking, although by so doing our skirts got dreadfully muddy. The day we were on the train was a lovely one, but when we were on the mules we had some very heavy showers, after which the sun would come out very hot, and as we were wet through we felt like being in a steam bath. It was nearly dark when we reached Panama, soaking wet, and as our luggage had not come on as quickly as we did, we had to go to a ready made shop to get outfits, and we were disappointed to learn that the steamship company had altered the time of their boats sailing, and that instead of one a wk there would only be one in 2 wks, which would oblige us to remain more than a wk in Panama. This was a serious affair, for it is such an unhealthy place. Some of the passengers wrote a petition to the company requesting that they should start a steamer as soon as possible to take them on. I think all signed it, with the result that they got the steamer Panama ready, and we sailed on Sun afternoon for San Francisco, which place we reached in 16 days. On our way we called at Acapulco, where we left 2 bodies of passengers who had died on the way. There were 3 deaths during the voyage. The last was an old lady who was coming to her sons in San Francisco, who had the sorrow of finding her body when they came to meet her, she having died the night before reaching the city. Two of our party got the Panama fever, but were mercifully restored to health.

In those days when the steamers were often crowded, deaths were frequent from Panama fever. Travelling in those days was very different to what it is now. After living in CA nearly 6 yrs, I came to Victoria with my husband and 3 children on HBC steamer Otter. We were 10 days and 16 hrs coming.

We arrived here on May 30, 1859. It was at that time a very small place, with but few white inhabitants, for although there had been quite a rush of people from CA the yr before, they had most of them started off to the mines as soon as they arrived.

There were a great many Indians at that time living on the Reserve here and at Esquimalt, who used to go round selling oysters, clams, fish, etc, also buckets of potatoes which they had grown themselves, and which were of such a fine quality that some people bought them to take to CA for seed. Old women could be seen carrying big loads of tupsoo (a kind of wild pea) on their backs fastened to their heads by a strap. This 'tupsoo' teamsters and others who had horses were glad to buy for feed for them. Some of these old squaws had shells inserted above the chin below the lower lip; I suppose it was intended to improve their beauty. They also had shell ornaments attached to their ears; but I think these have all gone out of fashion. Many Indians from the N and from Qn Charlotte I used to come bringing skins, slate ornaments, baskets, moccasins, mats, etc, for sale. They sometimes had 'potlaches.' I never saw one, but heard that they used to have very exciting times at them. They would throw blankets into the bay, when there would be a scramble for them, and perhaps several would get hold of the same blanket, and each would hold on with such tenacity that they would have to cut the piece he held out of the blanket. That piece would be kept by the man who held it as a great trophy. When some Indian was dying at the Reserve it was their custom to meet and set up a doleful howl, and keep it up for a long time. It could be heard a great way off, and not at all appreciated by outsiders.

As well as I can remember there was but 1 hack and 1 buggy for hire when we arrived here, so people were very glad to avail themselves of express wagons (of which there were but few) to go to balls or parties.

It was quite a while after we came here that a regular daily express was run between Esquimalt and the city. Until then communication between the 2 places had been very uncertain, and the fare was $1 each way.

Vegetables were scarce and expensive, as most of them had to be imported from CA. The mail steamers at that time used to land passengers and freight at Esquimalt before going across the Sound, and call there on their way back to San Francisco for mails and passengers, so steamship days were always busy days in Esquimalt.

Jun 22, 1909, 2 - congratulations to Mrs James R Anderson on the 50th anniversary of her arrival in Victoria today. On Jun 22, 1859, then Miss Mary Harbell, landed at what was then a very primitive little town. Her 1st home was in a small cottage belonging to Mrs Moss next to the building now occupied by Dr O M Jones. In the autumn, on the arrival of other members of the family, all went to live in the house afterwards occupied by late Charles Vernon. Here, Oct 27, 1863, Dean Cridge married Mary Harbell to James Robert, eldest s/o Alexander Caulfield Anderson, and her sister to Murray Thain. There was a very merry time at the double wedding. A picture taken in her 17th yr still shows what a lovely bride Mr Anderson won.

The couple have lived ever since in Victoria. As Deputy Min of Agriculture, Mr Anderson is known all over the province, and esteemed wherever he is known. With her sister, Mrs Murray Thain, and Mrs Morrison, wife of late George R Morrison, she was among the 1st workers for the old Royal Hospital, and many residents of James Bay remember her for her kindly help in sickness or in sorrow. In later yrs the needs of the Seamens Institute have appealed to Mrs Anderson and none is more delighted at the prospect of a new and substantial sailors' home than she....

WmHx/JwHx/Bldg/Jul 11, 1909, 8 - photo/Pioneer Women of BC - Mrs Cecelia [Frank] Sylvester [nee Davies] Mrs Frank Sylvester, the subject of this sketch, started on the long journey that was to bring her to Victoria when she was but a babe. In the early days of CA her father, Mr J P Davies, left Aus with his wife and family and came to Monterey. As she left that city when but 2 yrs of age, Mrs

Sylvester does not, of course, remember anything about the place, but her mother had many stories to tell of the politeness of the Spaniards, and of the old world customs they still preserved.

Mr Davies moved to San Francisco in 1849, and there Cecilia Davies spent a very happy childhood. Among the many treasures Mrs Sylvester preserves is an invitation to attend the gold jubilee of the Garfield Primary school, formerly the Union Grammar school, where her name was found on the roll of 1854.

Just how it was found out that among the survivors of the class of that yr Cecelia was one, and that with a family of grownup men and women around her, and baby grandchildren of her own, she, as Mrs Frank Sylvester, lived in Victoria, was not learned.

Not less than the knowledge received in school, does Mrs Sylvester prize the art of fancy work and the remembrance of the playmates from whom she learned it. A tiny crochet basket is still kept to show what little girls of a past generation could do, and as a memento of pleasant hours spent in a dear friend's home.

The fear and awe with which the same little girl watched the terrible fire sweep through the streets of San Francisco in 1852 have not been forgotten in all the yrs that have gone by.

In 1863 Mr Davies came with his family to Victoria and established himself here as an auctioneer. The boat anchored at Esquimalt, and mounting the express wagon which then did duty for a stage, the travellers set out for Victoria. The girls were eager to see their new home, and time passed slowly as the vehicle jolted over the rough rd. At last a big brick bldg, the then new St Nicholas Hotel, was descried, and the children were told that they had reached Victoria. A very small city it was, with what looked to the San Francisco girls small shops along the rough new streets, and tiny cottages scattered here and there.

Mr Davies built 2 houses next the Wachter House, which occupied part of the site of the present Dominion Hotel. The house was then kept by Mrs Williams, who was widely known and greatly respected by the old-timers of Victoria and Vancouver I. In one of these the family lived, and the girls were soon very happy in their new home. They took part in all the gaieties of the time. There were balls at the naval yard, and return dances given by the citizens. Periodically, great parties were held at Government House, to which all the young people in the city were asked. Great were the preparations for these events, and long were they remembered. One of the most enjoyable of these merrymakings was the ball given by Mayor/Mrs Harris after the election of Mr Harris as 1st mayor of Victoria.

Not less delightful than the dances were the picnics at Cadboro Bay, Cordova Bay, or Esquimalt, where merry parties assembled in the long summer afternoons, driving in great wagons, or cantering across country on horseback.

Whether it is fancy, or not, Mrs Sylvester, like most of the old-timers, believes that in the old times there was more sociability and less conventionality than in the Victoria of today.

But all the time of Victoria girls was not spent in pleasure. There were many household tasks to perform, for servants were scarce, and all young women had to take their share of the work. The community, too, had duties for willing hands, as it has now. There were many Jews in Victoria in the early days, and it was not thought fitting that they should remain without a place of worship. Among those most active in collecting for the synagogue on Blanchard st was Miss Cecilia Davies, as a letter of thanks sent her on 22 Mar, 1865 remains to testify. Girlhood's day, with their many joys and few sorrows, passed away, and on 27 Jan, 1869, a quiet wedding was celebrated in the home of J P Davies Esq, and Mr/Mrs Frank Sylvester went to live in a new home on Pandora st. Mr Sylvester had lived in Victoria since 1858, as his many interesting reminiscences have told Victorians.

Last Christmas Mr Sylvester passed away suddenly, leaving in his own home memories of a loving and sympathetic nature and a keen intellect. He was never too busy to come to the assistance of the puzzled student or to supply the information which others had forgotten. Had he lived til 27 Jan, 1909, the couple would have seen the 40th anniversary of their wedding day.

A busy time for the young wife followed. Little children filled the home with glee, and kept their mother's days and nights full of new thoughts and interests. Still, her affection for her old home remained, and sadly still she tells the story of the marriage of her only sister, Elizabeth, to Mr Shultz. She was the 1st to be wedded in the synagogue and the 1st to be buried in the Jewish cemetery. During her short and happy married life she lived in a pretty home on Pandora st. It was while Mrs Sylvester lived in her 1st home, nearly opposite the First Presbyterian church, that the original bldg was burned down. No one who heard it will ever forget how the bell tolled till the church fell.

Mrs Sylvester, in speaking of the growth of the city, says that when, some yrs after her marriage, she moved to Frederick st, there was so much brush and undergrowth that timid women were afraid to cross from town alone. The sand pits were high hills and where today there are blocks of houses, orchards blossomed and bore fruits.

According to Mrs Sylvester's remembrance, the expenses of living were not greater in former days than now. Eggs and butter were supplied by the farmers near and were both cheaper than at present. At Fairfield and at Cadboro Bay were Chinese ranches and vegetables were fresh and good as well as cheap. The orchards were laden with fruit, and during the winter the boats from San Francisco brought in plentiful supplies. Meat and fish, so this housekeeper contends, were better then than now.

It was through property owned by Mr Davies Sr that the Oak Bay rd was cut, and Mrs Sylvester remembers the opening up of the 1st st in the municipality. Joshua Davies, so well known as an auctioneer and a public spirited citizen, then took charge of the estate.

Yet it must not be thought that either in feeling or in looks this pioneer is an old lady. Bright and active, she takes as much interest in life as many a younger woman, and looks more like an elder sister than the mother of her daughters. Many changes have taken place in the fortunes of Victorians; many friends have passed away, and others have left the city. But, surrounded by sons and daughters, their companions have been hers, and thus she has retained her youth. Her daughters are Mrs Manckus and Mrs A B Ellis, of Victoria; Mrs Campbell, of Cobalt; and Miss Louise and Miss Ruby, at home. Her sons are W C and Jesse Sylvester, of the well-known firm of Sylvester Bros. [Jewish Cemetery, Victoria]

WmHx/News/Jul 4, 1909 - photo It is more than 40 yrs since Mrs J B McDowell, of Glevvar, Blanchard st, left her home in Cork, Ire to begin the long voyage to the little city of Victoria. Yet through all the yrs that have intervened

she has cherished her love for the 'Green Isle' so dear to its sons and daughters.

Mrs McDowell's maiden name was Sarah Cassidy. Her father was a skillful contractor, and her girlhood's home was a comfortable and happy one, where the children enjoyed many advantages.

Among the recollections of Mrs McDowell are those of the summer trips to Queenstown, where mother and children spent their holidays, and where the father came twice a wk to enjoy the sea breezes with his loved one.

Not less distinctly does she recall Father Matthew and the work he did in changing the drinking habits of his countrymen. He lived almost across the street from the Cassidy home, and Mrs McDowell describes with loving reverence the form and features of the great reformer. She remembers the solemn ceremony, when kneeling, the penitents took the pledge. She can tell many stories of the happy change that was made in the lives and fortunes of those who kept their vow, and, alas, some sorrowful tales of others who, yielding to strong temptation, fell back into their old habits. But of the great good accomplished by Father Matthew, she speaks with enthusiasm.

In the yr 1849 J R McDowell, a young Dublin man, married Miss Cassidy, and they lived to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the day in Victoria nearly 10 yrs ago. This event took place in Nov, and in the following Feb her dearly loved husband passed away.

It was during the Cariboo excitement that Mr McDowell left his home to seek his fortune in the West. He arrived in Victoria in 1864, and his wife with her 5 children followed him the next yr. She, with many other passengers, among whom were late Mrs Austin and Mrs Burt and her mother, took passage in the good ship Kinnaird, Capt Sinclair. They came round the Horn and were 5 months, 11 days on the way.

Mr McDowell was a contractor, and the young wife was disappointed when instead of a rapidly growing city she found a quiet little town, where, few as the houses and stores were, they seemed more than sufficient for the small population. The family made their 1st home in Esquimalt in a small cottage. But the young Irishwoman was brave, and had the blithe spirit of her race. She set her hand to many an unaccustomed task, and learned to perform all well. Joy and grief were both known to her and her husband for 5 children were born to them in Victoria, and they had to mourn the death of 5. Among these was W J McDowell, long known and loved by the Colonist staff as 'Billy' a former able city editor, whose early death was lamented by all Victorians.

The survivors are Charles McDowell of Cowichan,

Messrs Thomas and Happy P McDowell, of Victoria, and Misses Mary, Kate at home.

Mrs McDowell has always been a sincere and devout Catholic. When she 1st came to Victoria she and her family attended what was then known as the French church on Pandora st, where St Louis College now stands. At that time a French sermon was preached for the benefit of those who spoke that language.

But loyal as she has always been to her own church Mrs McDowell has never let difference of creed prevent her from doing whatever lay in her power to make others happier. Many a stranger has been cheered by a hearty welcome in her hospitable home, and the sick and the sorrowful have been aided and comforted by her help and sympathy. Even yet, though shut out to some extent from the activities of life she shows a lively interest in the welfare of all whom she has ever known. She spends much of her time in reading so that she keeps in touch with what is going on in the great outside world.

Her life has been quiet and unobtrusive, but its influence has been more far-reaching than she has any idea of. It is to such women that Victoria owes its best title to be called a city of homes.

Died Jul 31, 1909 at Victoria, BC, Gavin Hamilton, a pioneer
among pioneers, and one of the notable factors of the early HBC days of BC, aged 74. He was born Jan 1, 1835 at Stromness, Orkney Islands, Sct.
He came to Victoria in Norman Morison, leaving Eng Aug 17,
1852, arriving at Victoria Jan, 1853. Many other pioneers of Victoria were passengers on the same vessel.

His 1st stn in the HBC service was Ft Langley, where he served under J M Yale. From the start Hamilton knew well how to win the heart of the natives with whom he came into contact, and even the worst among them took kindly to him. Yet he resigned in 1857, but was persuaded by Chief Trader Ogden to remain in the service and accompany him to Stewart Lk.

The late Mr Hamilton was later chief factor of HBC, in charge of New Caledonia,
which practically comprised all the country between the Fraser and the Skeena. Peter Ogden, one of the most autocratic and picturesque of all the potentates of HBC, thought highly of Hamilton.
He married the daughter of the factor. On Ogden's death he assumed charge of the post.
He left the company a few yrs ago on a pension, and afterwards engaged in business enterprises, some of which were not fortunate. He had remained hale and hearty until a little over a month ago, when he came to Victoria to undergo an operation, not very dangerous in itself. The operation was successfully performed, but complications ensued, and the end came yesterday.

Gavin Hamilton came to BC
in 1853, when a boy, being one of the band of pioneers on the ship Norman Morison. He had previously spent a yr at sea, having run away from his home in the Orkneys in consequence of a youthful adventure, which was characteristic of his whole subsequent career.

A ship had gone ashore on a dangerous reef in the Orkneys, and the occupants were in imminent danger of drowning when Gavin Hamilton, accompanied by 2 fishermen, went out in a tremendous sea and saved the lives of all on board. The 2 fishermen were awarded the Royal Humane Soc medal, but the boy who accompanied them, was not given any recognition, although it was mainly through his efforts that the shipwrecked company was saved.

His father was the local magistrate, upon whom devolved the duty of recommending the rescuers for the medal, and Gavin was so indignant at his father passing him over that he ran away from home and went to sea.

After his 1st voyage, however, his father secured him a clerkship in the HBC service, and all his life was bound up in the company's work. He was recognized by Indians and white men as one of the most fearless whites in the whole country.

There is an Indian living today up-country who tells the following story of Gavin Hamilton as a young man: He was ascending the Fraser with a party in a canoe, and when near Savonas decided to go onshore and shoot some wild ducks. The Indians urged him not to as the swamps were full of bear. His only served as a stimulus to Gavin, who landed, taking 1 Indian with him. He was armed with a double-barrelled fowling piece, and his Indian attendant was carrying a single-barrelled 16 bore muzzle-loader. They hadn't proceeded far before they saw 3 bears coming. They concealed themselves behind a clump of trees close to where the bears must pass if they continued. The Indian wanted to go back, but young Hamilton said: 'No; we will wait until they are close. I will shoot 2 of the bears with my gun, and you'll then hand me yours and I'll dispose of the 3rd one. All 3 weapons were loaded with ball, and when the bears struck within ranged Gavin killed the 1st and then another.

Unfortunately, he had left the biggest and most dangerous one until the last, and turning around to take his fowling piece from the Indian he found that he had started for the river, taking the gun with him. The bear was within 60 yds, and coming towards him. He emptied some powder by guess out of his horn into each barrel of the gun, beat the stock against a tree, forced the powder home, and dropped a loose ball down each barrel. The bear was within 20 yds of him, and nothing could have saved him had he not possessed an automatic capper, which used to be much in demand for celerity in getting muzzle loaders ready for action. As it was, he didn't have time to get the gun to his shoulder, but fired from the hip, killing the brute instantly, but so close was it to him that in its fall it knocked him down. For many yrs the Indians of the district spoke of the young clerk who killed the 3 bears.

After this adventure, Hamilton went to Ft Yale, where he distinguished himself by another adventure. Father Morice, who wrote the hx of BC some yrs ago, tells of it as follows:

'To show the wonderful fearlessness of the man, we may mention that in 1855 he saved from a burning storehouse 70 or 100 barrels of gunpowder with the assistance of men whom he rallied after the 1st shock of fright and buoyed up until the end of the terrible ordeal. For this feat he received the award of L100 from the company, and the men were also proportionately rewarded.

After leaving Ft Yale, Hamilton was transferred to Stewart's Lk where he at once became a great favorite with Peter Ogden, who ruled an immense district like an autocrat and patriarch. Life and death were in his hands and there was no law in the country except as he considered advisable. The Indians looked upon him as possessing almost supernatural power, and indeed, in those days a man required to be a strong man to occupy such a position. The outlying tribes of Indians are bloodthirsty and dangerous and it was only be reason of the personality of the leading men of HBC that they were kept in order. Life was full of hazard and in that atmosphere Gavin Hamilton seemed to thrive.

After a long service with Mr Ogden as factum and deputy for the factor, Hamilton married his daughter. Father Morice speaks of him as always having been a prime favorite with the Indians and of his wonderful success in dealing with them. Medicine had always been a hobby with him and there were few doctors who could let blood or set a broken limb better than he could.

The story is told that quite recently a half-breed had his leg broken on the Cariboo rd and there being no doctor within reach Mr Hamilton was sent for. The break was a bad one and while it was being attended to the patient made a terrible fuss. Mr Hamilton said to him: 'Now I've got no chloroform here, but if you don't remain still while I attend to you I'll have to hit you so hard that it will be as effective as an anaesthetic.'

The natives of the country had such a wholesome dread of him that the patient remained perfectly docile until the operation was complete.

A volume could be written about the adventures of Gavin Hamilton among the Indians. At the time of his death there was a bullet in his shoulder as a relic of some long gone fight, while his hands and arms were marked with knife cuts which he had experienced at various times in personal conflicts with the Indians.

The story of Hamilton's trip to the Babines at that time one of the fiercest and most dangerous tribes of Indians in BC, amongst whom he established trading posts and cultivated friendly relations is an epic in itself. Everyday he carried his life in his hands. But even these fierce and hostile Indians came to regard him as their friend.

When Ogden died Gavin Hamilton had so demonstrated his ability that he was promoted from a simple clerk in one bound to a factorship and entrusted with the entire direction of affairs over the immense country which had owned the sway of Ogden.

Gavin Hamilton came of a very excellent Scottish family, being directly descended from the Ayreshire branch of the great house of Hamilton. On his mother's side he was the nephew of Dr John Rae, the explorer, who achieved fame as the discoverer of the remains of the ill-fated Franklin expedition to the Arctic. He was also closely connected with the family of Lord Macaulay; and one of his cousins was Sir Robert Hamilton, well known as a prominent and successful Irish administrator during the troublous times which followed the Phoenix park murders. He was one of the best examples of the type of western pioneers now fast disappearing owing to the advance of civilization. For money he cared nothing. For personal integrity everything. The virtues he esteemed most highly were courage and hospitality. He was an autocrat, but a beneficent one, and the news of his death will be heard with deep regret in every quarter of the country tributary to the Cariboo rd. He leaves a widow and a large family, mostly settled in the northern interior of BC.

Messrs W C Hamilton of Esquimalt and Z M Hamilton of Victoria are cousins of late factor.

He was passionately fond of sailing and was the 1st man to demonstrate to the Indians the use of a sailboat on Stewart's Lk. They could not believe that by means of sails a boat could go otherwise than dead before the wind, and on him starting out for a sail and beating to windward they considered that he had received some supernatural gift to be able thus to defy the element.

He resigned from HBC some yrs ago and erected a sawmill and grist mill on the Cariboo rd, but his plant was destroyed by fire and his enterprises were not very successful. Of late yrs he had retired from active work, content to enjoy his pension, making his hdqts at Lac La Hache, but visiting relatives and friends in Victoria every once in a while. V/Aug 3, 1909, 3 - Sir - A few days since I saw an article in your columns referring to the loss of Birkenhead and the magnificent discipline shown by the British troops in face of certain death. Perhaps I can supplement the account by an interesting episode which is not generally known.

One of the officers named MacGregor had his young wife and little baby on board. When the order was given for the women and children to be put in the boats the wife refused to leave her husband's side but one of the sailors just as the boat was leaving shouted: 'Throw us the baby.'

The mother with true heroism gave up her baby. It was thrown safely into the arms of one of the boat's crew and was thus unconsciously rescued.

Now for the segue.

Many yrs after this child became governor of one of the W Indian Islands and one day a bottle was brought to him which had been picked up from the sea. Judge of his feelings when he found it contained a letter written by his father and mother from the deck of that ill-fated ship 30 yrs before, breathing the most absolute Christian fortitude and confidence in God even in that dread hr.

The son was Rob Roy MacGregor, the inventor of the canoe which bears his name and in which he traveled many thousands of miles. He is also well known in another sphere as one of the founders of the Open Air Mission which has been the means of blessing to thousands in the Old Country. Probably most of us will see a connection between the bravery manifested by the troops on that awful occasion and the example of the young officer in charge. Also we may judge of the life inspiration given to the son to live worthily of such a father and mother.

It only remains for me to add that I have seen the original letter and heard the story as I have related it from the wdw/o 'Rob Roy' MacGregor. Signed A T Frampton.

V/Marine/Aug 5, 1909, 7 - Capt Henry Glide, of Victoria, BC, yesterday celebrated the 56th anniversary of his landing at Victoria, and was one of the 1st mariners actively identified with this port, and during his sea career here performed a feat which will long be remembered in the annals of local seamanship. He shares with Capt Vancouver, the discoverer of this island, the distinction of having sailed a square-rigged vessel from Victoria up through the Georgia Straits and round the N end of the island, voyaging through the tortuous channels and skirting the numerous islands without meeting with an accident.

Hale and hearty, although 75, Capt Glide has had a checkered career since he 1st landed in Victoria in 1853. Leaving London in Dec, 1852, he shipped as a seaman aboard HBC's steamer Otter, which carried a crew of 13. The vessel arrived here on Aug 4, 1853, and seaman Glide was the 1st man ashore with a hawser, on the rocks where the old custom house was situated. Pursuing his sea career for some yrs after landing here in 1857, he was made Capt, being passed aboard HMS Satellite, which at that time was lying at Esquimalt. The following yr he was made the 1st pilot of Victoria, Esquimalt, and the adjacent ports. Soon afterwards he was placed in command of the 1st vessel built for HBC at this port. This vessel was a schooner, and was engaged in the Coast coal carrying trade. In 1869 Capt Glide threw up the sea career and for some time was engaged in a livery stable. Afterwards for a # of yrs he was employed in HBC's store, and since then he has done various jobs round the city.

Among interesting mementoes which Capt Glide has in his possession are some files of the 1st issue of the Placer Times, printed at Sacramento, CA in Apr, May and Jun, 1849. He also possesses a copy of a Honolulu paper printed in Kanaka, and dating as far back as 1859. This was one of the 1st papers printed in the Hawaiian Isles. [H 076 W 21A]

Aug 7, 1909 - The united forces of the Lafalot and Ugo-Igo camps went to the Chinese cemetery last night to try and see the ghost that Mr Hardy was supposed to see the night before. As they sat on the altar at the mysterious hr what should appear but a 4-legged ghost in the shape of a white horse. Whether it ascended and flew over the Straits or not they did not wait to see, but the inquisitive campers did the ½ mile in remarkably short time.

Marine/Died Aug 8, 1909 at Vancouver, BC, Capt John Ormiston Townsend, aged 47, n/o Halifax, NS, the well known local shipmaster, for many yrs in command of steamer Tees and other CPR steamers on the WCVI [appendicitis]. Mrs Townsend and his daughter Orma were with him when the end came.

Capt Townsend was one of the most popular of the local shipping men and leaves a host of friends to whom the news of his passing will come as a sad shock. He came to Victoria from NS, as many other local shipping men came, as a young man, to engage in sealing, and he took his Master's papers here. He served for a time on DGS Quadra, and then as quartermaster of tug Lorne. Promotion followed him quickly and soon after going into CPN Co's service he was chief officer with Capt Hughes on the west coast route about 12 yrs ago, and has had a splendid record in the company's service, no accident, even of a slight nature, being experienced by him.

The dead shipmaster participated in many rescues on the west coast and numbers of vessels and numerous sailors were succoured by him and those with him on Willapa, Queen City and later Tees on the west coast route. He took part in several notable salvage cases off the VI coast, the last being when he and Capt Gillam, now master of Tees, went to the rescue of the shipwrecked crew of schooner Soquel, lost on Seabird rocks some months ago.

The remains of late Capt Townsend were brought from Vancouver by steamer Charmer on Sun, the steamer voyaging across the Gulf with her flags half-masted, and all the CPR steamers in port have lowered their flags in honor of the memory of the dead captain. He was a member of the Masonic order, and the local lodges will attend the funeral. [ph/Aug 10, 3 -] R 077 E R

Legal/Died Aug 14, 1909 at Victoria, BC, Alan Graham, 62, n/o Egremont, Cumberland, England, a pioneer of the Omineca district, and an oldtimer of Victoria. In his native town deceased learned the grocery business. Some 40 years ago he came to Canada, and in the Omineca gold rush days he went and started a trading store. Through hardships, and often peril he won a place of high character in the respect of the hundreds of miners who followed the lure of the gold to northern BC. As private secretary to ex-Judge O'Reilly he performed many onerous duties, and later as a JP in that district he won fame as a lawgiver.
